Robinson Jolts Opposition

Senator Spikes Argument as to National Safety in Radio Talk

Speaks in Grange Series, Devoted to Exposition of Treaty Terms

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, who helped negotiate the naval treaty, said today it was "difficult to comprehend" the arguments of the pact's opponents that involves a sacrifice of American safety.

Senator Johnson, who was one of the delegates to the London conference, followed a radio address by leaders of the National Grange, continuing the series of talks by sponsors and foes of the treaty that has kept the issue before the public while it awaits action in the Senate.

NAVAL STRENGTH

The address was confined almost entirely to an exposition of the treaty, in the course of which he took the various cate gories of ships, explaining the strength of the three signatory nations as provided by the treaty.

Senator Johnson, over the cruiser question, said: "Narrows itself down to whether to construct eight-inch guns, or replace six-inch gun turrets on three ships under the London proposal and an additional 8000-ton six-inch cruiser authorized by Congress.

It has been suggested that Congress authorize the President to lay down the cruiser, which gives us parity with Japan.

PROHIBITION NEWS TO HIM

West Virginia "Hill Billy" Not of Beverly Clan; Admits Violation

CLARKSBURG (W. Va.) June 21. (Exclusive)—Riding on his first train and hearing the first radio program in his life last night, when he went to Elkins to answer a prohibition law violation in Federal court, Mack Straw Derman of Mathias, the mountainous section of Hardy county, told the court he never heard of the prohibition law before today.

Confessing a violation, he was fined $100. It was the first time he was ever out of Hardy county.

MIDWEST'S MERCURY UP TO CENTURY

Two Deaths Toll of 100 Degree Temperatures in Central Plains States

KANSAS CITY, June 21. (AP)—A heat wave carried the mercury over the 100-deg. mark in Western Kansas today and other parts of the Southwest sweltered in abnormal temperatures.

Apparently centering in Kansas, the heat drove the thermometer to 102 deg. in Salina, 100 deg. in Dodge City and to record highs for the date in Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas.

In Kansas City a mark of 98 deg. was set. Topeka, Kan., reported 96 deg.

In Oklahoma the mercury hovered in the lower 90s.

The death of Mrs. E. H. Dietrich, 75 years of age, was attributed to the heat in Wichita, Kan., where the official maximum was 94 deg.

ONE DEATH TOLL OF OMAHA HEAT

OMAHA, June 21. (AP)—Omaha sweltered today under a blazing sun that sent the mercury to 96 and took the life of Mrs. Catherine McCabe, 80 years of age. Mrs. McCabe, who collapsed on the street while en route home, was dead when doctors arrived. The temperature at Lincoln, Neb., was 101.

GLIDER PILOT KILLED

DOERBERG (Germany) June 21. (AP)—Ernst Ebe, German glider pilot, was killed while making a flight today. His machine fell from a height of 200 feet.

BYRD HAILED IN VIRGINIA

Thousands Cheer Homecoming

Richmond Streets Thronged as Explorer Rides Triumphant

Sword of Honor Wrought in Gold Gift of Native State

Rear-Admiral Byrd, South Pole explorer, just back in America from his two-year trip, will be on the air tomorrow between 5 and 6 p.m. over KHJ, Los Angeles.

At this time the famous explorer will be hooked up with sixty-two stations on a nation-wide network and will have an available audience of 50,000,000 people. The address is directly for the children of America and he will give his first detailed account of his South Pole air explorations.

Balchen, pilot of Byrd's plane; Paul Siple, the expedition's Boy Scout, and other members of the organization will also speak.

RICHMOND (Va.) June 21. (AP)—"Dick" Byrd came back to Old Virginia today to receive the welcome of a conquering hero and a native son.

Thousands of Virginians, their pulses quickened with the peculiar pride of fellow-citizens, cheered and shouted themselves hoarse as the man who conquered the icy coldness of the polar skies stepped upon the soil of his native State. Through solid walls of eager friends and citizens Rear-Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd rode in triumph and acknowledged the tumultuous greeting with salutes and modest bows. Guns of the Richmond howitzers boomed an admiral's salute.

WELCOMED BY GOVERNOR

"It was wonderful, and it's great to be back in Virginia," Admiral Byrd said, as he arrived at the Executive Mansion for an official reception by Gov. Pollard.

The entrance of the admiral into the concourse at the Broad-street station was the signal for an outburst of cheering that continued in unbroken din until he passed out to a waiting automobile where other thousands, unable to enter the station, took up the cheering. Through

ENGINEER KILLED IN SMASH-UP

Four Others Injured as Chesapeake and Ohio Train Goes Off Track

CHARLESTON (W. Va.) June 21. The engineer was killed and four other persons injured, two of them seriously, in the derailment tonight of the Sportsman, westbound passenger train of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, at Hawks Nest, sixty miles from here.

Homer E. Haskell, Huntington, W. Va., engineer of the train, met death in his engine as it plunged from the rails.

The fireman, Hoe Anderson, also of Huntington, was badly burned.

The others injured are W. Clements, Richmond, Va., express messenger, badly burned; Sherman Bostic, Hinton, W. Va., baggage man, and Mary Burke, Negress, Clinton Forge, Va., minor injuries.

Cause of the derailment is undetermined.

In addition to the engine, a combination coach, a passenger coach and an express car were derailed. The train consisted also of another passenger coach, three sleeping cars and a diner which remained on the tracks.

CLOUDBURST HITS TUCSON OUTSKIRTS

Thousands of Dollars In Damages Done by Freak Rain With High Wind

TUCSON (Ariz.) June 21. (AP)—A cloudburst, accompanied by a seventy-two-mile wind, struck the outskirts of Tucson tonight lifting roofs and destroying small buildings at the Municipal Airport, seemingly in the center of the storm. No one was injured.

More than two inches of rain fell in less than an hour. The government maintains a two-inch rain gauge at the airport and the gauge ran over, making it impossible to determine the exact amount of rainfall.

It did not even sprinkle in downtown Tucson three miles from the path of the storm.

Property damage amounted to several thousand dollars, but no accurate estimate could be made today on account of the scene being flooded with water.

The cloudburst seems to have struck an area about five miles wide, the inner edge three miles from the city.

Nation Declared in Better Shape Than Others

DENVER, June 21. (AP)—The United States is comparatively in better economic condition than any other country in the world, Samuel R. McKelvie, former Governor of Nebraska and chairman of the federal Farm Board, told newspaper men today.

All countries are undergoing an economic readjustment, following war conditions, said Mr. McKelvie. "We are in the midst of low prices for all basic commodities and must learn to adjust our business to a lower level of costs and a new level of profits.

"Our farmers, as a general rule, already have done so because their deflation started some years ago. Other branches of business must follow suit. Conditions are improving in industrial centers and will continue to do so possibly faster than we imagine."

Stowaway Bride Shipped Back to Home in Belgium

GALVESTON (Tex.) June 21. (AP) Her romance balked by deportation, Fatma Petrowitz, 18 years of age, was returning today to Antwerp, the port from which she crossed the ocean as a stowaway to marry her lover, Alexander De Fieron.

De Fieron attempted to remain with his bride by the same method she employed in reaching him, but was discovered hiding aboard the Shipping Board vessel Waban, upon which she was being deported.

In jail much of the time since her arrival here May 11, the girl eluded immigration authorities long enough to marry her lover two weeks ago.

Gasoline Prices in New Tumble

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—Retail gasoline prices took another tumble in the Bay district today. Major-brand stations dropped to 14 or 15 cents at noon, following the lead of independents which had cut the 17-cent price maintained for the last week. Standard stations were the only ones in the East Bay that did not cut.

According to major oil company officials, the dealers have taken the initiative in the new price war. The tank wagon price has not changed again, they said.

AIR CRASH PAYMENT BILL PASSES HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—The Senate bill to authorize payment of $42,377 to the Maddux Air Lines, Inc., of Los Angeles, as reimbursement for the destruction of one of its planes in a collision with an army plane near San Diego in April, 1929, was passed today by the House and sent to the President.

Mrs. Hoge said he was cleaning a .45-caliber pistol which dropped to the floor and discharged.

LIQUOR TAX JAILS IDAHO COLLECTORS

Wallace Officials Join Mullen's Because of Levy for Cities' Benefit

COEUR D'ALENE (Idaho) June 21. (AP)—The thirty-two defendants in the Wallace "rum rebellion" case were convicted today by a Federal jury, marking virtually a clean sweep in the government's crusade against North Idaho whisky selling.

The principal defendants were Mayor Herman J. Rossi, former Mayor W. H. Herrick, and Chief of Police W. J. Bailey.

The Wallace men were accused of conspiring against the dry laws by levying on liquor dealers, the money going into the city treasury for use in building bridges, paving streets and providing school funds. Twenty of the defendants admitted that "donations" were made and defense counsel argued sentiment of the city was for a "wide open" regime and inasmuch as no personal graft was involved, it was proper for liquor and vice to contribute "to the betterment of the city."

Two score Mullan men were convicted recently of conspiring to collect from saloons, the money supporting the town and paying the city police force. In each case, the government charges, police officials saw to it money was paid into the treasury.

Student's Body Found in Lake

BUFFALO (N. Y.) June 21. (AP)—The body of Jeremiah Sullivan, Canisius College graduate, who disappeared mysteriously last winter, was on its way to Buffalo today from Picton, Ont., where it was found floating in Lake Ontario.

Meanwhile Federal authorities renewed investigations into rum-smuggling activities in Western New York which were started after young Sullivan's disappearance. Their inquiry previously had developed, they said, Sullivan had been employed in smuggling liquor across the Niagara River here just before he disappeared.

TARIFF CUT PLEA MADE

France to Make Global Claim

Relationship Dependent on Reciprocity, View Taken by Minister Flandin

Mexico Foreign Office Asks Growers to Look Around for New Markets

PARIS, June 21. (AP)—A global claim for reduction of the new United States tariff rates on a certain number of French products after careful investigation is the French government aim made known in a formal interview with the press today by Pierre Etienne Flandin, Minister of Commerce.

The official stated that in case the Tariff Commission should prove unable to give satisfaction to the demands of France it will be necessary to "face the situation." He added significantly, "normal relations between the United States and France can be guaranteed only by strict reciprocity."

M. Flandin said he believed such modifications might be obtained from the Tariff Commission. "Otherwise," he said, "we will be obliged to deal with the situation."

INCREASES MADE

"It is incontestable that the Hawley-Smoot tariff involves considerable increases on a number of products," he said. "Considered at the beginning as a measure for the protection of the farmer, the project was extended notably to cover the industrial interests."

"It is only just to recognize," the Minister added, "that we have obtained appreciable satisfaction on some points during a long discussion of the bill. For instance, Congress renounced proposed increases on lace from 90 to 300 per cent ad valorem and we thus safeguarded our industries in Calais and Caudry. But on certain other points our protests were unavailing."

SHRINKAGE CITED

He pointed out a growing shrinkage in French trade with the United States, stating that the balance in favor of the United States which amounted to 2,000,000,000 francs in 1928 had increased to 3,000,000,000 in 1929, and that this year the first three months' business showed a balance unfavorable to France at a rate of 5,200,000,000 francs.

"Of course," Mr. Flandin continued, "this unfavorable balance is offset in a certain measure by invisible exports." The Minister qualified the statement by saying, "but purchases made in France by tourists, even in normal times, are insufficient to make up such a deficit and besides, it is reasonable to take into account that the tourist movement has singularly slowed up in France.

"We must not overlook on the debit side of our account with the United States sums which we are obliged to pay on war debts which amount to an average of $30,000,000 a year."

PLAN DEMAND

The Minister said his office is working closely in co-operation with the French commercial attache in New York scrutinizing the new tariffs comparing them with former rates and with French duties and consulting all economic associations interested in the question.

Minister Flandin said a global demand will be made to the American government.

"As soon as the results of these examinations and consultations are in hand," M. Flandin said, "they will be transmitted to President Hoover. Two eventualities are to be considered.

PROBLEM PRESENTED

"The American authorities will either give us satisfaction or refuse. If we obtain modification of certain tariffs we shall have no reason to seek to change our relations with the great country which rendered us such eminent service during the war.

"We hope America's sense of justice and traditional comprehension of business will bring to it a reasonable appreciation of the situation. Nevertheless, if the Tariff Commission should not take our

Clash Puts 350 in Hospital

Women Trampled Under Horses' Hoofs as Police Make Savage Attack

Refusal of Marchers to Fight Prevents Scene from Being Shambles

[Copyright, 1930, by Chicago Tribune.]

BOMBAY, June 21. (Exclusive) More than 300 Nationalists were wounded and 350 were sent to the hospital, including ten women, during a series of police charges on the esplanade made this morning on an attempted parade in review before Pandit Motilal Nehru, acting president of the Nationalist Congress. The savagery of the police attack exceeded any since the Nationalist movement developed, while the populace was further inflamed by the presence of troops near by ready to respond to a police call.

Only the disciplined refusal of the Nationalists to attempt violence averted what is generally believed would have been a slaughter since the authorities were prepared for any eventualities.

What reaction is to follow is difficult to forecast, although within an hour after the trouble all Indian shops were closed and a month's cessation of business activities is possible. Witnesses say that the brutalities of the police equaled that of the Wadala and Dharsana raids a month ago, the anniversary of which was observed in many parts of India today.

The clash today occurred through the defiance of the magistrate's order forbidding the use of the esplanade for the review. The police and troops were massed at sunrise, while the Nationalists began assembling before 7 o'clock for the rally under the direction of the war council. Pandit Nehru and other members of the congress witnessed the attack from a driveway. The government officials are determined to brook no further defiance of the laws following today's incident which will possibly bring the campaign to a crisis. The congress approved today's rally after knowing of the court's edict.

TRAMPLED BY HORSES

At about 7:45 o'clock captains and volunteers from all parts of Bombay entered the esplanade. This was a signal for the police charge which was personally directed by Commissioner Healey. Three deputies and 500 police, some mounted, took part in the charges. When the volunteers started to enter the esplanade, the police charged, using lathis, while many fell under the horses' hoofs.

After two more charges the Esplanade was cleared. The Nationalists attempted to parade but were dispersed. The congress officials are holding a conference tonight and are determined to carry on the program that Mahatma Gandhi outlined.

A striking feature of today's defiance of the law was the thorough preparation of the congress authorities for what occurred. They had stretcher bearers and other hospital equipment including surgeons and nurses on the scene, and first aid was followed by the rapid removal of the victims to the hospitals.

NATIVE SHOPS CLOSED

Within an hour after the incident hundreds of native shops throughout the city were closed. Numerous foreign businesses were closed owing to the desertion of the Indian staffs.

The streets are filled tonight with kaddar-clad natives, while the congress house and in other quarters are the scenes of Nationalist meetings. They are determined to carry on the campaign with greater vigor. Speakers at each meeting tonight counseled strict obedience and nonviolence, telling the people not to yield before the troops or police. They asserted that their comrades throughout India are certain to give moral support by similar demonstrations until London listens to their voices.

President Nehru and other leaders will now go to Ahmedabad

SIX MILLIONS TEXAS COUNT

Lone Star State Shows Great Lead in Decade With Increase of 25 Per Cent Indicated

DALLAS (Tex.) June 21. (AP)—A Texas population of just less than 6,000,000 was the prospect tonight when the Associated Press compiled census returns from 225 of the 254 counties.

The 225 counties which have completed their returns show 5,597,457 residents, as against a total for Texas of 4,963,228 in the 1920 census. The ten-year increase of the counties was slightly more than 25 per cent.

If the same percentage of increase is shown by the twenty-nine missing counties the State's population will be approximately 5,675,000.

West Texas and the Rio Grande Valley revealed the greatest population increases. The growth of cities was more pronounced than that of counties.

Harris county, boasting Houston, the largest city in the State, had a greater numerical increase than any other county. The Harris county figure leaped 161,133 to 347,800. Harris passed Dallas as largest county in Texas in population.

UTAH POPULATION PASSES HALF-MILLION

SALT LAKE CITY, June 21. (AP) Census figures compiled by the Associated Press today listed the population of Utah over the half-million mark, the count being 530,-640, as compared with 449,396 in 1920, a gain of 11.88 per cent.

MILLION AND HALF FOR WASHINGTON

SEATTLE, June 21. (AP)—First official census figures give Washington a population of 1,357,540, a gain of 200,919 over the total of 1,356,621 in 1920, or 14.73 per cent. County totals, as received up to today by the Associated Press, still are subject to slight increases.

Mother Earth Enjoying Jig

GUATEMALA CITY, June 21. (AP) Mother Earth is dancing a prolonged jig in Santa Rosa Province.

The mountainous country has been shaking slightly at rather frequent intervals for the last ten days.

TREATY PERIL ARGUMENT ANSWERED BY ROBINSON

Arkansas Senator Deals Telling Blow to Opposition by Plain Talk on Pact Provisions

tons in favor of the latter. He termed this difference trivial in view of America's advantage in eight-inch gun cruisers.

The series of radio addresses was begun by Secretary Stimson, who headed the delegation at London. Senator Johnson, Republican, California, an opponent of the pact, spoke in reply. Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, then spoke in defense of the treaty and last night Johnson replied to him.

TEXT OF ADDRESS

The text of Senator Robinson's address follows:

Apparently some who are prominent in public and private affairs believe that the soundest and safest course for the United States to pursue is to maintain such armaments as its geographical and political circumstances seem to require, with little regard for the policies of other nations respecting their military and naval forces.

Believing that public opinion in this country generally approves of fair treaties for limitation and reduction, it is assumed for the purposes of this address that the vital issues raised by the London treaty involve the relations which the treaty contemplates for the naval armaments of the United States, Great Britain and Japan, rather than absolute needs.

In order to form a correct conclusion as to whether the interests of the United States are properly safeguarded by the treaty, it is necessary to compare the fleets of the powers signatory at the time of the conference with the armaments which the treaty authorizes. It appears to me unnecessary to argue that the controlling consideration is the relative rather than the absolute strengths of the armaments of the three principal naval powers.

SHIP CATEGORIES

My hearers already understand that combat vessels are divided into five categories: Capital ships, aircraft carriers, cruisers, submarines and destroyers. The treaty recognizes two subclasses in the cruiser category based on the difference in caliber of guns carried, the subcategories being ships mounting six-inch guns and those carrying eight-inch guns.

The Washington conference limited tonnages in capital ships and aircraft carriers only. It failed to restrict the other classes, save as to the maximum gun caliber (eight-inch) and unit tonnage of cruisers (10,000 tons) and left the nations free to build submarines, destroyers and cruisers without other restrictions.

Following the Washington conference of 1922 Great Britain and Japan carried forward large construction programs in all auxiliary craft so that when the London conference assembled the United States Navy was notably inferior to the navies of Great Britain and Japan with respect to cruisers.

DESTROYER SITUATION

In destroyers our tonnage material exceeded that of either of the other powers, but practically all of it was constructed hastily and defectively during the war. No destroyers have been laid down by the United States within the last ten years, while both Japan and Great Britain have had steady continuing programs, with the result that the larger proportion of their destroyer tonnage is new and superior compared to our own.

The treaty limits the United States and Great Britain each to 150,000 and Japan to 105,500 tons. The relation established for the three navies in this category is generally accepted as adequate for the requirements of the United States.

The proposal by the United States and Great Britain to abolish submarines was not incorporated in the treaty because France and Japan refused to approve or consent to it.

DISADVANTAGE CITED

Our delegates entered the conference at a disadvantage with respect to subsea craft. We had submarines built, building and appropriated for December 31, 1929, totaling 69,510 tons, while Japan had 77,942. Japan entered the conference with a ratio in her favor as compared with the United States of 10 to 12.

Under the treaty the United States, Great Britain and Japan receive parity at 52,700 tons.

Everyone knows that the ships already built or in construction count heavily in a conference for limitation. It can hardly be expected that one nation will sacrifice tonnage already built in order to accept a ratio greatly inferior. The United States did not desire to increase its tonnage in submarines. On the contrary, it was regarded more desirable to obtain a substantial reduction on the part of Japan, and this was accomplished from 78,000 tons, approximately, to 52,700.

It would seem that the arrangement for the United States with respect to submarines should be regarded as satisfactory in view of the tonnage possessed by Japan at the time the conference met. Moreover, our submarines are old, while those of Japan are relatively new.

CAPITAL SHIPS

Under the Washington conference the United States had 70,000 tons less in capital ships than Great Britain. If the scrapping program contemplated by the treaty is carried out, that disparity will be almost completely removed and if the modernization program is effected (which Great Britain now recognizes our right to make) the United States will have a slight superiority in tonnage over the former in capital ships. In addition the five ships which Britain will scrap are comparatively new and superior to the three which we will scrap under the treaty.

It is with respect to cruisers that the principal question to the treaty arises. Members of the general board and others maintain that the division of cruisers into two subcategories, and the acceptance of only eighteen eight-inch cruisers for the United States to fifteen for Great Britain, particularly in view of the fact that two of ours are not to be completed during the life of the treaty) constitute a sacrifice of the safety of the United States and such disparity between Great Britain and our country in cruisers as requires the rejection of the treaty.

In view of the pertinent circumstances relating to this contention, some of which are now to be referred to, it is difficult to comprehend such an argument.

CRUISER SITUATION

It should be remembered that when the conference met Great Britain had four times and Japan two times the tonnage of the United States in cruisers actually in commission.

In eight-inch cruisers built the United States had two, Great Britain fifteen and Japan eight. In eight-inch cruisers under construction the United States had eleven, Great Britain four and Japan four. With respect to the six-inch subcategory the United States had built ten, Great Britain thirty-nine and Japan twenty-one with tonnages 70,500, 177,691 and 98,415, respectively. None of the three powers had any tonnage of this subclass in construction. From a position of inferiority the United States passes during the life of the treaty to a place of marked superiority in the eight-inch cruiser subclass. She will have fifteen completed and three in process of construction, while Great Britain will have fifteen and Japan twelve. The tonnages authorized will be for the United States, 180,000, for Great Britain, 146,800, for Japan, 108,400. The ratio will be ten for the United States and Japan six, respecting eight-inch cruisers.

SIX-INCH GUN SHIPS

In six-inch cruisers the comparison is as follows: Under the treaty the United States may have 143,500 tons, Great Britain, 192,200, and Japan, 100,450 tons. Our government will have a superiority of 33,300 tons over Great Britain in eight-inch cruisers and that government will have a superiority over ours of 48,700 tons in six-inch cruisers.

The net difference in cruiser tonnage to be possessed by Great Britain and the United States, therefore, will be 15,500 in favor of Great Britain. Considering the fact that the treaty gives us the advantage already mentioned in eight-inch cruisers this difference is trivial.

Stated in another way, if the general board's minimum proposal should be reflected in the treaty, Great Britain would have had a total cruiser tonnage of 339,000, while the United States would have had 315,000; and to offset this difference of 24,000 tons, the United States would have had three more eight-inch-gun cruisers than the treaty gives her but approximately 8500 tons less in total cruiser tonnage than under the treaty.

CHOICE SET FORTH

The issue thus narrows itself down to the choice between eight-inch as against six-inch-gun armament on three ships under the general board's proposal and an additional 8500-ton six-inch cruiser under the treaty.

It is respectfully suggested that the choice as far as a combat power is concerned is in favor of the treaty arrangement which gives us the additional ship.

Taking into consideration the fact that the United States and Great Britain are each at liberty to build the other's program in cruisers, and the narrow difference in total tonnage to which reference has been made, it is clear that in view of the disadvantage under which the United States entered the conference the treaty arrangement is desirable and effective from every standpoint which an American can occupy.

The fact that six-inch and eight-inch cruisers are adapted to different needs constitutes the basis for division of cruisers into subcategories which the treaty recognizes. The United States can substitute 45,500 tons of six-inch for 33,500 tons of eight-inch cruisers if it so desires, making our total cruiser tonnage exactly that of Great Britain.

The argument advanced by some high authorities that eight-inch gun cruisers are so much more desirable for the uses of the United States than six-inch cruisers loses the greater part of its force when it is recalled that under the treaty the cruising radius of the latter may equal that of the former and that six-inch guns for the United States presumably will carry as far and hit as hard as they will for other powers.

NIPPON PRINCE CITES GREAT PEACE FACTOR

VICTORIA (B. C.) June 21. (AP)—While declining to discuss the controversy between the government and the navy in Japan over the London naval treaty, Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, president of the Japanese house of Peers, who arrived here today, said "world peace never can be assailed with the United States, Great Britain and Japan standing together."

"Japan desires to be friendly with other countries and always has been to the forefront in her endeavors to bring about international amity," said the descendant of the former Shoguns of Japan after his arrival on the liner Empress of Russia.

FEARS ON SECURITY SHOWN GROUNDLESS

Senator Robinson

BYRD GREETED IN HOME STATE

the tumult could be heard the cry, "Hello Dick" as some personal friends sought to break through the cheering with a personal greeting.

The solid phalanx started as the admiral, bronzed and smiling, waved a greeting to the crowd. Along streets gay with flags, streamers and bunting the admiral's automobile wound its way to Capitol Square and the Executive Mansion. Here he passed into the historic building to pay his compliments to the Governor and receive an official welcome from the State and city.

With the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, a famous regiment and his escort in New York, leading the way, Admiral Byrd once more rode through the milling thousands to lay a wreath on the monument of another great Virginian and explorer, Matthew Fontane Maury, "pathfinder of the seas." Here he reviewed his escort—Virginians all—while thousands of admirers joined in the greatest ovation ever given a son of the Old Dominion.

Tired but happy, the admiral retired after the ceremony to "Larburnum," home of John Stewart Bryan, who was also his host after his North Pole flight, for a dinner with his immediate family, before accepting a sword of honor, wrought in gold and silver, as the gift of his native State.

The man who thrilled the world with his daring, courage and resource, was himself thrilled by the welcome he received. With him were his mother, Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd; his wife, Mrs. Marie Byrd; Mrs. Harry Flood Byrd, and his brothers, Harry and Tom.

Warm sunshine flooded the broad stretches of Monument avenue, hedged by green trees, as the conqueror of polar wastes and the North Atlantic rode down the street dotted with bronze figures of other famous Virginians on his way to the Maury monument.

OCEAN DEEP FOUND IN SOUTH PACIFIC

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—Questions of scientists on the details of a vast deep in the Pacific, discovered by hydrographers with Rear-Admiral Byrd, were left unanswered today by the departure of the explorer for Richmond.

Accepting the special gold medal of the National Geographic Society from President Hoover, he announced a fissure 25,000 feet deep had been found below the waves between Little America and New Zealand.

He did not identify the site closely and scientists were unable to learn its exfent.

The deep was discovered by means of an echo-sounding device, known as the super-sonic depth finder, by means of which the distance of the ocean floor from the surface is calculated by the time it takes a sound to travel from the ship to the bottom and back again.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU FOR BYRD'S AIDES OPENED

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Some members of the Byrd Antarctic expedition are looking for jobs. An employment bureau was opened for them today at a midtown hotel.

Among them are aviation mechanics, machinists, carpenters and surveyors. Most of them served the expedition voluntarily or at minimum salaries and jobs they left to go exploring are now filled by others.

MADMAN HURLS FIVE TO DEATH

Family Thrown from Cliff in Orgy of Murder

Throng Sees Mother and Children Lose Lives

Slayer Plunges to His Doom After Foiling Capture

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) June 21. (Exclusive)—A dramatic murder orgy, wherein a demented war veteran just escaped from a New York base hospital hurled his wife and four little children to death, then committed suicide in view of hundreds of horrified onlookers, was staged here today on the summit of historic West Rock.

For nearly three hours the carnival of death continued, with various persons firing futile fusillades of shots at the madman as he hurled first his wife and then his children over the brink of the towering rock. Police and firemen raced up to halt him, and panic spread among the mothers of the section.

At 10 a.m., the veteran, later identified as Raymond Spang, 35 years of age, and his family appeared on the summit, having driven there by a winding road presumably to enjoy the view. A few minutes later, pedestrians in the West Rock road, 480 feet below, saw Mrs. Spang, 33 years of age, run to the edge of the precipice which forms the southern side of the cliff and stand there, wringing her hands and screaming. Spang rushed up behind, kicked her and she plunged forward head foremost, striking on a ledge 200 feet below.

CRIES BRING THRONG

Cries of alarm raised by those witnessing this murder brought hundreds into the road, but the maniac, unmindful of their shouts to him, soon dragged Helen, his 12-year-old daughter, up to the brink of the cliff. He lifted her above his head and held her there, screaming and kicking, for nearly three minutes. Then he hurled her over.

Alarms were telephoned in to the police and fire departments and squads of patrolmen and fireman began the long race to the scene.

Spang disappeared meantime, but soon came again to the ledge with Lorraine, 7, in his arms. He lifted her above his head as he had held her elder sister, and waited. The child's screams could be heard below and the horrified witnesses saw her kicking and clawing the air. Then he threw her over the cliff.

LAST TWO VICTIMS

Once again the madman disappeared from view, only to return a moment later with his 5-year-old nameseake, Raymond, Jr. He hurled this boy over the precipice and a few minutes later sent his remaining child, Donald, 3, to what he believed was instant death.

Mrs. Spang had been instantly killed in her plunge, but the struggles of his children, evidently weakened the maniac. Their bodies failed to clear the jagged side of the cliff and all four landed, still alive, in some brush about twenty feet below.

Spang shook his fists and cursed at the crowd below and then started scrambling down to the moaning children. William Hague, a druggist, ran into his store near by, got a shotgun and emptied both barrels at him, but the shots were of no effect. Other near-by residents brought out rifles and began shooting at him. Spang's movements and the angle of elevation made their aim bad, and he paid those gunning for him no heed.

HURLED CLEAR OF ROCK

He gained the underbrush and, picking up his injured children, one by one, repeated the horrifying scene enacted on the summit. This time he hurled them clear of the steep side of the rock, and they fell in a heap beside or on top of their dead mother.

For nearly ten minutes Spang remained there, peering over the underbrush and down to the ledge where the bodies of his little family lay. A score of persons had managed to climb up the cliff from the road and were gathered down there on the ledge, attempting to administer first-aid to the wife and children.

As police and firemen reached the summit the madman jumped forward and plunged nearly 100 feet to another ledge. Brush cushioned his fall, and those who saw him from below and above, said he did not appear to have been much hurt.

FIREMAN LOWERED

A rope was produced at the summit and Fireman Berube volunteered to be lowered by a rope down the cliff side in an effort to capture the killer. With the rope tied around his body, under the armpits, the fireman was slowly lowered, but the rope was ten feet short of reaching the ledge on which Spang landed.

The madman had arisen to a sitting posture and was hurling stones at the crowd below him. Berube, gaining a foothold, tried for nearly an hour to lasso Spang with a rope he had taken with him, but the latter dodged the noose and cursed the fireman, but made no attempt to stone him.

Finally Spang, having exhausted all the loose rocks on the ledge, took off his left shoe and hurled it at the crowd, which by now had swelled to nearly 10,000 persons. Hearing wild rumors that a madman was murdering children, curious persons had flocked to the scene from all directions.

LEAPS TO DEATH

Berube, at length despairing of reaching the madman, signaled to be lifed back to the summit. Then, as the fireman's slow ascent began, Spang stood up, crossed himself and, with hands lifted in a diving position, leaped down. His body crashed on the same ledge where the crushed bodies of his wife and children lay.

Spang was killed instantly, as his wife and three of his children, Helene, Lorraine and Donald, had been. Little Ray was still alive when help reached him, but died an hour later in a local hospital.

Later investigation showed that Spang had been admitted to the Naval Hospital in Brooklyn nine weeks ago, suffering from maniac-depressive insanity. His wife reported he had been suffering from severe contrasting fits of moroseness and abnormal gayety. On May 1, last, he was transferred to Veterans' Hospital No. 81 in the Bronx and made his escape from there last Sunday afternoon. He went direct to his home at Ansonia, thirteen miles from here, and when he explained that he had been discharged as recovered his family held a welcome party for him last night.

At his suggestion they started out this morning in his automobile to visit his mother, Mrs. Mary Spang, on West Rock Road. It is believed they decided to drive en route up to the rock's summit for the splendid view and that there Spang was seized with a murderous mania.

MOB'S GUNS END LIFE OF NEGRO MAN

South Carolinans Shoot Him After Young Women Say They Were Attacked

UNION (S. C.) June 21. (AP)—Dan Jenkins, Beaufort (N. C.) Negro, was shot to death by a mob here this afternoon after he had been identified by two young white women as the man who attacked them earlier in the day.

A mob of about 1000 men had been searching for the Negro since this morning, when the young women reported the attack. Their last names were given as Shipman, and they are sisters-in-law. They live about six miles from here.

Those who viewed Jenkins's body said it was "shot all to pieces." It was taken to Maple Ridge Church, Negro, where an inquest was conducted this afternoon.

Jenkins came here recently and had been working on a highway passing in front of the Shipman home.

GOVERNOR REPROVES SHERIFF'S CONDUCT

COLUMBIA (S. C.) June 21. (AP) Gov. Richards tonight declared "The conduct of Sheriff Greer of Union was utterly reprehensible," in connection with the lynching of Dan Jenkins, Negro, shot to death there today as an asserted attacker of two young white women.

"The Sheriff told me he did not know a soul in the mob; that he could not get into the mob to see its members. I consider his conduct reprehensible."

BOMBAY, June 21. (AP)—Six persons were injured today at Surat, in a police charge that broke up a meeting of 5000 Indians. The police used their sticks on the crowd.

The Indians were calling on students at the Surat College to suspend their studies in view of the present political situation.

Peshawar reports said that airplane demonstrations over the Afghan frontier were no longer considered necessary. The followers of the Haji and Turangai are reported as deserting rapidly and peace overtures are expected.

NEW JERSEY PRIMARY CHALLENGE TO DRYS

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—Pointing to the recent New Jersey primary as "a clarion call to action," Louis J. Taber of Columbus, master of the National Grange, said today dry forces will accept the challenge of "repeal with the return of the saloon as opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment and prohibition." Speaking over a national hook-up of the National Broadcasting Company, Taber said Dwight W. Morrow, Republican nominee in New Jersey, "but takes the place of another Senator who favored repeal."

City Finds It Cheaper to Keep Lights Burning In Daytime

ELLENTON (S. C.) June 21. (AP)—This little town stays lighted all the time.

Each pole supporting a light has a switch beyond arm's reach from the ground. Time was when the city fathers hired a boy to make the rounds each evening and morning turning the lights on and off.

It was discovered that the electricity consumed was cheaper than the boy's wages, so the boy was dispensed with and the lights go on forever.

MANIAC KILLER SHIFTS GROUND

Elusive Slayer Believed in Brooklyn Now

Spy on Lovers' Meetings in Bushwick Similar

Letter Announcing Leaving Held Ruse by Police

NEW YORK, June 21. (Exclusive) Intensive search for the demented murderer of Queens shifted suddenly to the Bushwick section of Brooklyn tonight after a supposed maniac was reported spying on hallway and roof lovers' trysts there. Detectives spread throughout the district, believing that the letter-writing maniac may select Brooklyn for his third victim, to add to Joseph Mozynski, Whitestone grocer, and Noel Sowley, handsome athlete. They were slain as they sat with their sweethearts in parked cars in a lovers' lane.

Police took no stock in an eighth letter—perhaps from the killer, perhaps not—in which the writer, signing himself "X-3" as did the boastful slayer of Mozynski and Sowley, declared he has abandoned his plan to kill sixteen petting party principals and is departing for Russia.

DESCRIPTION FITS

Two reports that a spy was terrorizing Bushwick petters came to police there and included a description of him. It tallied with the description of the Queens murderer in almost all details.

One was from a girl who lingered in the doorway of her fourth-floor apartment with her young man. A slinking man who followed them from the street climbed to the stairs to the fifth floor and lurked there watching the couple. The uninvited chaperon so terrified the girl and man that they took refuge in her apartment and called the police, but the stranger had disappeared when they arrived.

Another girl reported that while she was sitting on a Bushwick roof with her boy friend a sleazy individual suddenly emerged from the shadows and stared at them unabashed. They, too, were frightened and fled.

MAN HUNTERS PLANTED

Tonight specially picked man hunters, who waited in vain for the deadly X-3 in a College Point woodland throughout Friday night, were shifted to Brooklyn.

After an unsuccessful parade of suspects through Jamaica headquarters today police admitted they were as thoroughly baffled as when they began to hunt the letter-writing killer who calls his shots by mail.

For a time police here were interested in 18-year-old Frank J. Page, who shot a pawnbroker during a hold-up in Boston and, when caught by pursuing policemen, announced that he was "3-X, the man behind the gun."

BRAGGING BANDIT

It was proven that the young bandit was romancing, however. Detectives believe the crack-brained craftiness of the maniac has prompted him to announce "no more" in the hope that they will relax their vigilance and so give him a chance to kill victim No. 3 on the list he schedules for slaughter.

The latest letter, mailed late Friday, relates that "3-X," an agent of dread 77 Wilhelmstrasse during the World War, now is through and is sailing for Europe. It discusses the writer maniac's connection with the supreme council of Russia.

PEOPLE OF EVERY LAND VISIT FAMOUS LOS ANGELES GLAND SURGEON
The roster of those who have availed themselves of a gland operation by Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler, 3173 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, includes many men and women of wide note, practically from every profession and trade, hailing from almost every State in the Union and several foreign countries.
With more than 17,000 gland operations to his credit, a number probably as large as the sum of the combined experiences of a large proportion of all other surgeons in gland therapy, Dr. Wheeler brings skill and a vast experience into this work which can be acquired only through extensive practice.
One of the outstanding and surprising features of Dr. Wheeler's method of treatment is the fact that he is actually not transplanting vital glandular tissues into the patient, but rather without causing pain or shock of any kind, stimulating and without disturbing the patient's own glands. Dr. Wheeler includes in his treatment only such tissues as have been carefully worked out that they are implanted tissues, by means of their substances help the patient perform their duties in the glands and become a part of the organism which surrounds them.
Dr. Wheeler's booklet, Health and Youth From Normal Glands, may be had free upon personal or written request.

DEFICIT FEARS RISE IN CAPITAL

Next Fiscal Year Outlook Cause for Concern

Round of Conferences and Caucus Call Result

Plan for Early Adjournment Also Threatened

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—Uneasiness over the thinness of the line separating the Treasury from a deficit for the next fiscal year appeared tonight to be the cause of a round of conferences at the White House and a call for a Republican caucus in the House.

Raised by impending action of the Senate on the World War veterans' bill, worry threatened plans for adjournment and sent a secret call to House Republicans to assemble next Tuesday night to discuss veterans' legislation and the possibility of continuing the present 1 per cent tax reduction on normal incomes through next year.

Already fears have been expressed by proponents of the veterans' measure that the President will veto it and the suggestion has been made that Congress be held in session long enough to act on his message of disapproval if one is forthcoming.

PRESIDENT BUSY

From the White House there has come no official statement of the President's views. He abandoned his customary week-end fishing trip to the Virginia mountains, however, and has been engaged for the past two days in conferences with Congressional leaders and officials of the Treasury and Veterans' Bureau.

He conferred twice today with Secretary Mellon and Undersecretary Mills of the Treasury. In the second conference Director Hines of the Veterans' Bureau joined and the group of officials submitted figures regarding cost of the measure.

President Hoover has been concerned for several months about the condition of government finances for next year and has cautioned Congress it must watch expenditures closely and eliminate all unnecessary items, if the Treasury is to complete the next twelve months with a surplus.

SURPLUS FADES

Before the 1 per cent tax reduction was granted by Congress, the Treasury estimated it would have a surplus of $122,788,966 on June 30, 1931. The tax reduction cut off $80,000,000 of that amount, the Spanish-American War veterans' bill lopped off another $11,000,000, reducing the prospective surplus to $31,000,000. With passage of the veterans' bill this would be wiped out and a deficit left if the bill cost $74,000,000 or more annually, as estimated.

It also is regarded as likely that the Treasury is expecting less income next year than this when income-tax collections are reaching previously unequaled totals.

Present indications are the government will have a total income of more than $4,000,000,000 this year due to income-tax payments of approximately $2,450,000,000.

The business depression, however, is expected to reduce such taxes next year.

EXECUTIVE COURSE

Speaker Longworth says the President has his mind fairly well made up regarding the kind of veterans' bill he can sign in view of the condition of the Treasury.

He adds he is confident if Congressional action is completed and the measure does not meet the Chief Executive's wishes, he immediately will signify his disapproval and give his reasons without permitting the legislation to die through a pocket veto.

Two meetings of the unofficial Republican steering committee of the House were held today and Representative Hawley, Oregon, chairman of the Republican caucus, sought the call for a conference.

Word was spread quietly and leaders were averse to discussing reasons for the call.

Such a meeting of the Republican group, at the end of a session, is in itself unusual.

The speaker says in view of the uncertainty of the veterans' measure, and the status of the rivers and harbors and deficiency bills, it seems unlikely Congress can adjourn by the end of next week.

Earlier in the day Senate leaders had expressed belief that the remaining legislative proposals can be cleared away in time to quit before next Saturday.

Hurley Chosen by Supervisors

YOSEMITE, June 21. (AP)—Thomas Hurley of San Diego today was elected president of the County Supervisors' Association of California at the concluding session of the organization's twentieth annual convention. Thomas Maxwell of Napa was chosen vice-president.

A resolution presented by Supervisor Gallagher of San Francisco providing for the establishment of a public-utilities section of the association was unanimously adopted.

Under the measure the section will study the public-utilities situation and provide information which will assist the State Railroad Commission in fixing equitable rates.

Air Travel Fare Rate Changed

ST. LOUIS, June 21. (AP)—A rate of 7 cents a mile for air travel has been put into effect by the T.A.T.-Maddux Air Lines, it was announced today, an increase of 2 cents over the winter rate established January 14, last.

The low winter rate experiment "proved beyond doubt," the company says, "that it is fare, not fear" which keeps most travelers from using airlines.

NOVELIST SEEKS DIVORCE IN RENO

Dorothy Walworth Carman

RENO (Nev.) June 21. (AP)—Dorothy Walworth Carman, well-known author, whose latest story is running serially in a popular magazine, filed suit for divorce here today against Allen Carman, connected with Charles Scribner & Sons, publishers.

Mrs. Carman charges her husband failed to provide common necessaries for a year or more. She asks custody of an 8-year-old daughter and $50 a month for her support. The case will be tried Monday.

BOUNDARIES OF PARIS TO BE EXTENDED

Absorption of Suburbs Will Give Population of More Than 6,000,000

PARIS, June 21. (Exclusive)—The first step toward the amalgamation of a greater Paris, more than 6,000,000 population, was taken today following the Chamber of Deputies' unanimous vote on Premier Tardieu's plan for handling the operation.

Hitherto the ancient and obsolete fortifications, hemming in Paris with a ring of steel and masonry, prevented the capital from expanding and absorbing suburbs.

Many of the suburbs are inhabited chiefly by factory workers and are hotbeds of Communism. These communities have refused to join greater Paris and special legislation was necessary for their absorption.

Two hundred and forty thousand dollars was allocated by the government to prepare for a greater Paris, which includes a zone with an eighteen-mile radius from the center of the capital.

Pardoned Trio Impatient to Return Home

SAN QUENTIN, June 21. (Exclusive)—Receipt by Warden Holohan today of the official pardons granted yesterday by Gov. Young resulted in the immediate freeing of Philip Rohan, Harvey Lesher and Michael Garvey, who had been sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder in Los Angeles of A. R. Mills, druggist, in 1927.

Lesher and Rohan, half-brothers, when notified of the pardon, gave principal credit to their mother, Mrs. C. E. Lesher of Los Angeles.

Garvey was so impatient to rejoin his wife and 5-year-old daughter in Wyoming he wanted to start walking immediately, before changing even his prison garb for the new suit of clothing supplied by the State.

All, however, waited until 1 p.m. for new clothing and left together. Rohan and Lesher went to Los Angeles and Garvey to his family.

Four Lake Erie Boat Tragedy Bodies Found

TOLEDO (O.) June 21. (AP)—The body of Charles H. Nauts, collector of internal revenue here, missing since last Saturday, when he and seven men in a speed boat disappeared, was found floating in Lake Erie five miles south of West Sister Island today. The bodies of Henry Hainbuch, Franklin Jones and Frank Miller also were recovered today.

Searchers previously had recovered the body of John Liptak.

All of the eight were prominent Toledoans. They were en route to an Elks' celebration at Pelee Island when they disappeared.

The following day their boat was found floating right-side up and an intensive search was begun by airplanes and Coast Guard boats.

HUNGARIAN DRYS MEET TO PROTEST WET DRIVE

BUDAPEST (Hungary) June 21. (AP)—Hungarian temperance leaders today admitted prohibition in Hungary will have a long and difficult road to travel. Gathering in a general assembly to protest against a recently organized government competition for the best method of pushing the sale of Hungarian wines, leaders of the Federation of Abstinence Societies cited what they described as the benefits of prohibition in the United States.

SIAMESE PRINCES REACH VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (B. C.) June 21. (AP) The Princes Ajjah, Prasobari and Chirasakti, nephews of the King of Siam, arrived here today on board the Empress of Russia. Prince Chirasakti, graduate of Woolwich school in England, is in his late teens and is en route to Washington to visit the Siamese Legation, while the Princes Ajjah and Prasobari soon will enter a school in the United States capital.

DAM FUND OVER SENATE HURDLE

Subcommittee Favorable for Appropriation

Arizona's Fight to Prevent Report Futile

Hayden Pours Antagonism on Unheeding Ears

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—The $10,660,000 appropriation written into the House deficiency bill for starting work on the Boulder Dam project was retained today by a subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee after arguments for striking it out were heard.

Senator Hayden, Democrat, Arizona, appeared, seeking to have the appropriation stricken out. He told the committee the Swing-Johnson Act for the Boulder Dam project contemplates an agreement among the States concerned for division of water before actual beginning of construction.

SECRETARY SATISFIED

Northcutt Ely, executive assistant to Secretary Wilbur, who negotiated contracts with the States, presented a file of the negotiations on behalf of the Interior Department. Ely said the Secretary is satisfied conditions have been met.

William J. Donovan, the Federal government's representative in negotiations between California, Arizona and Nevada, was presented by Senator Hayden. He laid before the committee a report he made to the Interior Secretary showing there has not been complete agreement among the States.

ARIZONA WON'T AGREE

Senator Johnson, Republican, California, said Arizona has made clear it will not agree to division and use of power. Senator Hayden contended if the bill is passed with the appropriation it will mean that, without agreement among the States, California will use Federal funds and Federal authority for irrigation. He asserted once California uses the water she will claim rights in perpetuity to it under existing statutes.

The bill with the Boulder Dam appropriation will be submitted to the full Appropriations Committee on Monday and will come up for final action early next week.

Science Group to Meet Here

EUGENE (Or.) June 21. (AP)—Dr. T. Wayland Vaughn, director of the Scripps Institute at La Jolla, Cal., today was chosen president of the western division of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at the closing session of the three-day convention here.

Other officers of the association were elected as follows: Ernest G. Martin, Stanford, vice-president; J. Murray Luck, Stanford, secretary. Los Angeles was chosen as the place for the next meeting which date will be set later.

them too," recently declared Mrs. K. Van Dan Acker, 1940 Mellon Ave., Los Angeles.

"I was so handicapped by rheumatic pains I couldn't walk a city block; and often I'd lie awake most of the night suffering. I had weak dizzy spells and always had a fear of falling over even just in moving about the house. My appetite was very poor and I had a world of trouble with my stomach.

"I've taken just five bottles of Sargon, along with Sargon Pills, and every rheumatic pain has left me. I do all my housework and walk around hours shopping on top of that! I have a wonderful appetite and eat anything I want without suffering the least distress from my stomach. The dizzy spells have disappeared, and my sleep is sound and restful; my whole system seems benefited and I have more strength and energy than I've had in years!"

STATE REPLIES IN PLAZA CASE

Rehearing of Supreme Court Ruling Opposed

Brief Denies Nine Points of Asserted Error

Rejection of Railroads' Plea Anticipated

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—As a preliminary to another Supreme Court ruling in the protracted Los Angeles Plaza union terminal case, the Railroad Commission, through Attorney Arthur T. George, today filed with the high tribunal its brief in opposition to a rehearing of the May 27 decision ordering construction. Under the usual rules of procedure, the Supreme Court will rule in another five days. It is anticipated the petition of the railroads for a rehearing will be denied.

In the Railroad Commission brief, Attorney George denies in detail each of the nine points of asserted error raised by the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe and Los Angeles and Salt Lake. The major point of contention, as it has been through the many stages of the controversy, is the point of jurisdiction wherein lies the mandatory power for construction.

The commission's brief stresses the point that the Supreme Court, as charged by the railroads, did not err in holding there is no conflict between the Transportation Act of 1920, under which the railroads hold the Interstate Commerce Commission alone can force action, and the California Public Utilities Act, under which the Railroad Commission issued its mandatory order, with qualifications. The qualifications are the carrying out of complementary acts in connection with the Interstate Commerce Commission. The commission's brief avers all these other conditions have been met. Therefore, it is argued, the carriers must construct the Plaza terminal and proceed with grade-crossing eliminations as set forth in the order.

CLIFFORD MADE DEAN OF HARVARD ENGINEER

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) June 21. (AP) Prof. Harry E. Clifford has been chosen dean of the Harvard engineering school to succeed the late Hector J. Hughes, the board of overseers at Harvard, announced today.

ESPEE RESIGNED TO LINK ORDER

Shoup Indicates No Fight on Federal Ruling

Northern and Western to Push Hook-up Plans

Federal Board Rail Edict Effective July 20

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—No attempt to go beyond yesterday's decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission authorizing the Great Northern-Western Pacific link will be made by the Southern Pacific, it was indicated today by Paul Shoup, president of the latter railroad. In a formal statement, he said:

"Congratulations to the Western Pacific and Great Northern.

"I wish earnestly again to thank the thousands of shippers and the many communities who believe as we do that the existing facilities, rail and water, with additions from time to time, are ample to take care of all existing traffic and all that may be created and that the support permanently of the new line must come principally from business diverted from us and our connections.

"If events prove us wrong in any substantial way in this view, we will be pleased as well as surprised.

"In any event we will, as good citizens, cheerfully accept the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which is, under the law, the final arbiter in such matters. I will be interested in reading the full text of the decision."

Acquiescence in the decision without further recourse to possible legal delays means the probable start of construction work on the 200-mile Keddie to Klamath Falls line by the first of August. H. M. Adams, president of the Western Pacific, and W. P. Kenney, vice-president in charge of traffic for the Great Northern, both announce they are ready to proceed with construction immediately. The I.C.C. order, however, is not effective until July 20. Kenney spoke for the Great Northern in the absence of Ralph Budd, president, who is overseas.

RAIL OFFICIALS WILL CONFER ON CONNECTION

SPOKANE (Wash.) June 21. (AP) Officials of the Great Northern and Western Pacific railroads will meet here Monday to confer on plans for immediate construction of the $15,000,000 connection between the two lines from Klamath Falls, Or., to Keddie, Cal., as authorized yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

H. M. Adams, president of the Western Pacific, and others are coming from San Francisco to meet W. P. Kenney, Great Northern vice-president, who is due here from St. Paul.

Railroad men said absence in Russia of Ralph Budd, Great Northern president, will not hinder prompt construction.

HARBOR BILL VOTE ASKED TOMORROW

House Will be Requested to Dispose of Measure for $142,000,000 Fund

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—Final action on the rivers and harbors omnibus bill carrying authorizations estimated at $142,000,000 is to be sought in the House Monday when that branch will be asked to accept Senate amendments to the original measure.

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee had instructed Chairman Dempsey to ask unanimous consent to accept the Senate amendment, increasing the total by about $24,500,000, today, but action was deferred to permit the members additional time in which to study the new projects.

Chairman Dempsey expressed belief that there would be little difficulty in obtaining approval in the House now. However, he added, if opposition developed the measure would go to conference and the differences would be ironed out in short order.

Although President Hoover has not indicated what action he would take it is believed by Republican leaders on both sides of the Capitol that it will meet with his approval in view of his long advocacy of improvement of the nation's waterways.

Captives Tell of Hardship on African Desert

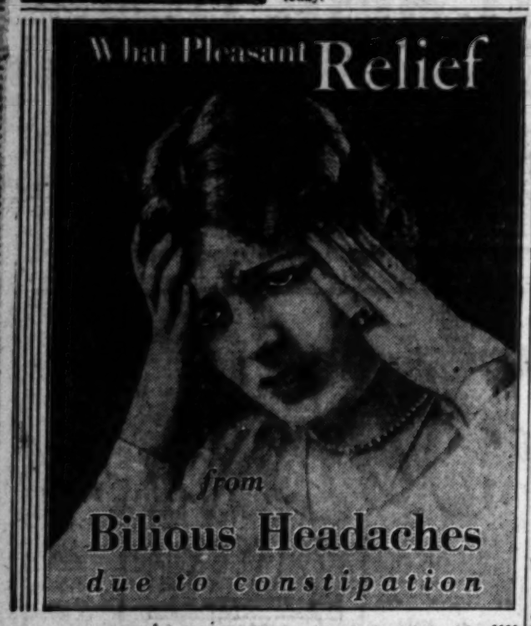
MADRID, June 21. (AP)—A story of hunger and hardships under the broiling sun of the North African desert was told in a letter today from Commander Ricardo Burguete of the Spanish army air force, who with three companions was forced down almost a month ago near Cape Bojador and later ransomed.

Commander Burguete's companions were Capt. Nunez Maza, Sergt. Vincente Ferrer, the mechanic, and a Moorish chieftain. When their planes were forced to land they were captured by wild tribesmen of the district and held until a ransom of 7500 pesetas (about $900) was obtained for each.

In the camp of the Nomads the aviators were half starved and Sergt. Ferrer was especially abused, the letter said.

TAMALPAIS RAILROAD ASKS LEAVE TO QUIT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—Once the delight of tourists but now neglected by them in favor of the sight-seeing bus and the new toll road to the top of Mt. Tamalpais, the Mt. Tamalpais and Muir Woods Railroad finds itself unable to meet modern competition and today applied to the Railroad Commission for authority to abandon its lines.



HUNDREDS and hundreds of folks right here can tell you that pitiless sick headaches and spells of biliousness due to constipation are usually gone in short order when you look to Flaxolyn for help.

One pleasant spoonful of the new Liquid Flaxolyn taken three times a day for a short time, has proven to be an excellent and effective check on biliousness caused by occasional constipation.

Men and women of all ages know how true it is that Flaxolyn gives the nicest sort of bowel movement you ever experienced. Flaxolyn physics the bowels thoroughly so that all the constipated waste moves out, without griping or disturbing you in the slightest.

New Liquid Flaxolyn contains no narcotics—no drastic or habit-forming drugs—but is rich in air-dried and sun-dried herbs which are effectively combined with bile salts and highly approved vegetable extracts and organic medicinals.

In Liquid Flaxolyn are found Buchu Leaves from Africa, Valerian from Belgium, Licorice from Spain, Aloes from the Barbadoes Islands. Also Dandelion Roots, Ginger, Sarsaparilla Roots, Senna Leaves and other potent herbs.

Face Disfigured by Pimples. Lasted a Year. Cuticura Healed.

"I had pimples on my face. They itched and burned so that I could not leave them alone. They were hard and red and festered and scaled over. The irritation caused me to scratch them and scratching caused eruptions. They bothered me so that I could not sleep at night, and my face was disfigured by them. They lasted about a year.

"A friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I sent for a free sample. After using it I purchased more and was completely healed." (Signed) Charles Carter, 636 E. Manchester Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., June 25, 1929.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. H, Malden, Mass."

Grebe radio

Through all the years of manufacture, A. H. Grebe has adhered to one ideal: that the quality of the radio which bears his name shall not be less than the finest.

Ever building with this in mind, Grebe radios have not only kept abreast of the field—but have in every case introduced new features which have later been adopted by other manufacturers and exploited as a revolutionary development.

Meanwhile Grebe continues to build and to progress. No fanfare of wild claims and exaggerated statements—no tremendous exploitation.

For Grebe radios appeal to those who instinctively recognize true quality, true leadership ... and for those nothing can speak louder than the twenty years of honest quality which is the background of every Grebe of today.

SONG PUBLISHER FEIST SUCCUMBS

He Wrote Tunes at Night After Selling Corsets

Later Composers Gave Him Works to Exploit

'Over There' of War Memory Brought Small Fortune

MT. VERNON (N. Y.) June 21. (AP)—Leo Feist, 60 years of age, song publisher, died at his home here today of arthritis.

Starting his business career as a corset salesman, Mr. Feist wrote popular songs in his spare time but was unable to sell them and finally published one of them himself. It was popular enough to enable him to publish several more. He went into the song-publishing business, building up what became the largest publishing house of popular songs in the world.

When Mr. Feist started his music business, he was lyricist, publisher and salesman. He would write songs at night, get orchestra leaders to play them and then himself take copies around to the stores.

Other composers soon brought their songs to him to be published and he gave up his own tune writing. His first successful song was "Smokey Moke."

One of his most profitable songs was "Over There." He paid George M. Cohan, the author, $25,000 outright for it. The song made a small fortune.

Silver Parley Plan Proposed

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—Negotiations by President Hoover with other countries to determine the feasibility of calling an international conference to discuss stabilization of the price of silver are authorized in a resolution introduced in behalf of Senator King, Utah.

The conference would be called, the resolution says, "to consider and devise plans to increase the use of silver for monetary and other purposes and to bring about the stabilization of the price of silver."

MEXICANS ON TRIP TO FIX DEBT PLAN

MEXICO CITY, June 21. (AP)—Luis Montes de Oca, Secretary of Finance, accompanied by Xavier Sanchez Mejorada, president of the Mexican National Railways, and a number of other Mexican financial railroad experts, has left here for New York. They will confer there beginning the 25th inst. with a committee of international bankers with a view to reaching an agreement for payment of the Mexican national foreign debt and the National Railways' debt.

STOCK FAILURE BRINGS ARREST

Partner in Woody & Co. Held for Larceny

Customer Says Shares Paid for Not Delivered

Associates of Ryder Not Named in Complaint

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Arrest of Harold Russell Ryder, partner in the Wall-street firm of Woody & Co. which failed Thursday for $2,000,000, was ordered today. He will be charged with grand larceny, Asst. Dist.-Atty. Hastings said.

The arrest was ordered upon complaint of John Vanneck, president of the Equitable Holding Corporation, who charges he paid the brokerage firm $95,687 for stocks which never were delivered.

Charles L. Woody, Jr., and Lucian A. Hold, other partners in the firm, have waived immunity before the grand jury. Ryder has not appeared to testify.

TO BE JAILED

The detectives sent to arrest Ryder said that Ryder would be kept at police headquarters overnight for arraignment in magistrate's court Sunday.

Ryder was questioned for hours by representatives of Woody and Hold and by counsel for creditors of the bankrupt Wall-street firm.

Ryder declared, it was said, that the immediate cause of the failure was the recent sharp decline in the market, during which Stein Cosmetic stock, in which Ryder and Frank Stoltz, president of the Stein company, had a pool, feel from 23 to 8.

Another factor, Ryder indicated, was that Frank Bailey, Brooklyn financier, had lost in the stock crash last October and had demanded repayment of $1,500,000, loaned to Ryder because of Bailey's long friendship with Charles L. Woody, Sr., Ryder's father-in-law. Ryder had not acted as his agent in stock-market transactions, Bailey said.

BIG INSTALLMENTS

Ryder told his questioners, they said, he had promised to pay Bailey back at the rate of $25,000 a week. Bailey did not reveal how much had been repaid.

Although millions of dollars had passed through the firm's hands during its brief life only $615.91 remained to its account on the day it was forced to suspend.

Mr. Woody's representative said the failure had ruined all concerned but that it was the determination of Woody and Hold that claims of creditors should be satisfied as fully and as promptly as possible.

Father Kills Son and Self

JACKSONVILLE (Fla.) June 21. (AP)—Louis Weiss, a retired merchant, drowned his 16-year-old defective son, Francis, in a bath tub today and then committed suicide by shooting himself.

Weiss has suffered financial reverses lately, members of the family said.

complaints into consideration we must face the problem."

The Minister of Commerce said he was unable today to foresee what measures might be taken, but he declared, "I can only say that formal relations between the United States and France can be guaranteed only by the principle of strict reciprocity."

MEXICAN GROWERS TOLD TO FIND NEW MARKETS

MEXICO CITY, June 21. (AP)—The consular department of the Foreign Office today in a published statement advised Mexican producers, especially growers of vegetables and breeders of cattle, to look about for new fields of exports. It was said that the new United States tariff laws will in all probability practically close that country to them as a market.

The statement suggested that Canada, Cuba and Central America would make good markets and further recommended that business interests promote the canning and packing industries in Mexico so as to allow a larger consumption at home of Mexican products.

Excelsior, leading Mexico City daily, today in an editorial coupled President Hoover's signature of the tariff measure and soviet Russia's abolition of private property as the two most sensational events in the world since the great war. Both were said to be equivalent to declarations of war against the rest of the world.

Excelsior said: "Pseudo-Marxism in Russia as opposed to the bourgeois regimes of the rest of the world, and American imperialism as opposed to industrialism in other countries, present the strange spectacle of Bolshevism and imperialism going hand in hand."

Excelsior termed the United States as a "modern Shylock" who "not satisfied with one pound of flesh, wants two."

SECRETARY LAMONT DEFENDS NEW TARIFF

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—A formal statement in defense of the new tariff bill challenging assertions it will be a detriment to American business was issued by Secretary Lamont today, representing research findings of the Commerce Department.

The declaration constituted the third made on the subject this week, Secretary Mellon and Senator Watson, Republican leader in the Senate, having previously presented their views, but Secretary Lamont introduced primarily a study of the bearings of the new measure on international trade.

He took up specifically protests of foreign nations, saying many of them in substance had been considered and acted upon by Congress.

He told of the remarkable rise in exports of American manufactures during the last decade, in spite of similar threats to the country's trade issued during consideration of the 1922 Tariff Act.

Lamont stressed opportunities given foreign producers selling to the United States to seek changes through the Tariff Commission in schedules adopted — a privilege which America in like position gets from no other nation—and he concluded that under the new measure "the people of the United States will continue to buy from and sell to the nations of the world vast quantities of products."

TARDIEU SHIFTS DEFENSE POLICY

Debate on Budget Reveals Change Under Way

Huge Forts Abandoned for Mobile Artillery

Hint Warns Italy Frontier Well Protected

PARIS, June 21. (Exclusive)—A radical change in the defense policy of France—the partial abandonment of the theory of rigid fortifications in favor of industrial mobilization—was indicated in a speech by Premier Tardieu before the Finance Committee in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday.

M. Tardieu attempted to refute the charge that the national treasury was inadequate to meet his $200,000,000 equipment program and to answer criticisms of the program itself. He was under fire from both the Extreme Left, which thinks the military items in the program are excessive, and the Right, which thinks that the program does not devote enough of the money available to national defense.

DEFIES ALL HANDS

The Premier defied both groups. He told the pacifists that he would stand pat on the program and make it an issue of confidence, and that he would see it voted on before the end of the month. At the same time he refused the demand to swell the already heavy defense budget by laying up a huge supply of military stocks and enlarging fortifications to the tune of 1,000,000,000 francs, about $40,000,000.

Premier Tardieu told the finance committee that despite the war clouds hovering on the various horizons he did not consider the situation alarming and thought that an extra $40,000,000 in this year's budget for strengthening the ring of steel fortresses around the nation was quite sufficient. He added significantly that for the southeastern—that is the Italian—frontier, the government is taking every measure necessary to insure protection.

CAN GET IT, ANYHOW

He then answered those of his critics who charge that France is practically without military supplies at present. He pointed out that the munition factories are now able to produce as much in one day as they could in a whole year before the war, and added that France possessed the greatest potential military stock it has had in fifty years.

The Premier said he was opposed to laying up huge stores of ammunition and perishable equipment such as gas masks, as they would not be usable in a few years, owing to deterioration, and he remarked that it was better to concentrate research on the development of new kinds of tanks and other mechanical war equipment.

NEW POLICY TOLD

"Better that we should spend money for factories which can be transformed to produce war stocks," said M. Tardieu, "than for arsenals which are merely a store for them."

Further evidence of the new trend in preparedness for war in France is the fact that the budget does not stress as much as usual the importance of concrete fortresses, but allocates millions to the development of strategic railroads, which in time of peace are an aid to commerce and in time of war would permit rapid concentration of heavy artillery.

FRENCH WINES TAXED

LISBON, June 21. (AP)—Restaurant owners, ordered by the government to print menus only in Portuguese, convinced officials there were no equivalents for such viands and drinks as "Baule Mauniere," and "Chateaubriand" but they have to pay a tax of from $30 to $150 for offering them to patrons.

PICTURE BRIDE MAKES ERROR

She Saw Mate's Photo, But It Was Taken Before He Got to Be 70 Years of Age

CHICAGO, June 21. (AP)—A 17-year-old bride, seeking to divorce her 70-year-old husband, told Superior Judge Williams yesterday that she was married without ever seeing her intended husband in advance.

"My mother showed me a picture," said Mrs. Lottie Gut, "and it was of a nice-looking young man about my age, so I agreed to the marriage plans. I later learned that the photograph was of my husband, Casimir Gut, all right, but it had been taken when he was young."

Fitts Completes Campaign Tour in Central Area

SANTA CRUZ, June 21. (Exclusive)—Buron Fitts, candidate for Governor, completed his tour of the Central California counties here today.

The tour, interrupted in Salinas Thursday night when he was recalled to Los Angeles to testify in the Sanhuber "attic" murder trial, was resumed yesterday when he flew from Los Angeles to San Francisco and then cares here by automobile where he addressed an enthusiastic rally last night at Hotel Palomar, attacking the record of the present State administration on water conservation, prison reform and agricultural relief.

Fitts spent today here with friends and tonight and tomorrow will attend the American Legion pilgrimage, being scheduled as one of the speakers on the program at Big Trees tomorrow.

Woman Dead; Husband Held

ELDORADO (Ark.) June 21. (AP) With her skull crushed and neck dislocated Nora Arnold, 30 years of age, wife of a former of Grannis, Ark., was found lying in a residential street here today. She died on the way to a hospital. Her husband, Frank Arnold, was arrested.

Officers express the belief the woman either jumped or was thrown from an automobile.

TIME LOCK'S ALARM FRIGHTENS BANDITS

CINCINNATI, June 21. (AP)—Four robbers kidnaped H. A. Green, cashier of the Reading Bank, at his home today, took him to the bank and held him and his family captive for five hours while waiting for a time lock to open on a bank vault but were frightened away by the ringing of the bell a few minutes before the safe would have opened.

MEXICAN FLYER ACHIEVES GOAL

Col. Fierro Successful in Nonstop Flight

Reaches Capital in Single Hop from New York

Time, 16 Hours, 35 Minutes, Betters Lindbergh's

VALBUENA FIELD (Mexico City) June 21. (AP)—The first nonstop flight from New York to Mexico was completed by a Mexican aviator today.

Col. Roberto Fierro, his countrymen's new hero of the air, covered the distance of approximately 2300 miles between Roosevelt Field, New York, and Valbuena Field, Mexico City, in sixteen hours and thirty-five minutes.

MISSES ESCORT

Missing an escort of airplanes sent out to meet him, he landed alone, taking spectators by surprise. Splashing down onto the muddy field but making a clear landing, Fierro was greeted with roars of applause. Amid cries of "Viva Fierro! Viva Mexico!" he and his mechanic, Arnulfo Cortes, were triumphantly carried on the shoulders of the crowd into the Emilio Carranza hangar.

There they were greeted by President Ortiz Rubio, Secretary of War Joaquin Amaro and other officials. Both aviators were smiling and said they were not very tired from their long and speedy flight.

BEATS LINDBERGH

Col. Fierro not only made the first nonstop flight from New York to Mexico City but bettered by more than ten hours the time set by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in December, 1927, between Washington and Mexico City.

Lindbergh required twenty-seven hours, ten minutes for his nonstop flight from Bolling Field to the Mexican capital.

Col. Fierro used a Lockheed Sirius monoplane with low wings, a duplicate of that used by Lindbergh for his recent transcontinental flight.

Macmillan Off Again to North

WISCASSET (Me.) June 21. (AP)—The schooner Bowdoin sailed at 3 p.m. today on its seventh trip from this port for the Far North.

Commander Donald B. Macmillan, veteran Arctic explorer, was at the helm. Included in the crew are eight Chicago boys, the youngest but 10 years of age.

After stopping at Reykjavik, Iceland, to attend the 1000th anniversary of the parliamentary government that Iceland created, the Bowdoin will sail around the coast of Iceland.

SLEMP NOT CANDIDATE

BIG STONE GAP (Va.) June 21. (AP)—In a formal statement here today, C. Bascom Slemp, after meeting with the notification committee representing the Ninth District Republican convention, which nominated him to Congress, declined to make the race.

PENSION VOTED TO DRY VICTIM

House Passes Bill Calling for $100 Monthly

Beneficiary Was Wounded by Federal Agent

Action Sets Precedent and Evokes Speculation

WASHINGTON, June 21. (Exclusive)—Setting a precedent in the government's dry-law policy, the House today voted a pension of $100 a month for life to George Charles Walthers of Underwood, Wash., who was paralyzed in 1923 by the bullet of a Federal prohibition agent.

The House action, marking the first definite move by either house of Congress to compensate a victim of a prohibition shooting, evoked widespread speculation upon the policy that it will be a forerunner of scores of other payments in similar cases. Two other bills for the relief of survivors of dry-law victims are on the House calendar and several others have been introduced.

SUM REDUCED

Although the Walthers bill was passed without a record vote, it was preceded by a sharp debate precipitated by the charge of Representative Collins, Democrat, Mississippi, a dry, that it was wrong to pay as much to an asserted bootlegger as to a disabled soldier. Collins succeeded in amending the bill to reduce the payment to Walthers from $150 a month, the amount recommended by the claims committee, to $100 a month. He then withdrew his objections and the bill passed as amended. It now goes to the Senate.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the sum of $100 a month to Walthers during his natural life in full settlement of all claims against the government with the reservation that no part of the payments shall go to attorneys or agents.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon protested against passage of the relief bill, but in a later communication said he would not interpose an objection.

PENDING BILLS

One of the two other bills pending in the House for the relief of victims of dry-law enforcement provides for an award of $5000 to the heirs of Jacob D. Hanson of Niagara Falls, N. Y., who was killed when shot by a Coast Guardsman.

The second bill would award $5000 to the heirs of Henry Virkkula of Big Falls, Minn., who was shot and killed by a customs officer near the Canadian border.

MURDER BLAMED ON GAMBLING QUARREL

PUEBLO (Colo.) June 21. (AP)—The gambling activities of Mervin Calhoun, an employee of Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, were believed today to have caused his murder. Calhoun was shot to death early today near his home, a short distance from the C.F.&I. steel plant, where he was a wire superintendent. Neighbors heard two shots follow a short argument. They did not investigate. Two hours later Calhoun's body was found with bullet wounds in the neck and chin.

SKIFF FROM BERMUDA REACHES NEW YORK

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Eric Johnson, 21 years of age, of Bermuda, and Florence Smith, 24, of Grand Manan, New Brunswick, sailed from Bermuda in a fifteen-foot sail boat and reached New York today. Miss Smith's coming-ashore costume was a bathing suit, red sweater and slippers. Johnson wore dungarees and slippers.

BOTANIST TO WRITE BIOGRAPHY IN TIBET

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (AP)—Bound for Tibet, where he plans to seclude himself for a year while writing an autobiography of his life's work, Dr. J. F. Rock, botanical expert associated with the National Geographic Society and the United States Department of Agriculture, sailed today aboard the Matson liner Malolo.

Chemists Balk Liquor Trusts' Use of Alcohol

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—Governmental science finally has made it so expensive and difficult to "clean" industrial alcohol, bootleg liquor manufacturers are deserting its use, according to announcement by R. P. Love, chemist in the local prohibition laboratory.

The bureau has learned, he said, that illicit manufacturers have transferred their attention to corn sugar, which is cheaper and ferments rapidly.

Belgian Praises American Part in Great War

BRUSSELS, June 21. (AP)—H. Baels, Minister of Agriculture, told the American Club here that while the United States is known to most Belgians as the source of motion pictures, good citizens would not forget that the country is celebrating the centenary of its independence largely because of American help in the World War.

NEW DRY ZONE MOVE DECIDED

Department of Justice Will Create Dozen in Nation

Step Scheduled as First of Reorganization Efforts

Prohibition Transfer Takes Effect on July 1, Next

WASHINGTON, June 21. (Exclusive)—Division of the country into twelve prohibition administrative districts has been definitely decided on as one of the first reorganization steps to be taken by the Department of Justice when the dry enforcement bureau is transferred from the Treasury Department on July 1.

Administration of the new district lines will follow the boundaries of the Circuit Court judicial districts. At present there are twenty-seven administrative districts in the United States and its insular possessions. Of these twenty-seven administrators, twelve probably will be taken over by the Attorney-General's office. A dozen others will be enrolled under Dr. James M. Doran, the new commissioner of industrial alcohol.

Dr. Doran and Asst. Atty.-Gen. Youngquist, who will assume the role of "dry czar" on the first of next month, have virtually completed a division of the forces in the present prohibition unit. About 2200 of the dry bureau will stay with Dr. Doran as employees in the industrial alcohol branch. Howard Jones of Mr. Youngquist's legal staff probably will be selected for the new post of prohibition director.

FARM HAND GETS LIFE FOR TEACHER'S DEATH

ROCHESTER (Minn.) June 21. (AP) Douglas Petersen, 24 years of age, farm hand, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in District Court today and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Petersen shot and killed Miss Margaret Wegman, 20-year-old rural school-teacher, last May 22 after she had repulsed his attentions.

LAW-ENFORCING QUIZ TO GO ON

Senate Committee Provides $50,000 More for It

Action, However, Restricted to Prohibition Alone

Jones of Washington Only One to Voice Protest

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—President Hoover's law-enforcement commission was given a new lease on life today by a subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee—but with a specific command to confine its activity to the investigation of prohibition.

The committee wrote into the House deficiency bill an amendment to provide $50,000 for continuation of the commission's inquiry. The House yesterday struck from the measure a provision for $350,000. Without an appropriation at this session the commission would be without funds after July 1.

JONES PROTESTS

Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, dry leader, was the only one of the ten members of the committee who opposed the amendment. It was offered by Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, who first proposed establishment of the commission in the Senate about two years ago.

Glass said after the meeting that his amendment will compel the commission to follow the spirit of the law that created it.

VOTE DUE TUESDAY

"It has utterly disregarded the primary purpose of the original appropriation for it," Glass said of the commission. "It has seized upon a parenthetical phrase in the appropriation clause, referring to general law enforcement and has devoted all its attention to this."

Jones plans to report the measure Monday and bring it to final consideration Tuesday. It contains appropriations totaling more than $60,000,000. The measure still is subject to approval by the full committee.

SECRETARY OF AIR WILL GO A-GLIDING

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—Clarence M. Young, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, left here today for a month's business trip and sail-planing at the glider camp made famous in the winter by Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh. A qualified airplane pilot but initiated less than a month ago to the motorless sport in a training glider, he expects to graduate in the soarer class in flights over the hills near San Diego, Cal.

SON OF BISHOP WEDS BERKELEY WOMAN

SALINAS (Cal.) June 21. (AP)—Mrs. Gladys Locke Franzen of Berkeley and Arthur Parsons, son of Rt. Rev. Edward Lambe Parsons, Episcopal Bishop of California, were married here today by Justice of the Peace King.

MORAL OF STORY: DON'T GIVE STRANGER A RING

JOLIET (Ill.) June 21. (AP)—A poor man knocked yesterday at the door of Mayor Sehring's house and Mayor Sehring gave him, an old vest. The poor man said, "Much obliged," and well he might.

Mrs. Sehring came home a little later.

"Where is that old vest of yours?" she wanted to know, right quick.

"Ah, yes," said the Mayor of Joliet, "the old vest. A poor man came aknocking at the door and I was touched by his obvious need of a vest. So I gave it to him. 'Twas nothing, a trifle. The poor man——"

"You gave away that vest?" said Mrs. Sehring, excitedly.

"It was an old vest," said the Mayor. "and it was getting much too snug——"

"Snug or not," you have committed an expensive act of charity," said Mrs. Sehring. "I used that vest as a jewel case. In it I kept two diamond rings, worth $1500 and $800, respectively. You see——"

But Mayor Sehring already was jiggling the receiver hook on the telephone with great animation and demanding the police.

State Convicts Many Speeders

SACRAMENTO, June 21. (AP)—Out of 9748 motorists convicted of violations of the motor vehicle laws in May, 5620 were guilty of speeding, Victor F. Killick, statistician for the division of motor vehicles, announced.

Convictions for reckless driving totaled 886, and illegal headlights accounted for another 1362 convictions.

Smoking in cars not equipped with ash receivers and unnecessary honking of horns resulted in 286 convictions.

PROFESSORS TO TEST ALL MAKES OF PLANES

GARDEN CITY (L. I.) June 21. (AP)—A committee of professors from universities and technical schools of the United States today conducted the first of a series of tests at Curtiss Wright Field, designed to give the purchasing public an accurate knowledge of the powers of practically every airplane manufactured in the United States. Tests are being conducted under direction of the Aeronautic Chamber of Commerce. The object is to provide authentic information which airplane manufacturers may incorporate in their advertising that the public will know is neither exaggerated nor biased. Results will be announced Wednesday.

DRIFTING BOTTLES FOUND IN PACIFIC

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—Two bottles, dropped overboard in the North Pacific, have been recovered near the Philippine Islands, it is reported to the branch hydrographic office. One, tossed overboard by Second Officer J. M. Muir of the steamer Robert Adair on April 5, 1927, drifted about 9700 miles before being picked up on February 28, last. The other floated 7800 miles after Second Officer H. O. Magnuson of the steamer La Placentia hurled it into the sea on September 28, 1926. It was picked up April 30, last.

ACCOUNTANT VANISHES

VANCOUVER (B. C.) June 21. (AP) P. E. Beattie, 50 years of age, an accountant in the Bank of Hongkong and Shanghai at Shanghai, disappeared from the Empress of Russia last Friday, it was reported on the steamer's arrival here today.

Old Snake Bite Antidote Found

CHICAGO, June 21. (AP)—A remedy discovered by the ancient Incas was used successfully by Llewellyn Williams, young Chicago botanist, fighting the bites of poisonous snakes during a year's trip through the South American jungle.

Some of the jungles had yard-long green snakes, the bite of which is fatal unless treated immediately by the one antidote known, a native preparation discovered by the Incas. They had extensive knowledge of herbs, Williams says, and this was handed down from generation to generation.

"I'M DRY" LABEL PUT ON DONKEY

Pierce County (Wash.) Sends Arid Bourbon Group

Unit Rule to Bind Delegates for State Convention

Democrats Will Meet Next Saturday at Centralia

TACOMA, June 21. (AP)—By a margin of five votes Pierce county's delegation to the State Democratic convention at Centralia next Saturday will go instructed to vote dry and will be bound by the unit rule.

By a vote of 57 to 52 the convention held here today adopted a resolution that declares this county is opposed to any effort to modify existing prohibition laws.

Calvin Stewart, former Tacoma postmaster, offered a resolution to send the delegation uninstructed. George Fishburne, former assistant Federal District Attorney, countered with an amendment to leave the delegation uninstructed in all except the prohibition issue and providing a bone-dry stand on that question.

LITTLE MEAT BALLS RUN AROUND IN YOUR BLOOD

ITHACA (N. Y.) June 21. (AP)—A newly found principle of the digestion of fat was reported to the eighth colloid symposium at Cornell University today.

It is that protein, the lean portion of meat, forms a protective film around fat which is transported through the blood. Fat is distributed in the form of globules in the blood, going to the places needing this food. The globules are very small, about one twenty-five thousandth of an inch in diameter.

Literally the fat of meat, in digestion, is coated with a little bit of lean, reversing the position familiar to the eye. The discovery was reported by Dr. S. Dew Ludlum, A. E. Taft and R. L. Nugent of the Gladwin (Pa.) research laboratory.

Dr. Nugent, presenting the paper, said the reason for the film seems to be that fat cannot be dissolved in the blood as are proteins and sugars. The films of protein are invisible even in the best microscopes, but their presence was detected by the chemical reactions they caused.

ATOM ANATOMY LOOKS LIKE RAIN

Dr. Compton Tells Society of "Look" at Insides

Electrons Move in Clouds, Says Nobel Prize Winner

Old Theory of Planet and Orbit Put in Discard

ITHACA (N. Y.) June 21. (AP)—The Heisenberg-Compton atom, a new picture of how negative bits of electricity fit together to make solid substance, was presented the American Physical Society at Cornell University today.

It reveals electrons, as the electrical particles are called, moving in vapory clouds rather than like planets in orbits.

Dr. Arthur H. Compton, American Nobel Prize winner in physics, reported the discovery. He said this new picture was made in the Ryerson physical laboratory at the University of Chicago, and the experiments come the closest of any yet performed to showing "what the atom looks like."

HELIUM GAS USED

Dr. Compton obtained this "look" into atoms by combining latest methods of observation and mathematics. Atoms at which he looked were helium. X-rays shining through helium gas produced haloes much like the familiar ring around the moon.

Just as the moon halo reveals the size of invisible droplets of water causing it, Dr. Compton said helium gas haloes showed not only the size of atoms but "gives us precise information regarding the electron distribution in atoms."

The meaning of this information was calculated by Fourier integrals and by the new principle of probability originated by the young German scientist Werner Heisenberg.

POSITION CALCULATED

Under this principle only the probable position of a moving electron can be determined because it is impossible to measure with perfection both velocity and position.

"When we review the many atomic theories that have been proposed and discarded," said Dr. Compton, "it may perhaps appear too bold to say the particular theory now in vogue has any finality.

"One by one the vortex ring atom of Kelvin, the positively charged jelly of Thomson, the minute solar systems of Rutherford, Bohr and Sommerfeld, as well as the tiny atoms of Crehore, the ring electron atoms of Parson and the cubic atoms of Lewis and Langmuir have given way to more promising successors.

DISTRIBUTION DIFFUSED

"We replace even Schroedinger's diffused cloud of negative electricity by a probability cloud of electrons after the manner of Heisenberg. It now appears, however, the only one of these many proposals which can account for the observed X-ray diffraction haloes is that of Heisenberg.

"In the case of helium we note a maximum of electron density at very near the radius of the electron orbits of helium calculated on Bohr's theory. The distribution is, however, definitely diffused instead of being strongly concentrated at a certain distance from the atom's center. We cannot ascribe this diffuseness to thermal action (heat vibration.) The diffuseness is rather the type predicted by the newer quantum theories. Agreement with observed distribution is striking.

"It should be noted this agreement occurs only in case we use Heisenberg's interpretation as meaning the probability of the presence of an electron.

"Should we instead represent the volume density of continuous electrical discharge, as Schroedinger originally supposed, we should calculate intensity of scattering which is far from the experimental values."

RUMANIA SEEKS LOAN FOR NAVY

Carol's Government Would Arm Against Russia

Warcraft on Black Sea as Protection Sought

British Foreign Office Not Inclined to Approve

LONDON, June 21. (Exclusive)—One of the first steps taken by King Carol's government is an attempt to raise a loan of at least $90,000,000 in London for the purpose of building a strong Rumanian navy as well as a fully equipped naval base in the Black Sea.

It is understood that conversations have already begun, and while the British Foreign Office has not yet given its approval, a well-known manufacturing firm is prepared to back such a loan in consideration of resultant orders for construction of both the naval base and Rumanian cruisers and destroyers.

RED FLEET WORRIES

The growing strength of the Russian fleet in the Black Sea has been a matter of worry to Rumania for some time, and King Carol has already declared that he intends materially to strengthen the country's army and navy.

The British, however, hesitate to participate in such a scheme, since the building of a Rumanian fleet in the Black Sea and strengthening of the naval base there would naturally be taken as a move directed against Russia. Under these circumstances, the British Foreign Office is not ready to approve a Rumanian loan which would be utilized in a manner calculated to embarrass this country, which is, at least theoretically, friendly with Russia.

BRITISH NEED WORK

On the other hand, the British shipyards are urgently in need of work and consequently are in favor of the loan, which would bring fat orders to English shipbuilding plants.

In addition to the firm which is willing to back the loan, there is a strong element which has long been desirous of creating difficulties for the soviets in retaliation for losses sustained because of the Red rule in Russia. It is even considered among these elements that the amount of the loan might be increased, provided Rumania wishes to give orders for land as well as sea armament.

GERMANY TO KEEP BUST OF TUT'S MOTHER-IN-LAW

BERLIN, June 21. (AP)—King Tut's mother-in-law will remain in Berlin, after all.

It appears from a letter of the Prussian Minister of Education to the director-general of the State Museum that negotiations for return of the Nefretiti bust to Egypt have broken down.

The Minister expresses satisfaction that the director-general asked him to "refuse permission for exchange" of the bust for other works of art, although such a trade would mean enrichment of the museum.

"Such enrichment," the letter adds, "must not be purchased at the price of losing a work like the Nefretiti, which is of such a fascinatingly modern appeal."

The news will be received joyfully by Germans who have been making pilgrimages in thousands to the Berlin Egyptian Museum for what they thought was a last look at the beautiful and enigmatic queen.

DICTATOR TAKES REINS IN EGYPT

Legislature Suspended for Next Five Months

CAIRO (Egypt) June 21. (AP)—Egypt will be without a parliamentary government for the next five months under a virtual dictatorship headed by Ismail Sidky Pasha.

Chosen to form a new government by King Fuad, the Premier at once began drafting a royal decree for issuance this evening suspending the Legislature until November.

Sidky Pasha warned the Wafd party of Mustapha Nehas Pasha, favoring constitutionalism, a group overwhelmingly strong in the elected houses of Egypt, that he intends to bring about tranquillity by normal means if possible, hoping the necessity will not arrive for "employment of other measures."

A tense situation prevails today. There is much bitterness, even including threats against the King. The new Cabinet is described as "hand picked."

LOCAL AIR COMPANY ASKS INCORPORATION

SACRAMENTO, June 21. (AP)—Aviation Services, Ltd., of Los Angeles, formed with an authorized capitalization of $150,000, filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State today. The company is to "manufacture, store and repair airplanes." Directors included John Wood, Ralph Yates, J. E. Waterhouse, E. G. McLeod and C. E. Coggins of Los Angeles.

SWEDEN'S FORESTS PAY

STOCKHOLM, June 21. (AP)—Annual gross sales of Sweden's forest products amount to $256,500,000 says a government report. The Swedish merchant fleet receives $13,500,000 and the railroads $10,800,000 annually for transportation of these products.

STATE JOBS OPEN FOR PHYSICIANS

Assistants Needed For Vacancies in California Insane Hospitals

SACRAMENTO, June 21. (AP)—Several positions are open, the State Civil Service Commission reports, for assistant physicians (psychiatric) at the State hospitals for the insane. The commission is accepting applications for these positions.

Assistant physicians receive salaries ranging from $170 to $270 per month with maintenance for themselves, wife and minor children. The duties include the diagnosis and treatment of cases of mental diseases as well as clinical and research work in psychiatry.

Previous experience is not required of assistant physicians but two years is required of those seeking the position of first assistant physician.

Full information may be obtained upon application to the State Civil Service Commission, Room 319 State Capitol, Sacramento.

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE WOULD CHANGE NAME

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (AP)—A proposal to change the name of St. Ignatius College to that of University of San Francisco is under consideration of the general board of the Society of Jesuits, it was revealed here today with the return from a five months' European tour of Matt I. Sullivan, former justice of the State Supreme Court. The expansion program, including a twenty-eight-acre addition to the campus, is also under consideration in Rome, Sullivan said.

MINE-WAGE PARLEY PLANNED

BRITISH PRESS HOOK-UP URGED

Empire News Chain Project Topic at Conference

Canadian Presents Matter to Edinburgh Meeting

Development of Dominion's Service Described

EDINBURGH (Scotland) June 21. (AP)—The Imperial Press Conference today opened discussion of the most vital item on its agenda, creation of a better and more effective news link for the British commonwealth of nations.

E. Norman Smith of the Ottawa (Ont.) Journal, submitted the question in a resolution calling for approval by the conference of "the principle of mutual and co-operative interchange of cable news between the component parts of the empire."

The resolution urged careful consideration of the question of a British Empire organization operated and controlled solely by the newspapers of the empire—an organization free from propaganda, untrammeled by any outside influence, and unsubsidized.

The publisher traced development of Canada of an accurate and impartial news service through the Canadian Press, the Dominion's co-operative news gathering and distributing association.

SUBSIDY AT START

For the first few years the Canadian Press had received a subsidy of $50,000 a year from the Dominion government to enable it to bridge and three news gaps of Canada-Saint John, N. B., to Montreal, Que., Ottawa, Ont., to Winnipeg, Man., and Calgary, Alta., to Vancouver, B. C., and link the Dominion with news wires from coast to coast.

It was found, he said, the government was inclined to believe that in return for this $50,000 subsidy there should be some sort of service for the government in power.

"This became irksome," he asserted. "We felt ourselves getting restless under this subsidy. There was suspicion among our general membership, there was suspicion among the general public.

STARTLING RESULT

The subsidy was dropped. The Canadian Press was faced with the task of raising an additional $50,000. There was an extraordinary response from the whole of its membership—a response the membership must take over this $50,000 and that never again would the Canadian Press organization have anything to do with government subsidies," he said.

The result was "simply startling," Mr. Norman Smith proceeded. The membership of the Canadian Press took a new interest in the organization. The Canadian Press developed by leaps and bounds until it now is recognized as the greatest newspaper institution in Canada.

WEST INDIES LINK

The speaker told of the efforts to establish news links between Canada and the British West Indies. The suggestion had been made to the Canadian Press that the British West Indies were in their bailiwick. The directors of the Canadian press were unanimous that something should be done.

J. F. B. Livesay, general manager of the Canadian Press, was authorized to make inquiries, and negotiated with West Indies publishers. The Canadian government authorized officials to see what could be done. The officials reported some change was going on and that "we had better wait," the speaker said.

The Canadian Press waited. Then it was announced in the newspapers a five-year contract had been made without the knowledge of the Canadian Press which apparently would put a check on anything the Canadian Press might wish to do for the West Indies.

"I am wondering," Mr. Norman Smith added, "whether the same sort of thing does not prevail in other parts of the empire. I am wondering whether we have not arrived at that stage where we should not exercise that familiar and much-abused word 'rationalization' in the matter of our news service . . . Is it not possible that our interchange of news throughout the British empire requires to be overhauled?

"What is the solution? Is it in the formation for the British empire of some such organization as the Canadian Press, affiliated with like organizations in each unit of the empire? We have one in Canada—I am informed there is one in New Zealand—and the idea could be developed with a central bureau."

MARRIAGE IDEAS SHOW CHANGE

Women College Students Lean Toward Careers as Years Pass

NEW BRUNSWICK (N. J.) June 21. (AP)—Answer to a questionnaire distributed at the New Jersey College for Women show that the young women's ideas of marriage and a career are subject to change during four years as a student.

The proportion of freshmen students at the college who prefer marriage to a career is 31 to 1, while the figures are exactly reversed for students in their fourth year.

Four-fifths of the seniors, however, believe the girl who wants both marriage and career can combine them successfully.

Marshal Joffre Sees Unveiling of Own Statue

CHANTILLY (France) June 21. (AP)—Marshal Joffre, bent and elderly, today was introduced to a marble reproduction of the robust Gen. Joseph Jacques Cesaire Joffre, savior of France in 1914.

The erect figure, depicting the victor of the Marne as he looked when commander-in-chief of the French armies in the field, contrasted with the 79-year-old dean of the French army as he appears today, but the elderly marshal stood the two-hour ceremony remarkably well despite reports of his declining health.

Navy Veteran Sues Country

PEORIA (Ill.) June 21. (Exclusive)—Damages of $150,000 for injuries sustained during the World War were asked of the United States government in a damage suit filed in Federal Court today for Peter Vermeulen of Moline.

According to the declaration filed in the suit Vermeulen is totally and permanently disabled as a result of an illness and injury he sustained while aboard the U.S.S. Albany, on which he was a third-class fireman.

Rancher Freed in Son's Death

COURTENAY (B. C.) June 21. (AP) Capt. Patrick H. Guthrie, Comox rancher, charged with the murder of his 16-year-old son Patrick was acquitted at a preliminary hearing today.

Young Guthrie died in a hospital a week ago from a wound in the head received when his father threw a piece of wood at him after the boy refused to work around the farm.

LAW CLOTHES NUDE ARTISTS

Annual Paris Parade Barred from Champs Elysees

Prohibited in Neighborhood of Unknown Hero

Ball Held on Outskirts and More Clothing Worn

[Copyright, 1930, by Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 21. (Exclusive)—The Qua'ls Arts ball tonight broke traditions and instead of being held in the Etoile district with the time-honored march up the Champs Elysees, was given in Exposition Hall at the edge of the city.

The decision as to the change of scene was a notification by the new Prefect of Police, M. Chiappe, that he would not stand any more parades of nude artists' models and their friends through the exclusive part of the city, especially in the neighborhood of the Etoile, where the Unknown Soldier is buried. He said that he would not permit the historic rites of naked merrymakers of both sexes bathing in the Place de la Concorde fountains on the return parade to the Latin Quarter at 7 o'clock in the morning as previously.

The organization also changed the policy by making the period of the costumes the Spanish Moorish era of 1492. Heretofore the period has always been Babylonian, Roman, Greek or some other epoch when costumes were remarkable for their brevity, and when the nude was recognized as the proper style. This year's styles were more ample with plenty of draperies.

During the dinner hour tonight the revelers started riding around town, sitting on top of taxis, clad in Moorish costumes and waving fearful weapons, picks, axes, scimitars and shielding fair companions who were singing and waving to passers-by.

Many Americans obtained committee tickets ranging in price from $40 to $100 in order to witness the saturnalia. Others tried to obtain entry by students' tickets costing $2.40, and many failed to run the gauntlet of the committee who asked everyone what atelier he was a member of and to describe the professors and other intimate questions.

Pacific Coast Knights Picked to Visit Europe

SACRAMENTO, June 21. (AP)—St. Francis' General Assembly, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, has been chosen to represent the Pacific Coast on the national post-convention Knights of Columbus pilgrimage to Oberammergau and Rome during the week of August 18. Seven hundred members and their ladies are expected to participate.

The party is to leave the Pacific Coast for Boston August 12, sailing from New York on August 24 and visiting Ireland, England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Austria and Rome.

The national pilgrimage has been sponsored by Shawmut Council of Boston, Spalding Council of Washington, D. C., Phil Sheridan Council of Chicago and other councils.

Old Bell Calls Worshipers to Village Church

ELLICOTTVILLE (N. Y.) June 21. (AP)—For the past ninety-one years a 221-year-old bronze bell has rung forth a daily summons to worship from the belfry of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church here.

Cast at Malaga, Spain, in 1708, it was for some time a part of the chimes in a Spanish monastery. During an insurrection the monastery was destroyed by fire but the bell was salvaged and brought to America with several others as ballast in the hold of a vessel which docked at New York City in 1836.

Two years later it found its way to this village.

BAY STATE TO AID MANY NEEDY AGED

BOSTON, June 21. (Exclusive)—Approximately 8000 aged persons in Massachusetts each year will receive assistance under the provisions of the old-age-assistance law which has recently been adopted by the State. It is estimated by Richard K. Conant, Commissioner of the State Department of Public Welfare, that the cost to the State will be $1,250,000 annually, and to the cities and towns about $1,450,000 a year in addition to the amounts they now spend for old-age relief.

BAN ON BARE ARMS URGED

Land of Cleopatra May Adopt Measure to Guard Public Morals

CAIRO (Egypt) June 21. (AP) Women who appear in short sleeves on the streets of this land of Cleopatra would be liable to imprisonment for "immoral" conduct under a bill presented in Parliament.

The bill stipulates that the offending woman may be warned twice by a husband or guardian, but upon the third offense must be prosecuted.

Conviction will bring a fine of $10 or seven days' imprisonment. All women over 14 years of age come within the bill's provisions.

HELEN DEAN OF PICTURES SUCCUMBS

Two Former Husbands of Hollywood Actress at Death Bed in Bay City

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—Miss Helen Dean, Los Angeles motion-picture actress whose recent marriage to a San Francisco physician was annulled as the anticlimax to a whirlwind courtship, died in Morton Hospital here Thursday night, it became known today. None of the details nor the cause of death were given, but it was admitted both ex-husbands were at the bedside.

Dr. Myron B. Practman, 40 years of age, and fifteen years Miss Dean's senior, saw Miss Dean in a film several months ago and immediately went to Los Angeles to meet her. They were married March 1, last, and Dr. Practman obtained an annulment two months later on the ground she would not consent to becoming domestic.

He denied there had been a reconciliation in her last hours, saying all thought of personal differences had been forgotten at a time like that.

Her first husband was divorced.

DOG BITES MAN; AND IT'S NEWS!

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—So it isn't news if a man gets bit by a dog? Consider the case of Boris Volkov. He went through the World War without injury, rode 1200 miles on horseback across the Mongolian Desert in flight from Siberia after being marked for death and then came to this country where all was peaceful and serene and was bitten by a dog. So he charges in r $5000 damage suit against M. D. Marks, credit manager for a local silk company.

VOODOO SCANDAL EXCITES BRAZIL

IGUAPE (Sao Paulo, Brazil) June 21. (AP)—Police searching the effects of "Uncle Elias," a reputed African voodoo doctor who died here, found notes from several prominent families asking aid in politics, love and other aspirations. They gave the letters to the newspapers and they were printed amid much scandal.

CHANTILLY JOFFRE STATUE UNVEILED

CHANTILLY (France) June 21. (AP)—A statue of Marshal Joffre commemorating his presence here with the French general staff during the first years of the World War was unveiled today. President Doumergue and other notables attended.

SANITY TEST SOUGHT

VALLEJO, June 21. (Exclusive)—Ramona Riley Delaca tonight announced her intention to ask a sanity test of her brother, George Riley, who is under sentence to hang at San Quentin August 15, next, for the murder of a Livermore taxicab driver.

CARRIER BIDS TO BE SOUGHT

Navy Going Ahead on Fourth of Airplane Bearers

New Vessel, of 13,800 Tons, to Cost $19,000,000

Construction Start Held Up by Hoover Orders

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—President Hoover having withdrawn his objection, the Navy announced today it will ask for bids for the construction of a new 13,800-ton $19,000,000 aircraft carrier.

This ship will increase the Navy's carriers to four, since the Lexington, Saratoga and Langley already are in service. The Lexington and Saratoga can carry more than 100 airplanes and displace 33,000 tons, whereas the smaller new carrier will handle only about seventy-five planes.

After the London conference the President ordered that construction of the new carrier, two cruisers and two submarines be delayed, pending Congressional action on the treaty. He has not yet authorized work on the cruisers and submarines.

The Washington treaty allows the United States 135,000 tons in aircraft carriers. With the completion of the new one, for which bids will be received on August 12, next, the total constructed tonnage will be 90,086.

Nearly three years probably will be required to complete the new carrier, which will be first constructed from keel to completion for the purpose of carrying planes. The Lexington and Saratoga were converted into carriers from battle cruisers, while the Langley is a converted experimental ship.

DOOMED ANGELENO KILLER REACHES CELL

SAN QUENTIN, June 21. (AP)—August A. Gingell of Los Angeles, sentenced to hang for murdering his wife and her asserted lover, arrived at the prison here today. The date of his execution was set at August 22, but his appeal is expected to delay it.

Tells How Fat Men Can Lose Half a Pound a Day

Here's a simple way to get rid of that corporation and quickly feel in both body and mind the joy of living.

It's the safe way, too—for every day you continue this easy method of losing unwanted and unneeded flesh you'll gain in energy, vigor and endurance.

"Nine times in ten obesity means inactivity — it means that your blood is starving for the six vital salts your internal organs need to keep you youthful, active, ambitious and keen in mind.

"When you take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts every morning in a glass of hot or cold water you get these six vital salts which modern foods and cooking do not supply.

"Start taking Kruschen Salts—that's the common-sense way to reduce—but don't take them with the idea that they possess reducing qualities in themselves.

This is what they do—they clean out the impurities in your blood by keeping the bowels, kidneys and liver in splendid working shape and fill you with a vigor and tireless energy you'd most forgotten had existed.

The urge for activity will be so marked that even at the end of a hard day's work you'll feel ready for any social activity or recreation—you can play as hard as you work.

And after two weeks your excess flesh starts to go—you'll know it—feel it—see it—the scales will tell the story.

As one, once corpulent man remarked—"I feel so energetic that I want to get up with the lark and I'm just as lively as a cricket."

Kruschen Salts is not a purgative or a cathartic, but a real system conditioner and for those who are the victims of constipation or toxemia its daily use soon means blissful regularity.

Get an 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts—lasts 4 weeks—at any Owl and Liggett Drug Stores or any druggist in the world.—[Advertisement.

SUNBURN MAY BE FATAL

Brooklyn Doctor Warns Heliophobes to Avoid Solar Rays; Sufferers' Loss $1,400,000

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—A warning is issued to heliophobes to keep out of the sunshine this summer. Dr. Charles F. Pabst of Greenpoint Hospital, Brooklyn, says:

"A heliophobe is one whose skin is morbidly sensitive to the effects of the sun's rays, and whose skin will redden, blister and burn, but never tan. A heliophobe should not try to become a bronze Venus or Adonis."

Dr. Pabst has five rules both for those who wish to avoid danger of sunburn and for those who desire a fashionable tan.

Acquire a coat of tan by short exposures.

If your skin will not tan, you are a heliophobe, and should not expose yourself, as every new exposure means a new burn.

Do not sleep on the beach in the direct rays of the sun.

When fishing or sailing, remember the water reflects the ultra-violet light which may burn you.

During June, July and August protect yourself from direct rays of the sun, as a severe case of sunburn may cause serious illness, and even death.

"Every year," Dr. Pabst says, "200,000 working days are lost because of illness due to sunburn, which represents an annual loss of $1,400,000."

REALTORS GET LAST WARNING

State Official Declares Quiz Must Be Passed by the 30th Inst.

SACRAMENTO, June 21. (AP)—Several thousand California real estate salesmen are going to be out of jobs unless they pass written examinations for State licenses before July 1, T. A. Kelly, deputy Real Estate Commissioner, declared in issuing a warning here.

Temporary licenses issued since January 1 to salesmen who have not taken the examination will be void July 1, Kelly said. It is unlawful for a licensed broker to pay compensation to an unlicensed salesman, and brokers may lose their licenses if salesmen in their employ are not qualified.

Examinations have been conducted at 56 branches of the State Real Estate Department in Fresno, Oakland, San Francisco, San Diego and Los Angeles, as well as in other cities by traveling deputies. Examinations may be taken at any time in the main office at Sacramento, Kelly said.

GRANDMOTHER DIES IN PEW AT WEDDING

PITTSBURGH, June 21. (AP)—Miss Florence Hamilton sought her grandmother's congratulations today after her marriage to Murray Thompson in the Plum Creek Presbyterian Church at New Texas, near here. It was not until then the wedding party discovered the grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Jane McComb, 76 years of age, had died in her pew as the ceremony went on.

PATROL FOR RACES RAMS TWO YACHTS

Coast Guard Plane and Cutter Crash Craft at New London Regatta

NEW LONDON (Ct.) June 21. (Exclusive)—A Coast Guard seaplane with engines racing full speed as it lifted from the water crashed into the yacht Whiz, owned by S. C. Davis of St. Louis, Mo., in the harbor here shortly before noon today. Three persons were injured.

It was the second crash of the day in which the Coast Guard figured, its cutter No. 289 earlier having rammed and sunk the yacht Anna, owned by David Shield of Fisher Island, throwing nine persons into the harbor waters.

The plane had climbed fifteen feet in the air when it slashed through the forward rigging, bridge and cabin of the Davis yacht, turned over and fell wrong side up in the water.

Flying glass cut Milton Beal, skipper of the yacht; Harold Cooper and Fred Beal, who were taken with the plane pilot and passenger, Lieut. N. M. Nelson and Lieutenant Commander Eugene A. Coffin, to the Coast Guard sick bay at Gloucester, Mass.

Mrs. Margaret Post of Saybrook, Ct., was the only person injured when the Anna sank, although along with eight others she floundered in the water until the cutter picked them up. Other yachtsmen, crowding the harbor for the New London-Bermuda races, kept a weather eye out for the rest of the day for Coast Guard craft.

LAUNDRESSES HIT BY ELEPHANTIASIS

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Discovery that the laundresses of Porto Rico are subject to elephantiasis is announced at Columbia University.

It is part of Columbia's study of tropical diseases at the School of Tropical Medicine of the University of Porto Rico.

Dr. Francis W. O'Connor of Columbia reports the finding that 75 per cent of those infected with the disease are either laundry workers or residents in homes of laundresses.

PHILADELPHIA, June 21. (AP)—Announcement of the appointment of Dr. W. Edward Chamberlain, professor of medicine in charge of radiology at the medical school of Leland Stanford University, to the staff of the school of medicine of Temple University was made tonight by Dr. William N. Parkinson, dean of the school and director of Temple Medical Center. Dr. Chamberlain will assume his new duties as professor of Roentgenology and radiology October 1.

BOAT TRAGEDY BLIGHTS PICNIC

Craft Upsets With Two Men and Six Children

Fathers Drown, Youngsters Make Shore Safely

Wives Vainly Await Return With Lunch Prepared

FRESNO, June 21. (Exclusive)—Tragedy today brought to a dramatic close a picnic at Mendota, forty miles west of here, in honor of the birthday anniversary of Joe Scheidt, when he and his brother, Edward, were drowned.

With six children of their respective families, the two men were fishing in Fresno Slough from a motor boat when the craft capsized. The slough is the channel which connects Kings River with the San Joaquin at Mendota.

Unable to swim, both men soon became exhausted by their frantic efforts to reach shore and sank. One of the larger boys made a valiant effort to save his father, Joseph Scheidt, but because of the elder man's weight, the youngster's efforts were futile, and he was barely able to save himself, because of exhaustion, from his effort.

Three of the other children swam ashore and experienced no ill effects from their spill into the water, and a fourth, unable to swim, clung to a milk can and was towed ashore by another brother.

Other fishermen, attracted by the cries of the children, hurried to the scene, but were unable to save the men. Constable Tony Avila of Mendota was notified and called Coroner Kennedy and other county officers from this city, who, with a large number of volunteers, began a search of the stream for the bodies, which had not been recovered at a late hour.

The two men were drowned while their return was being awaited a few miles up the stream by their respective wives and a sister, who were preparing the picnic lunch against the time when the men and children would return from their fishing expedition.

DISABLED VETERANS ASSEMBLE

Five Thousand Converge at New Orleans to Hold Annual Convention

NEW ORLEANS, June 21. (AP)—To war-time tunes, the disabled veterans of the World War, 5000 strong, today began the "occupation" of New Orleans to mingle again in annual convention and to battle for adequate care for the blind and maimed trench victims.

In the line of march of a parade a cheer went up for Capt. Herman Weimen, a D.S.C., with the Heines Chapter No. 10 of the Chicago unit, who is mentioned for 1931 national commander.

Business sessions of the convention will open Monday to addresses by Maj.-Gen. Frank T. Hines, chief of the Veterans' Bureau, who will discuss proposed establishment of a diagnostic center in New Orleans.

The diagnostic center, a $10,000,000 undertaking, would provide medical and surgical investigation for wounded heroes of the South.

Retiring Commander William J. Murphy of Santa Ana, Cal., paid an official call on Mayor T. S. Wamsley, himself a veteran.

ARREST IN LINGLE CASE ANTICIPATED

Gangster Hunted Far and Wide as Murderer of "Tribune" Reporter

CHICAGO, June 21. (Exclusive) Police and detectives tonight are hunting far and wide in this territory for James B. (Red) Forsythe, also known as Fawcett, one of the city's toughest hoodlums, as the murderer of Alfred (Jake) Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, who was shot to death the 9th inst.

This became known tonight while the search was at its height, and the authorities were expecting hourly to place Forsythe under arrest. Forsythe, identified as the blond young man who killed Lingle in the subway at Randolph street, is known as a hardened gunman, 24 years of age, an associate of killers and union-labor racketeers, and a man whose service for a job of murder may be obtained at a price.

Five Convicted in Hungarian Poison Plots

SZOLNOK (Hungary) June 21. (AP) Five persons were convicted here today of having poisoned their parents or other relatives in a notorious series of poisoning cases that have been going to trial over a period of several months. Two women were sentenced to death.

Josef Madarasz, accomplice in murdering his father, was sentenced to life imprisonment and his wife to eight years. For a similar offense Laszlo Szabo also was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Szabo's wife, convicted not only of murdering her father but of persuading Madarasz and his wife to murder his, was sentenced to death.

The village midwife, named Szordas, also was sentenced to death for furnishing the poison for the murders.

WOMAN ACQUITTED

PLENTYWOOD (Mont.) June 21. Wanda Hass, accused of the murder of her uncle, Hugo Hass, prominent rancher of the Outlook district, was acquitted this afternoon by a jury in District Court. The jury was out twenty-six minutes.

FARADAY DIARY TELLS OWN AWE

Electric Power Discoverer Describes Experiment

Regarded as World's Greatest Benefactor

Hundredth Anniversary of Test to be Observed

ITHACA (N. Y.) June 21. (AP)—Just a slight doubt, an inkling that here was something important, describes the emotions of Michael Faraday at the moment he made one of the world's greatest discoveries, how to produce electric power.

His thoughts are revealed from his diary, which was read to the American Physical Society here by Sir Henry Bragg, British scientist. Faraday, regarded by many scientists as the modern world's greatest practical benefactor, the "father of electricity," made this discovery in 1831. Next year, on the one hundredth anniversary of the date, a world-wide celebration will be sponsored by many branches of science.

Electricity had been known for a very long time, but no one could produce it in working quantities. For generations the best scientists had been failing, when Faraday had the thought that by using coils and magnets he might produce a current.

WHAT DIARY SAYS

His diary at this point picks up the story told by Sir Henry. It is dated August 29, 1831, on "experiments on the production of electricity from magnetism, etc., etc." It reads as follows:

"Have had an iron ring made (soft iron) iron round and seven-eighths inches thick and ring six inches in external diameter. Wound many coils of copper wire round, one-half the coils being separated by twine and calico. There were three lengths of wire, each about twenty-four feet long, and they could be connected as one length or used as separate lengths. I will call this side of the ring 'A.'

"On the other side, but separated by an interval was wound wire in two pieces, together amounting to about sixty feet in length, the direction being as with the former coils. This side call 'B.'

NEEDLE ATTRACTED

"When all was ready the moment the battery was communicated with both ends of wire at 'A' side, the helix strongly attracted the needle; after a few vibrations it came to a state of rest in its original and natural position, and then on breaking the battery connection the needle was as strong repelled, and after a few oscillations came to rest in the same place as before.

"Hence effect indirect but transient, but its recurrence on breaking the connections shows an equilibrium somewhere that must be capable of being rendered more distinct.

"May not these transient effects be connected with causes of difference between power of metals in rest and in motion in Aragos experiments?"

This was the clew to the dynamo, although Faraday did not fully realize it. He had been looking for a continuous current, but the only results came when he broke his connections. Those effects were so slight that he put them aside.

Later he went back to the study of this slight deviation, curious about it, and so developed a machine that produced electric current, the forerunner of the dynamo.

FEELING OF AWE

After he realized that here was the long-sought power, Faraday writes:

"It almost was with a feeling of awe that I went to work—for if the hope should prove well founded, how great and mighty and sublime in its hitherto unchangeable character is the force I am trying to deal with, and how large may the new domain of knowledge that may be opened to the mind of man."

The diary reveals Faraday's dreams forecasting nearly a century in advance some of the latest discoveries of Einstein. He writes that gravitation and electricity probably are related. He thinks that possibly heat may prove to be a result of, or related to, gravitation. He foresees something fundamental, though still unguessed, running through all substance, which he thinks man will discover ultimately, and which will explain very simply how all substance is created.

Proxy for Pope at Eucharistic Meet at Omaha

OMAHA, June 21. (AP)—Pope Pius XI will be personally represented at the sixth national eucharistic congress here September 22 to 25, by Most Reverend Pietro Pumasoni-Biondi, apostolic delegate to the United States, it was announced today.

The apostolic delegate has accepted the invitation of Rt. Rev. Joseph Schrembs, D.D., bishop of Cleveland and protector of the Priests' Eucharistic League, to celebrate the solemn pontifical mass of the blessed sacrament which will open the Congress, Rt. Rev. Joseph F. Rummel, bishop of Omaha, said.

Four archbishops, twenty-five bishops and more than 1000 priests have signified intention of attending the meet, the first national congress in nineteen years, Bishop Rummel said.

Cunard Plans Fastest Liner

OTTAWA (Ont.) June 21. (AP)—The Cunard Line has let a contract for a proposed new superexpress liner, the Department of Trade and Commerce has been advised. A Clyde Banks shipyard at Glasgow was the successful bidder.

Although official figures have not been released, it is understood the specifications call for a liner 1000 feet long, of 75,000 tons, and to attain a speed of thirty knots. It would be the largest, fastest ship afloat. The cost of the new liner will be about $30,000,000.

TREND OF AERO INDUSTRY TOLD

Kinner Company Chief Sees Upturn Ahead

Says Surplus Stocks from 1929 Reduced

Conclusion Based on Visit to Eastern Plants

Airplane manufacturers for the most part have succeeded in substantially reducing their surplus stocks accumulated during last year's peak production and are now turning their attention to the development of improved types of faster ships, Robert Porter, president of the Kinner Airplane and Motor Corporation, who has just returned from a ten days' airplane trip to eastern aviation factories, said yesterday.

While the recent depression has eliminated many of the smaller manufacturers, it has left the industry in stronger hands, Mr. Porter said. The executives of the larger companies are not anticipating any marked upturn, but rather a gradual progress to profitable operations during the course of the next year or two, he added. They hold the opinion that the future of aviation is assured because the industry is offering the most efficient and superior means of transportation that business as well as the general public can employ.

SPEED, SAFETY, AIM

With the exception of transport planes, the general impression in the industry at present is that there will be no radical change in airplane designs and that the improvements will be based on efforts to increase speed and safety, according to Mr. Porter, who said several leading manufacturers are now concentrating on improved, faster ships to be powered with Kinner motors. While speed is not a factor in training ships, the time has come when sports and business planes must develop a higher cruising speed, Mr. Porter said.

The Kinner company is in a position to manufacture 400 of the smaller motors and 100 of the larger motors monthly and with the expected improvement in the industry generally will be able to show a substantial margin of profit on its production, the official said. The factory has just installed a General Electric dynamometer at a cost of approximately $25,000, which is designed to measure accurately the performance of airplane engines under simulated flying conditions, and through its use the Kinner company is expecting to increase the horsepower of its motors without increasing their weight.

NAVY ORDER FILLED

The company has just completed the last four motors ordered for navy training purposes. The Army and Navy placed a total order of fifty-four Kinner motors for training ships and additional orders are anticipated from this source. Approximately 100 motors are on hand and the factory is on a curtailed production basis. While orders on hand total more than 1000, Mr. Porter said that there was considerable question as to how many of these orders the manufacturers would be able to accept this year. The company to date this year has shipped 190 motors.

Cash and accounts receivable of the company exceed its total indebtedness, while current assets, including inventory, are more than six times total liabilities, Mr. Porter said, in stating that the company was in a sound condition.

Canada Buying Own Securities

NEW YORK, June 21. (Exclusive) Heavy purchases of Canadian securities, originally offered in this market by American banking groups have been made here this week by Canadian interests taking advantage of the depressed condition of the stock market and the lower tendency in corporation bonds. During the last few days many short-term Canadian municipal loans have been made by Canadian banks without the aid of Wall street, which, according to bankers here, is an indication that Canada in the future will be less dependent upon New York for new financing.

It is notable that American banking groups offering Canadian provincial, municipal, railroad and corporation loans have included several Canadian banks and that the latter have almost invariably placed more than their share of the securities offered in the home market.

Supply Houses in Merger Move

PITTSBURGH, June 21.—Negotiations for the consolidation of the Spang, Chalfant & Co., Inc., and the National Supply Company have been completed, it was reported here today. Formal announcement will be made next week after final approval by National Supply directors. National Supply will offer to exchange one-half share of its common stock and one-half share of its preferred stock for every three and one-fourth shares of Spang-Chalfant common. Spang-Chalfant preferred stocks and bonds will not be affected by the merger.

EXCHANGE REPORTS TRADING VOLUME

Trading on the floor of the California Stock Exchange from the 2nd to the 20th inst. showed a total of 100,086 shares with a market value of $729,912.14, according to a report issued yesterday by Jacob Nathan, manager. The board of governors of the exchange has admitted to membership Albert E. Haase and James F. Shields, both of Fillmore.

North American Building-Loan in New Merger

North American Building-Loan Association of Los Angeles has acquired the Metropolitan Guarantee Building and Loan Association of San Francisco with assets of more than $1,000,000, it was announced yesterday. The North American already has a San Francisco office and will operate the Metropolitan office as an additional branch.

This acquisition increases the resources of the North American to approximately $8,000,000 and is in line with an aggressive expansion policy followed by the institution. Last April a consolidation with Prudential Building and Loan Association which had resources in excess of $3,000,000 was effected.

With the inclusion of the Metropolitan office North American now operates seven branches which are located in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, Ventura and Eureka. F. M. Greenwood, former president of the Metropolitan, has been elected to the advisory board along with several other former directors. J. L. Van Norman is chairman of the North American and H. T. Dennis, president.

STEWART STALWART IN OIL

Death of Union President Takes Outstanding Figure from Ranks of Petroleum Industry

BY EARLE E. CROWE

Passing of W. L. Stewart yesterday removes from the petroleum business one of its sturdiest and most respected figures. Throughout the industry his management of the Union Oil Company of California has been thoroughly appreciated by his contemporaries, and the company he leaves stands as tangible testimony of an outstanding career devoted to oil.

He was recognized as one of the most successful of independents. While many others have failed to survive the hazards of drilling for and marketing of oil, the Union Oil Company has come through the booms and depressions of a fast-changing industry with a national reputation for financial strength and sound management.

EXPANSION SURE

For sixteen years the destiny of the company founded by his father had been in Mr. Stewart's hands as president. During this time the Union Oil Company has expanded slowly but with inflexible purpose into all fields and markets calculated to make the Union a stronger and more roftable enterprise.

With this record of strength and conservatism, it is not unnatural that Mr. Stewart's administration of the company has been productive of trust and faith from thousands of investors, particularly in Southern California. For years, Union Oil shares have been regarded in this community as a sound investment by small and large investors alike. In such a speculative business as oil, this reputation is a genuine tribute to the Stewart management.

Cognizant of the large investment interest in his company, Mr. Stewart steadfastly refused to enter into any alliances or commitments that might cost him the faith of his stockholders. Built into one of the outstanding independent oil companies, the Union has been frequently sought by others to enter into consolidations. He had always said that he knew what the company was worth, and he would never submit a consolidation offer to stockholders unless this figure was met. Nor would he ever listen to proposals involving the sale of controlling interest, which would leave the minority to shift for itself.

THREAT RESISTED

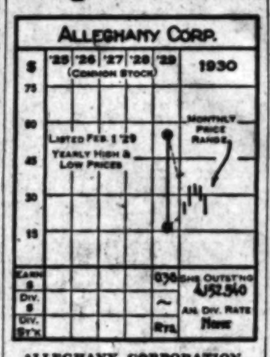
When the Union Oil Company was threatened with possible absorption by the Royal Dutch-Shell interests through open-market purchases, he led an aggressive and spectacular fight that resulted in the rout of the invaders. Stockholders responded quickly to his appeal for the formation of a voting trust, which still exists as the Union Oil Associates.

Shortly after Mr. Stewart became president of the Union Oil Company in 1914, it became apparent that too rapid expansion had impaired the cash position. He promptly met the emergency by suspending dividends for two years. This lesson remained uppermost in the policies of his management, for the Union has emphasized strong cash position, liberal depreciation and depletion, and a dividend rate adequately protected by earnings.

Stockholders, however, have fared comfortably. From January 1, 1900, to December 31, 1929, the cash dividends averaged 7.79 per cent and the stock dividend 4.91 per cent on the average amount of stock outstanding, or a return of 12.7 per cent annually over the thirty-year period.

In this record is the story of Stewart custodianship over funds intrusted by stockholders.

WHAT'S BEHIND YOUR STOCK



ALLEGHANY CORPORATION

Since its inception in January, 1929, as a railroad-holding company controlled by the Van Sweringen brothers of Cleveland, Alleghany Corporation has rapidly arisen to a position of dominant importance in railway affairs. In the recent addition of a majority ownership of the Missouri Pacific Railroad to its holdings of the Chesapeake and Ohio, New York, Chicago and St. Louis, Hocking Valley, Pere Marquette and Erie railways, the possibilities of a transcontinental system are seen. Under the aggressive management of the Van Sweringen interests the roads are rapidly being developed in point of service, operating efficiency, and conditions of roadbed and equipment.

For the ten and one-half months of operation in 1929 a net income from investments of $3,663,300, or 38 cents per common share was reported. If profit on sale of securities is included, the amount available per share is 52 cents. Nothing is included to show the equity in the undistributed earnings of controlled companies or the unrealized appreciation of investment holdings over their cost price.

CAPITALIZATION

NORFOLK RAIL GROSS INCOME DECREASES

NEW YORK, June 21.—Norfolk and Western Railway will report gross income of approximately $8,300,000 for May as against $9,874,189 for the same month last year, A. C. Needles, president, said today. Net operating income was about $3,050,000, against $3,865,101 and net income after charges and taxes about $2,100,000, against $3,682,898, he added.

BROKERS FEEL MART PULSE

Vein of Pessimism Runs Through Opinions of Stock Exchange Member Houses

What Spring-street brokers think of the present condition of the stock market and the probable future course of prices, is summarized in the following opinions:

The range of stock prices was very low during the past week with extreme pessimism prevailing all over the country, due partly to the weakness in the commodity markets and partly to the activities of a strong bear party always attempting to force liquidation. Many people are using the years 1893 and 1907 as a basis for comparison with conditions this year. There is absolutely no similarity between conditions this year and those in 1893 and 1907. In 1893 large armies of unemployed marched to Washington from all parts of the country on foot, floated down rivers on rafts, or riding on stolen freight trains, sleeping at night in whatever town they happen to arrive, and having committees wait on the Mayor of the town attempting forcibly to levy supplies for twenty-four hours. There was also the failure of the big English banking house of Baring Brothers, resulting in a large number of bank failures in the Pacific Northwest. In 1907 the banking situation in the United States was far from stable, brought about partly in New York City by the Morse situation and the failure of the Knickerbocker Trust Company and banks failing all over the country. Call money was 125 per cent. No cash withdrawals were permitted and many bank depositors were paid in scrip. Conditions today in no way parallel 1893 and 1907. Call money is 2½ per cent, with money in abundance for all legitimate enterprises. While both industrials and rails have shown poor earnings, have not the present prices of many stocks discounted all this? The market today in good stocks is as much deflated as it was inflated during the summer months of 1929. The statement by Mr. Mellon regarding the tariff is reassuring. Looking beyond the unsettlement caused by the current depression in business, we believe that the development of the next few months will be, on the whole, constructive.—J. D. Kennedy, H. J. Barneson & Co.

Good news is being overlooked now and the public seems determined to accept only the full value of every piece of unfavorable news that makes its appearance. The weakness of the market on any rallies and the presence of a strongly pessimistic attitude on the part of most traders, gives indication that some lower levels can be expected. As has proven the case time and again before, however, the individual who has the courage to step in and buy good stocks on current recessions will be rewarded handsomely in months and years to come.—Wilcox Drake, Wilcox Drake & Co.

Careful checking of the stock market situation reveals considerable covering. There are still large blocks of borrowed stock outstanding. It is a question whether the large bear pool has covered, leaving the outside trader still short. The size of the short interest and confidence of bears may indicate that the bear pool has not yet covered. Buying is apparently not as confident as selling. Some sources believe a secondary reaction will follow, carrying prices below November, 1929, levels. Traders should sell on any bulges, but long-pull investors will do well to buy on these breaks.—Fred P. Schader, Dean Witter & Co.

The failure of Wednesday's rally to hold and the manner in which the market ignored the reduction in the Federal Reserve Bank rate increased pessimism. At the end of the week bearish traders were apparently redoubling their efforts to force liquidation, with plenty of indications that a number of the leading industrials did not make their lows on Wednesday, but will have to find real support levels at lower figures. The spoken word, irrespective of the source, no longer acts as a stimulant to sentiment. Wall street has reached the conclusion that it must await economic and statistical indices of business recovery before the market reverses trend.—Norman B. Courtenay, E. A. Pierce & Co.

With more real cash available in this country than ever known in history, and with interest rates at a record minimum, it is reasonable to expect very heavy investment buying of securities at these low levels, regardless of the fact that the downward momentum of the market may still carry prices somewhat lower before a firm bottom is established.—Franklin H. Donnell, Jones, Hubbard & Donnell, Inc.

Three relatively bullish developments during the week failed to have any material effect upon the market. The logical conclusion is that the public is more concerned with business developments than any other factor and not until improved conditions are witnessed will it become a buyer of stocks. The outlook is still of a bearish nature. Stock sponsors cannot be expected to support their issues at high levels and materially add to their holdings when fundamental conditions are against them. Second-quarter earnings statements undoubtedly will be bad and the market is preparing itself for the same. Dividend rates will have to be cut in many instances.

The market continues to be one for the nimble trader and offers daily trading opportunities.—Frank F. Hargear, Sutro & Company.

In our estimation, the culmination of the secondary decline in the prevailing bear market is not far in the future. There is every indication that so far as general averages are concerned, somewhat lower levels will yet be witnessed. The market has reached the stage where reassuring utterances are apparently disregarded, no matter how much weight they should be expected to have ordinarily. The warning we feel justified in sounding at this time is, not to be carried away by an excess of pessimism in the coming months. There are a host of really worthwhile, long-term investment opportunities now available in high-grade common stocks. Conservative purchases are recommended at and below prevailing levels.—Frank L. Gardner, Banks, Huntley & Co.

Frequent outbursts of selling followed by feeble rallies featured a somewhat turbulent week in the stock market that wound up with average prices near the low point and within striking distance of the figures reached in the November break. In the absence of any marked improvement in business we see nothing to lift the main body of prices in the immediate future. Individual stocks not affected by the general trend may be selected, however, with confidence that they will bring ample reward later, but such selections should be made only after careful analysis and investigation.—John O. Knight, Los Angeles Investment Securities Company.

HUMBLE OIL TO CONTINUE PURCHASING

Plan to Suspend Buying of Crude in Six Texas Counties Abandoned

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Unsettling reports of serious dissension in the views of oil exporters over alleged shading of prices and increased Russian and Rumanian sales were counterbalanced today by a favorably interpreted announcement that the Humble Oil and Refining Company has changed its mind about withdrawing as a crude-oil purchaser in six Texas counties on July 1, next.

Reports of disagreement among exporters were attributed to European sources. A check here disclosed one Midcontinent gasoline producer recently sold a number of gasoline cargoes for European destination at a price below the recognized export quotation. It was pointed out also that last year, Sir Henry Deterding, general managing director of the Royal Dutch-Shell Company, a member of the Petroleum Export Association, had in his recent annual report said that gasoline was being sold abroad below the price at American ports.

Announcement that Humble Oil would rescind its previously announced intention of withdrawing as a purchaser in six Texas counties was made by W. S. Parish, president, to a group of operators The decision had been reached, he said, on account of failure of the company's announcement to result in bringing forward another purchaser to take over these connections, as the company had hoped. He added that although the action will cause the company to purchase some unwanted oil, the company would rather reverse itself than leave these operators uncared for. The six Texas counties are Wichita, Archer, Wilbarger, Carson, Hutchinson and Gray.

Commodity and Stock Collapse Week's Feature

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Another week of ruthless grinding down of prices in most of the organized markets of the world has destroyed resistance points of long standing and convinced a large portion of the financial community of Wall street that something fundamental is going on in world economics.

Prices of shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange, in the aggregate, have been reduced to the lowest levels since November, with many individual shares the lowest in several years. Chicago wheat and New York cotton prices have been reduced to the levels of 1914. Sugar futures have gone below all low levels ever recorded on the New York market. The decline in bar silver has carried further, making still new historical records.

How much the break in stocks has influenced wheat and cotton, and how far wheat and cotton have influenced stocks is a question which cannot readily be answered.

Prominent bankers are inclined to the opinion that world production capacity has outstripped normal consumptive capacity.

Security House to Open Branch

Pacific Co., investment banking house affiliated with the Pacific Finance Corporation, will open a Pasadena office tomorrow in the Pacific Southwest Bank Building, Francis E. Baer, president, announced yesterday.

Karl C. Vesper, Pasadena bond man, has been appointed resident manager. Mr. Vesper was for many years connected with Bond, Goodwin & Tucker, and more recently has been associated with E. H. Rollins & Sons in Pasadena. The new office will be the fifth of a Statewide chain of the Pacific Co.

BANKER HONORED

W. A. Polk, junior vice-president of the Bank of America of California, has been appointed chairman of the national public-speaking committee of the American Institute of Banking, which closed its convention yesterday in Denver, Colo.

DIVIDEND PASSED

ST. LOUIS, June 21.—Central Coal and Coke Company today passed the quarterly dividend of $1.25 on its preferred stock due at this time.

SWINDLERS FIND METHOD TO FIT ALL CONDITIONS

Swindlers find ways to swindle the gullible in dull times as well as prosperous periods, but change their methods to suit conditions, the National Better Business Bureau points out in a statement warning the public against current fraudulent schemes.

Pernicious swindling schemes, the bureau reports, are thriving on an appeal to unemployed to "earn money at home" by a method which requires the purchase of a kit, set of samples or some paraphernalia from the swindler, whose interest lies in selling this equipment rather than furnishing employment. There is usually a promise to refund the purchase price of this equipment after a stated amount of orders have been taken, but the "employee" doesn't realize how hollow this promise is until he tries to obtain the refund.

Vendors of "bargains" are finding their trade especially good since business depression set in and when everyone is trying to make a dollar go as far as possible. A nation-wide warning is going forward this week from the National Better Business Bureau in its weekly poster to industrial employees regarding the "whispering peddlers" of woolen goods. In this scheme the peddler has several pieces of suiting materials in suit lengths on his arm. He tells his prospect that they were smuggled into the country and since he is short of funds he will sell "the genuine English materials" at about half what they are worth. The bureau's poster announces that these goods are made right here in America and that frequently they can be found in suits selling in low-price credit stores for about $25.

This scheme does not stop with the swindling of employees, the bureau finds. Executives of the industries and the employers as well are often "taken in" by the clever salesmen.

HOPEFUL ECONOMIC STRAW

Easing of Mortgage Money Held Responsible for Sharp Building Pick-up in June

BY JOHN F. SINCLAIR

[Copyright, 1930, by the North American Newspaper Alliance]

NEW YORK, June 21.—I asked Fenton B. Turck, Jr., vice-president of the American Radiator Company and chairman of the executive committee of the national survey conference, for his views regarding the present condition of building construction in the United States.

"Residential construction is the weak spot. In April it reached the low ebb of minus 31 per cent, as compared with April of last year," said Mr. Turck. "May showed a 39 per cent drop under May of 1929. For the first five days of June residential contracts were 32 per cent under the like period of 1929."

"What about nonresidential construction—classes exclusive of public works and utilities?"

"January showed the lowest ebb so far this year, at 29.3 per cent below that of 1929. In May the same class of construction was 19.2 per cent less than last year. But the first five days in June were away ahead of the same period of 1929—about 34.8 per cent."

"What has caused the construction decline?" he was asked.

"Tight mortgage money was a major factor for the first three months, but this now is changing and funds are becoming more available each month, with loaning institutions showing increasing liberalness to good borrowers."

Not a bad report in these days—surely.

Martin J. Insull, brother of Samuel Insull and president of the Middle Western Utilities Company, sees a continuation of cheap money and a change in the financing of public utilities over the next few years.

"I look for a continuance of the lower money rates," says Mr. Insull. "But I believe we are in for a good bond market in the very near future, which will enable us to finance our operations more cheaply than in the past."

When asked if he expected to continue to sell preferred stock to his customers he replied: "Yes, but maturing obligations will take up the major portion of our new financing."

Most public utility operators favor State, rather than national, regulation. Mr. Insull is no exception. Insisting that State regulation has not failed, this Chicago public utility operator said:

"There is no justification for Federal regulation of our industry except in cases where State bodies cannot agree, and such cases are very rare."

From reports so far announced the public utility industry will show up as well during 1930 as probably any other, with few notable exceptions—like amusements and life insurance.

New Financial Unit Launched in Local Field

Metropolitan Associates, Ltd., which will act as a holding company and which will operate and control a number of subsidiary companies, has been incorporated by a group of well-known Los Angeles business men. Headquarters for the new company have been established in the Bank of Commerce Building.

H. H. Shields, president, announced yesterday that Metropolitan Associates has been given permission by the State Corporation Commissioner to issue 10,000 shares of 7 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock, 10,000 shares of Class A common stock, no par value, and 25,000 shares of Class B common stock, no par value.

The first subsidiary company to be organized by Metropolitan Associates will be an industrial loan company, which will specialize in loans to wage-earners and salaried people.

The advisory committee of Metropolitan Associates is comprised of Maurice S. Hellman, vice-chairman Security-First National Bank; Eric M. Leaf, president National Bank of Commerce, and C. I. D. Moore, vice-president Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company. Officers are Lou Anger, chairman; Richard W. Fewel, chairman executive committee; H. H. Shields, president; Rutherford D. Moore, executive vice-president; S. Jack Hellman, vice-president and treasurer; I. H. Lyons, vice-president; Charles H. Lathrop, vice-president; Edwin Heizman, secretary.

Cotton Hit by Heat and Long Drought Period

MEMPHIS, June 21. (Exclusive) Young cotton throughout the entire belt with the exception of isolated spots in the upper Atlantic section has had a bad week. Record high temperatures and continuation of the protracted drought have seriously retarded the plant and added the threat of serious crop impairment. Overnight reports showed showers, local and light in widely separated localities. Temperatures over the latter part of the week-end have been from 2 to 15 deg. above normal for the season and throughout the mid-South and in the delta of Mississippi have established June records.

Rain is needed badly throughout the entire central belt.

In the Memphis area young plants are wilting and the Weather Bureau offers no hope of relief.

The true condition of the market throughout the South is reflected in Hester's statement for the week, which showed mill takings of only 113,000 bales, against 241,000 last year, making the total 13,078,000, against 15,440,448 last year. Visible supply was placed at 3,637,834 bales, against 2,532,401 at the same date last year.

That the cold weather did not kill all the weevil throughout the Central Mississippi Valley is becoming more apparent every day. Reports from different parts of the Mississippi and South Arkansas sections, Alabama and Louisiana indicate a widespread emergence. Precautionary measures are being taken.

Penney System Reduces Prices

NEW YORK, June 21. (Exclusive) J. C. Penney Company has announced new low prices throughout its lines of merchandise. The store announcements stated that since last October America has been passing through a period of depression, a condition that has caused unemployment, retrenchment and downward revision of prices. To meet this condition, to stimulate industry and to reduce unemployment, the company has radically revised prices downward throughout its stores, it was stated.

When questioned regarding the possible effects of this Penney sales drive, officials of Sears-Roebuck and Montgomery Ward said that their downward price adjustments have already been made in the mid-summer flyer catalogues which went out about May 20, last.

Rail Surplus Higher in May

NEW YORK, June 21.—Chesapeake and Ohio Railway including Hocking Valley Railway today reported May surplus of $3,260,093 after charges as against $2,971,211 in the same month last year, bringing the total surplus for the first five months to $12,238,805 as against $12,337,504.

The net income for the five months is equal after dividend requirements on the 6½ per cent preferred stock to $8 a share on 1,529,582 common shares outstanding as against $8.06 a share in the same period of last year on the same share basis.

EXCHANGE RULES ON SALT STOCK RIGHTS

NEW YORK, June 21.—International Salt Company stock will be quoted ex-rights on the New York Stock Exchange the 30th inst. and the rights admitted to trading on that date. The rights must be settled on July 8 and will expire July 21. American Hawaiian Steamship Company stock will not be quoted ex-dividend of $6 on the New York Stock Exchange until July 16.

BORDEN MAY ACQUIRE TORONTO DAIRY UNIT

MONTREAL, June 21.—Negotiations have been under way looking toward the absorption of City Dairy Company of Toronto by the Borden Company, it is reported here. At present it is not known whether these overtures will result in an acceptable offer by the Borden Company.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Cotton lost a good part of its recent rallies during the day's trading, owing to continued good weather, disappointing Liverpool cables, and declines in the grain and stock markets.

There was liquidation by earlier week buyers with a renewal of local and scattered selling which supplied a moderate demand from shorts and the trade, and sent prices off to 13.01 for July and 12.97 for the new October. July closed at 13.00 and the new October at 12.97, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 36 to 38 points.

Bandits Caught in Utah Chase

SALT LAKE CITY, June 21. (AP) Two bandits, who gave their names as Earl J. Hobson, 30 years of age, and T. B. Wise, 30, Portland, Or., were captured late tonight at Brigham City, sixty miles north of here, after they had shot and kidnaped a motorcycle patrolman here and committed three robberies and a hold-up in a wild dash through Northern Utah.

Their capture was effected when their car broke down in Brigham City and they took it to a garage for repairs. When arrested in a cafe the bandits confessed, officers said, that they had shot Daley and committed the robberies.

Chicago Plane in Eleventh Day

CHICAGO, June 21. (AP)—Hundreds of spectators visited the Skyharbor airport today as the City of Chicago sailed into its eleventh day of flight and approached its own record of 261 hours, set in an endurance flight last summer.

The ten-day mark was passed at 4:40 p.m. with no indication the plane or pilots, Kenneth and John Hunter, brothers, are weakening.

New Form of Charter Urged for Bay Cities

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—This city's unofficial committee on charter revision, which hopes to have a proposal for a new civic document placed on the November election ballot, has been advised by its research authorities to prepare a combined city manager and council form of government. The suggested form of government would limit the powers of the present Board of Supervisors to legislation and civil policy determination; increase the appointive power of the Mayor, reform the Board of Public Works of all jurisdiction over public utilities, change a number of offices from elective to appointive.

Tioga Pass Road Opening Brings Neighbors Near; Barbecue and Friendly Words Knit Bonds

BY CHESTER G. HANSON
"Times" Staff Representative

LEEVINING, June 21.—In the true western spirit of neighborliness the folk from the east side of the high Sierras and those from the west met at the summit of the famous Tioga Pass shortly before noon today, shook hands, formally opened the road for the season and then celebrated with a big barbecue and trout feed at this little village at the foot of the road.

There were men and women from all over California and even from over in Nevada. Los Angeles, metropolis of the West, was amply represented by a delegation, headed by Mayor Porter. There were speeches and exchanges of felicitations from all groups and words of welcome poured forth into the crisp mountain air from a long list of speakers.

OLD WEST AT WORK

But it was not so much what was said as it was the great spirit of co-operation that was manifest in the celebration, the preparation and the staging of the affair. Here was the old West at work and at play. There were scenes that for downright humanness of the western brand would be hard to beat. These folks up here do things right when they lay their hands to them.

Take this barbecue and feed that followed the brief ceremonies on the summit, 10,000 feet up. It was Mono county's show, really, but the boys came in from Inyo county to help out in neighborly fashion. All hands were out on mountain lakes and streams last night and this morning, with the result that there were two big tubs full of mountain trout—some as long as your arm—and that is no fish story.

The barbecue was in a willow grove and picnic grounds. Tubs and caldrons of water and coffee bubbled and boiled hither and yon. Carl Keough, Walter Young and others of the Owens Valley men with sleeves rolled up were at work cooking and serving.

WHEN DO WE EAT?

Two sides of beef were barbecued by burying them four feet underground on top of two feet of hot rocks and leaving them there for twenty-four hours. The beef was dug out just before serving and it was the finest eating imaginable. Trout were handled with shovels and pitchforks.

There were about 500 men, women and children at the feed, including picturesque Indians with babies carried in their holders slung on the back. And if any one went away hungry he must have been suffering from lockjaw.

Mayor Porter spoke briefly, bringing a word from Los Angeles. Touching upon the Mono Basin water development—for this is the Mono Basin country—he said the city plans to deal fairly with the ranchers and expects fair treatment in return. Again he rapped the agents and in-betweeners, saying the city prefers to deal with the ranchers directly.

TENOR OF TALKS

The tenor of most of the brief talks was that if the rest of the people only realize what a wonderful country this is to see, including the ride over the pass, the State would have to have a corps of traffic officers out to handle the crowds. Well, the mountain air and the grandeur have that exhilarating effect. It is wonderful country to see.

Indicative of the great interest in this opening of the road and how folks came from long distances to participate, here are just a few of them: A. L. Emery of San Jose Chamber of Commerce, State Senator Harris of Sacramento, Tom Hardy of Oceanside, Sam North, San Francisco; C. C. Carleton, O. S. Sumners, district engineers for the State Highway Department; E. H. Walker and Mr. David of Reno, Nev.; Will Farrington of Tonopah, and so on.

Among those from Los Angeles were Bob Weaver of the Playground and Recreation Commission and its secretary, Charles Lamb; R. E. Hoyt, superintendent of the city's high

CHANGES IN DOCUMENTS BRING QUIZ

Altered Specifications in Paving Papers May Cause Grand Jury Inquiry

A grand-jury investigation, if necessary, to fix responsibility for the altering of public documents in the specifications for materials used in Los Angeles city public works was promised City Attorney Werner yesterday by Chief Investigator Mathews of the District Attorney's office.

No harm has been done as Werner and his staff "caught" the changed specifications before they were signed by Mayor Porter and returned them to the City Council, which abrogated its former action in approving the specifications. The Council acted on the specifications without knowing they had been changed. The alterations were dis-

AUGUST BALLOT LARGEST KNOWN

Primary Ticket Contains Names of 289

All Records in History of County Broken

George Barnes Will Oppose Representative Crail

With a total of 289 petitions signed by persons seeking nominations at the coming primary election on file with Registrar of Voters Kerr last night, election officials predicted the ballot of the August primary will bear the names of more candidates than in any similar election in the history of the county.

Throughout all yesterday the office staff of Registrar Kerr was busily engaged accepting and checking the filing documents with the peak of the rush coming shortly before noon. Mr. Kerr kept his office open until midnight.

George H. Barnes, president of the American Green Cross, a conservation organization, and president of the Barnes Music Company of Los Angeles, yesterday entered the race for Congress against Congressman Crail. Mr. Barnes filed his nominating petition for representative in Congress from the Tenth California District.

Upton Sinclair and Chaim Shapiro, who both declared themselves to be Socialists, filed petitions late yesterday for the office of Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, respectively.

LIST OF CANDIDATES

Following is the list of candidates who have filed their official notices in the office of Registrar of Voters Kerr, with all candidates for State offices asking nomination on the Republican ticket except those otherwise designated and with Los Angeles being the home city of all candidates whose names are followed only by street addresses:

GOVERNOR
Buron Fitts, 8222 Marmont Lane.
Clara Shortridge Foltz, 133 South Normandie avenue.
C. C. Young, Berkeley.
Milton K. Young (Democratic and Republican), 511 South Kenmore avenue.
James J. Rolph, San Francisco.
Upton Sinclair (Socialist.) Pasadena.
Emory D. Martindale, 3140 Ellington Drive.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR
Harry A. Chamberlin, 2471 Glendower Place.
Hershel L. Carnahan, 815 South Harvard Boulevard.
Chaim Shapiro (Socialist.) 1307 Edgecliff Drive.
Fred Meyer (Democratic.) Santa Paula.

CONTROLLER
Paul Collins, San Francisco.
C. J. Rambo, 1829 West Forty-third Place.
Ray A. Riley, 963 South Maple street.

LARGEST CITY OF WORLD LOS ANGELES' DESTINY

Engineer Offers Mathematical Demonstration to Show We'll Do It in Thirty-five Years

How the Los Angeles of the future will rise to stupendous heights if not to first place in the world within a generation is the subject of an interesting mathematical demonstration by Edwin R. Cox, a Los Angeles engineer. Laying down on a chart curves representing past performances of various cities and projecting them into the future in accordance with their trends has led Mr. Cox to predict, without the slightest use of black magic, that:

"Detroit and Los Angeles will have the same population in six years and, running neck-and-neck, will pass Philadelphia in about ten years. Los Angeles will definitely draw away from Detroit about 1943. Both will pass Chicago in between twenty and thirty years, Los Angeles in about 1951 and Detroit four or five years later.

NO RIVAL IN WORLD

"Los Angeles will pass New York in about thirty-five years with a population of 9,500,000 and henceforth will have no rival in the wide world. New York will pass London probably about 1955.

"Assuming that the essential needs of the future are met, Los Angeles should have a population of 2,300,000 in 1940; 4,300,000 in 1950; 7,500,000 in 1960 and 10,000,000 in 1966."

Partial United States census figures indicate that under the 1930 census New York's population is about 6,180,000; Chicago's announced figure is 2,373,753; partial figures for Philadelphia indicate 1,940,779 for it; Detroit's announced figure is 1,564,397 and Los Angeles' announced figure is 1,231,830. These figures show the first four cities holding the same relative positions they held under the 1920 census with Los Angeles rising from tenth city then and now closely competing with Detroit for fourth place.

SUGGESTED SCHEME

It was the phenomenal rise of Los Angeles that attracted worldwide attention and set observers to scrutinizing this gem of the Pacific. Cox, a native son, born in San Jose, graduated from University of California in 1896 as an engineer and since then following his profession, now with the Texas Company, began to do a little figuring.

"It is just like an engineer," he said, "to reduce everything to graphs and curves. So when these population figures came out I set about studying them. There is a good chance that in 1965, in thirty-five years and so in the lifetime of many now living, Los Angeles may become the largest city in the world, rising from her nineteenth place now."

In depicting the curves of the past and in projecting them along their trends into the future, Cox made observations of what causes such curves to depart from their trends and offers pertinent remarks concerning the wise directing of Los Angeles' growth.

FIRST FIVE AND LONDON

Cox charted the five largest American cities and London over the century's span, from 1830 to 1930, and then extended their curves to 1974, starting the population scale at 100,000. This, he said, is sufficient to obtain the general trend and discloses the basis upon which he makes his predictions. Observing the chart, which is reproduced here, Cox said:

"First we note that in old cities covering a large, thickly populated area, like London and Philadelphia, the growth is very even while in the newer ones there is a strong tendency to oscillation back and forth across the median line. This is the phenomenon of booms. Every boom is followed by a reaction, and the greater the boom the greater the reaction.

CAUSE OF SETBACKS

"Other causes, national and world-wide conditions, also have their effect, particularly upon New York. Some of these may be noted, such as the depressions ending in the panics of '37, '73, '93, '07 and '29, the Civil War, the World War, the extraordinary rush of immigration in the seventies and the

LIBRARIANS GATHERING HERE TODAY

National Organization's Convention Scheduled to Open Tomorrow

More than 2000 librarians from all over the United States, and a number from Europe, Canada and Mexico, will arrive here today and tomorrow for the fifty-second annual convention of the American Library Association, which is to open tomorrow night at the Biltmore and continue through Saturday.

"Los Angeles was selected as the convention city because of its rapid development into a world literary center," Everett R. Perry, Los Angeles city librarian, and vice-president of the national association, said yesterday. "The city offers the delegates every opportunity to study advanced methods in modern library work. The city branch system, and the county libraries are the finest in the world. I have received letters from the many foreign delegates asking that they be given an opportunity to study these systems."

IMPORTANT FEATURES

The awarding of the Newbery Medal, which is presented annually to the American author writing the best children's book during the past year, and an investigation of a "mechanical librarian," which does the routine work of stamping books in and out of the library, will be among the important features of the convention.

Four general sessions have been arranged, supplemented by forty group meetings. Noted authorities in educational and library fields will address the gatherings.

The convention officially opens tomorrow night when Orra E. Monnette, president of the Los Angeles Library Board, will deliver the address of welcome, followed by the keynote address by Andrew Keogh, librarian for Yale University and president of the association.

The entire general session Wednesday morning has been given to noted California and educators, who will speak on

WERE I a writer of the sea I would go into camp in Fish Harbor at San Pedro. It is the last treasure trove of deep-sea romance.

Life on board a big liner has come to be about as romantic as an automobile trip to Pasadena. But these fish boats—manned by Japs and Russians and Italians—come back from the far islands of the sea. They cast their nets in ancient tropical coves once stained by pirate blood—Watling Island and Breakfast Island of the buccaneers. And they bring back strange tales.

PELICAN PIG

One fish boat is in from Clipperton Island, 800 miles off Cape St. Lucas. Needing fresh meat, they went ashore and cornered wild boars which they killed with clubs. They cooked one but threw the others overboard. They found the pig tasted so fishy it was impossible. There is no grass on this lonely pirate island, the wild boars live on gulls' eggs and shellfish until the pork tastes like pelican.

THE MYSTERIOUS TUNA

Crowds rushed this morning to see a salt-stained, weather-battered fishing boat come to dock. It broke the tuna famine.

The tuna is the most mysterious of fish. For years it will arrive in these waters with the regularity of an express train; then it will vanish for years; then just as unaccountably appear again.

Even Cape St. Lucas—the fisherman's paradise—had no tuna this season. About two weeks ago a great school unaccountably whisked in from nowhere.

SECRET

The first tuna ship is like a prospector in from a big strike. The footsteps of the crew are dogged by rivals eager to find the location of the bonanza. But the lucky Italian captain only shrugs his shoulders and says: "Oh, Catalina—or somewhere."

WHERE WEALTH SWIMS

The mackerel has suddenly become a great source of wealth to our fishing interests. Since the days of the early Spanish explorers these waters have swarmed with them. They were almost useless to the packers because the flesh grew soft and tasteless when packed.

On the Atlantic coast Gloucester fishermen pack mackerel between layers of soft snow and rush them to the market in ships that sail as fast as racing yachts.

Within the last two years California packers have learned the secret of canning them; and the mackerel canning industry is now only second to tuna and sardines. Fortunes are being made.

SALMON FOES

One of the interesting problems of the great fishing industry is to find a way to protect salmon from its foes in the wild jungles of the seas. Experts estimate that of the salmon that are hatched from eggs less than one-half of 1 per cent survive long enough to lay eggs.

W. L. STEWART, UNION OIL HEAD, DIES

Heart Ailment Proves Fatal for Leader in Industrial and Civic Affairs; Funeral and Private Burial to be Conducted Tomorrow

W. L. Stewart, president of the Union Oil Company of California since 1914 and recognized as an outstanding oil man of the West, died at his summer home at 518 Strand, Hermosa Beach, at 2 a.m. yesterday from a heart attack. With Mr. Stewart were his wife and son, W. L. Stewart, Jr., also of the Union Oil Company, and his eldest daughter, Mrs. Sarah A. Bender of Pasadena.

While in recent months Mr. Stewart had not enjoyed his usual robust health, he had been at his desk regularly until Thursday. He was fatally stricken the following day.

BORN IN OIL REGION

Mr. Stewart was 62 years of age. He was born in Titusville, Pa. His father, the late Lyman Stewart, was one of the pioneer oil men of Pennsylvania and was a founder of the Union Oil Company. With W. L. Hardison, Lyman Stewart came to California in 1883 and began drilling for oil in Ventura county. It was the venture of these two men which led to the incorporation of the Union Oil Company in 1890. The year prior to its incorporation W. L. Stewart, then 21 years of age, got his first real taste of the oil business when he shouldered a pick and shovel and became a roustabout on the Torrey Canyon lease, near Santa Paula.

It was not until three years later, after leaving the University of California, that he turned his entire attention to the oil industry. In 1894 he was elected treasurer and the following year secretary of the company, which office he held until 1898. In 1903 he was elected second vice-president and three years later first vice-president.

COMPANY PROSPERS

Under his far-sighted leadership the company has experienced its greatest growth. It is recognized today as one of the six leading independent oil companies in the United States.

Mr. Stewart was a retiring type of executive who shunned publicity and preferred to let the outcome of his efforts speak for him. His as-

DAVID M. ROTH WINS CONTEST

He Forms 1703 Words from "Times" Star

James Causey Gets Second Prize in Puzzle

More Than 30,000 Try for List of Awards

plied up a large total in the first contest she has ever entered.

James T. Causey, winner of second prize, was pushed in the last two days, working forty-eight hours continuously to get under the deadline, while Mr. Roth estimated that he spent 150 hours on the educational and fascinating feature.

All contestants declared The Times puzzle to be the most intriguing, simple and educational ever presented by a newspaper in Southern California.

For the benefit of those who are interested in this unusual type of contest a replica of the original star is reproduced in today's Times.

CAREFULLY CHECKED

Contestants and other readers will doubtless be interested in tracing out the words that won for Mr. Roth the $1000.

Each list was given a careful checking by a Los Angeles county school-teacher, rechecked by a different teacher, and given a third checking by Paul M. Bryan, manager of the contest.

It was found, according to Mr. Bryan, that the majority of contestants not only overlooked many words, but made errors in listing the words they found. Hundreds of words were misspelled, in many cases one or more letters being left off the end. Even the winner of the first prize overlooked the word O, although it is the only vowel in his name. He also overlooked BULLIEST, the superlative case of the adjective made famous by Roosevelt.

SPECIFICATIONS QUIZ LAUNCHED

covered by Dan True, office engineer the engineering bureau.

The specifications declare what material shall be used in public improvements. The changes refer to said. According to Werner, had the changes not been discovered, a monopoly on sand provided for concrete pavement, base and gutters would have been created. The changes made it obligatory that sand had be washed "in a mechanical washing machine."

One man has the patent on such a machine in this territory, Werner said. Another change required a heavy proportion of silica.

The changes were made by pasting typewritten slips on the face of the document. Werner checked the typewriters in his office and determined that the work was not done there. The time necessary for alterations would have been but a few minutes, Werner said.

The alteration of public documents is a felony and Werner called in investigators from the District Attorney's office to aid him.

Werner expressed himself as astonished that anyone should attempt such a brazen act, as the changes were sure to be discovered in short order, when the Council could reverse its action.

Five Contracts Announced for City Projects

During the past week the Board of Public Works awarded contracts for five public improvements, aggregating $43,162.63, according to a report yesterday by City Engineer Jessup.

The contracts include grading, paving and improving of streets in the Gravois avenue and Levanda avenue district, $14,634.67; the grading, sewering, paving and improving of streets in the Somers avenue and Filion street district, $13,799.65; the paving and improving of Harbor View avenue from Ninth street to Weymouth avenue, $6220.45, and the paving of two alleys.

City Engineer Jessup also submitted to the City Council the ordinances of intention for the paving of Reynolds avenue from Mercury avenue to Raynol street and for the paving of Ninetieth street from Central avenue to Avalon Boulevard.

THE LANCER

the Hollywood habit of high and heroic drama, some of the stories told by these dimple Italian fishermen are extremely naive.

On her last voyage out one of the fishing ships hit a submerged rock and hung there for a while.

In telling the story the captain said: "When we hit, two or three of our men began to cry. Some one yelled 'Oh, my God!' My partner's father-in-law was at the wheel. He was so frightened that for three days he sat at the bow without sleep. All the boys got into the habit of standing there, peering into the water. It takes a long time to get over a scare like that."

That is probably what really happens in most sea disasters; only that isn't the way the stories sound by the time the survivors get back to the newspaper reporter zones.

FOREIGN TRADE GROUP WILL MEET AT U.S.C.

In response to an invitation sent to Delta Phi Epsilon, national foreign-trade fraternity, now convening in Washington, D. C., to hold its 1932 convention at the University of Southern California, Dr. R. B. Von KleinSmid, president of the university, received a reply yesterday from Harry Cutler, national president, accepting the invitation in behalf of the organization. Dr. Von KleinSmid was president of the fraternity for two years.

LAVINE MAY FACE BERMAN

"Bright Boy" Possibly Will be Called by State; Separate Trial for Miss Johnson Urged

Jacob Berman, "bright boy" of the Julian prosecution, may be subpoenaed as a witness in the extortion case of Morris Lavine, former newspaper man, and Leontine Johnson, scheduled to go to trial in Superior Judge Schauer's court tomorrow, it was indicated at a hearing on a motion to try separately the cases of Lavine and Miss Johnson, heard by Judge Schauer yesterday.

Judge Schauer said he will rule on the motion tomorrow. The motion was introduced by William Beirne, attorney for Miss Johnson, and supported by Dep. Dist.-Atty. McKay, for the prosecution.

"There is no objection to this motion by the District Attorney's office if the court desires to grant it," said McKay.

REASONS ADVANCED

The motion was asked on the ground that there is insufficient evidence to connect Miss Johnson with the case, only three witnesses having involved her directly. One of these is Blaney F. Matthews of the District Attorney's detective staff, who heard telephone conversations between Miss Johnson and Charley Crawford, political boss who later gave Lavine $75,000 to prevent, he said, the publication of certain newspaper stories. Another is Hubert Morrow, attorney who was consulted by Miss Johnson regarding the articles on the Julian case she was to write, and the third is Warden Woolard, city editor of the Examiner, who said he was introduced to Miss Johnson in the presence of Lavine.

The jury, according to the motion, was "led into a state of bewilderment" by the huge mass of testimony it was called on to digest, and it was "psychologically impossible" for the jurors to separate the case of Lavine and Miss Johnson. If they could have done so, the motion contends they would have acquitted Miss Johnson.

COURT DELAYS RULING

Dep. Dist.-Atty. McKay said that if Berman, then in Federal prison at McNeil Island, had been available as a witness, it would have been possible to have proved conspiracy against Lavine and Miss Johnson.

"Well, he's here now," interrupted Judge Schauer. "Are you going to make him a defendant?"

"He hasn't been indicted," replied McKay.

"Then he is available as a witness."

"The State would be glad to have him as a witness, but it is our impression he would refuse to testify," replied the prosecutor.

Judge Schauer then said he is interested in saving the State money by combining all trials possible, and not granting separate trials without adequate cause.

"I must give this matter careful consideration," the court stated.

STATE'S PLANS

Dep. Dist.-Atty. McKay said it is not the intention to use Miss Johnson as a State's witness against Lavine, although he told the court that Lavine will be tried first, in case a separate trial is granted.

Attorney Richard Cantillon, for Lavine, said he will be pleased to have a separate trial for Lavine, although he did not join in the motion to sever.

There was before the court yesterday a motion to continue the case for two weeks because of the absence of an important defense witness, also a motion to take the deposition of Raymond T. Van Etisch, former managing editor of the Examiner, now in Seattle, regarding "certain new aspects" of the case. These motions will be passed on by Judge Schauer tomorrow.

GRAF TO MAKE TRIPS

Mullin Travel Service, representatives for the Graf Zeppelin, have received advices from Europe that the giant ship will operate on a schedule of flights over Europe from now until August 30, next. There will be flights over Germany, Austria, Switzerland, the Mediterranean, over Norway and Spitsbergen, and the British Isles.

RANDOLPH IN NEW BATTLE FOR ESTATE

McNeil Island Convict Resumes Fight for Money in Union Held Illegal

From prison Jack W. Randolph yesterday resumed his fight for the fortune of $145,000 left by his wife, May Wheeler Randolph, for whose murder he once was tried and acquitted, Randolph is serving a sentence at McNeil Island Federal prison on conviction of using the mails to defraud. Through counsel yesterday he moved before Superior, Judge Archbald for a new trial on the award of the estate.

After hearing arguments by Attorney Harris for Randolph and by Attorney Pink for the daughter of the dead woman Judge Archbald took the matter under submission.

Randolph was disqualified from sharing the dead woman's estate by the fact that his marriage to her was invalid, as she never had been legally divorced from a former husband. Another reason originally in the decision but later expurgated, was that Randolph had Negro blood and that a section of the Civil Code makes it illegal for a Negro to marry a white.

Mrs. Randolph married James E. Moore in 1883 and divorced him in Reno in 1910. In 1927 she and Randolph were married at Santa Ana. Mrs. Randolph died February 3, 1928, of poisoning, it was charged. Randolph was accused of her murder, tried and acquitted. Later he was convicted by Federal authorities on the fraud charge.

Joseph Memoli Funeral Service to be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Joseph P. Memoli, musician and teacher, victim of the Ameco barge disaster on Memorial Day, will be conducted tomorrow at 3 p.m. in Grace chapel, Inglewood Park Cemetery. Services will be under the direction of the E. B. McCormick mortuarians.

Mr. Memoli one of a large family of musicians, was, at the time of his death, a teacher in the Harding High School at Sawtelle, and the director of the Bay City Community Orchestra. He was the son of Phillip Memoli, Sr., 3542 Westmount street, bandmaster of the Boy Scouts of America. His brother, Phillip Memoli, Jr., for many years has been an oboe and English horn player with the Philharmonic Orchestra. A younger brother, Tom Memoli is an organist and teacher in Santa Paula.

Joseph Memoli was 31 years of age, and was born in Birmingham, Ala.

ART LEAGUE EXHIBITS PORTRAITS AT PARK

The Los Angeles Art League is giving an exhibit of landscape and portrait paintings in various mediums, in the rotunda of the State Building at Exposition Park during the month of June. Week-day visiting hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The public is invited.

FRIENDS PAY LAST HONOR TO SHELLEY

Elks in Charge of Rites for Veteran Member of District Attorney's Staff

Judges, attorneys and friends of Fred Shelley, veteran prosecutor of the District Attorney's office who died late Thursday night, yesterday crowded the funeral chapel of Reynolds & Eberle at 825 East Orange Drive, Pasadena, for the last rites read by members of the Elks' order. The services were in charge of officers of Pasadena Lodge No. 672.

Pallbearers, selected from among Mr. Shelley's personal friends at the District Attorney's office, were: Daniel Beecher, Wayne E. Jordan, Percy Hammon, Bonner Richardson, Blayney Matthews and William Knost.

Interment was in the Hollywood mausoleum.

Mr. Shelley was born in Texas fifty-eight years ago. Soon after entering the legal profession he was elected District Attorney of Cochise county, Arizona. Coming to Los Angeles twenty-two years ago, he entered local politics, at one time serving as chairman of the Democratic central committee. He had been associated with the District Attorney's office for more than ten years.

FIRE TABOO IN GIVING UP OF OIL FIELD

Hancock Rigs in Wilshire Area Will be Abandoned Beginning on July 1

Abandonment of all oil rigs and equipment in the Hancock oil field, between Wilshire Boulevard and West Third street, will begin on July 1 without the burning of sumps to dispose of them, according to a communication from County Fire Warden Turner, which will be received and acted on by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors at its meeting tomorrow.

The sumps of the abandoned field will be entirely disposed of without fire, according to the warden, thereby eliminating any possibility of a repetition of the damage done when sumps were fired several years ago creating havoc in the field and smoking up fashionable homes for miles around.

All permits for burning sumps in the Hancock field were rescinded three months ago and no new ones will be issued, according to Turner.

Boy Scouts to be Guests at Aerial Circus

Mines Field, Los Angeles' Municipal Airport near Inglewood, will be turned over next Saturday, beginning at 10 a.m. to Boy Scouts of Los Angeles, San Fernando Valley, and other near-by communities, and aviators will entertain them with an aerial circus.

This event has been especially promoted for the Scouts by the Aviation Post of the American Legion in co-operation with Maj. Richard B. Barnitz, director of the airport.

The Legion has sent invitations to more than 8000 Scouts and 2000 Scout leaders. Daring feats will be performed by pilots for the boy spectators. The Scouts will give a number of land demonstrations, but they will not be taken on air trips.

FIRST IN WORLD, DESTINY OF CITY

Engineer Plots Population Curve of Metropolis

Mathematical Chart Shows Los Angeles' Future

Leading Rank for Globe to be Attained in 1966

late restrictive measures. London, of course, was hard hit by the World War, which set back the growth of population about eight years. Possibly this loss may be regained and the curve has been extended so as to draw only conservative conclusions. There is a noticeable knee in the curve at about 1910."

"Though less distinct, a similar change in trend occurs for New York between 1900 and 1930. For Chicago it is quite distinct between 1890 and 1910. If, as reported, the present census shows less than 2,000,000 for Philadelphia, a distinct knee will appear between 1910 and 1930. For even growth Philadelphia is unique among American cities. We must go to Europe to find a parallel. However, in 1854 she annexed the whole thickly populated county and jumped from 133,000 to 475,000. Since then she has been content to let nature take her course.

NECK-AND-NECK

"Detroit and Los Angeles show no changes in general trends, though these may develop later. The sharp upward sweep in Detroit's curve between 1908 and 1920 is due, undoubtedly, to the development of the automotive industry. If the slowing down in the following ten years is due merely to over-production this will right itself and be followed by a series of similar oscillations. If, however, it indicates incipient saturation, a distinct knee in the curve will appear. Only the census of 1940 can determine this definitely.

"The oscillations in the growth of Los Angeles, which were very marked in the last century, have about disappeared and if no new cause intervenes the growth should be quite even from now on.

"If present trends continue we may confidently expect the following:

LONDON DISTANCED

"(1.) New York will pass London between 1950 and 1960, probably about 1955.

"(2.) Detroit and Los Angeles will have the same population in 1936 and both, running neck and neck, will pass Philadelphia at about 1940. Los Angeles will definitely draw away from Detroit about 1943.

"(3.) Both will pass Chicago between 1950 and 1960; Los Angeles at about 1951 and Detroit four or five years later.

"(4.) Los Angeles will pass New York at about 1965 with a population of 9,500,000, and henceforth will have no rival in the wide world.

CHICAGO'S EXAMPLE

"You will note that all of these forecasts are based upon an "if"—if the trends do not change. Chicago is a striking example of a trend that changed. The growth between 1860 and 1890 is practically the same as that of Los Angeles between 1900 and 1930. What changed the trend of Chicago's growth?

"Many causes might be assigned. The hard times and low prices of wheat between 1892 and 1894 hit the Midwest a hard blow. Then the panic of 1907 and after that the World War may have been contributing factors. Poor leadership, bad government and racketeering may have played a part. Whatever the cause or combination of causes initiating the new trend, it would tend to be maintained by the increased growth of neighboring rival cities. The slowing down in Chicago's growth is accompanied by sharp upward sweeps in the growth of Detroit, Cleveland and other cities of the Midwest.

"In the case of Los Angeles we may enumerate a number of causes which might cause such a change in trend.

"(1.) Bad government and failure to control crime. Other cities draw population by means of established industries furnishing employment. Los Angeles draws from the middle and well-to-do classes of the whole country. At least 90 per cent of these are home-seekers and retain a wholesome, old-fashioned regard for safety of life and property.

"Unless we keep this in mind we will find the smaller cities of Southern California growing at the expense of Los Angeles. One of the most immediate and pressing problems is the curbing of the assessment evil. It is keeping more people out and driving more people away than all other causes combined.

"(2.) Shortage of water supply. Everyone realizes the importance of this and the approval of the water bonds and the certainty of Boulder Dam seem to eliminate this danger.

TRAFFIC FACTOR AGAIN

"(3.) Traffic congestion. This is a problem shared by all American cities but is particularly acute here on account of the high percentage of automobiles. The arcading of sidewalks in the congested district and the widening of thoroughfares now undertaken would help greatly. The next step necessary would seem to be tubes or elevated railways. It is a problem which will undoubtedly be solved in due time.

"(4.) Pay rolls and employment. Though Los Angeles is undoubtedly the mecca of home-seekers and its greatest attraction is agreeable living conditions, people cannot live by climate alone. Fortunately, manufacturing is fully keeping pace with population. With an ample supply of cheap fuel, water and raw materials, combined with ideal all-the-year working conditions, there is no limit to Los Angeles' manufacturing capacity. It should readily develop as fast as the market. All things point to the Pacific as the future field of trade expansion and Los Angeles as the strategic center.

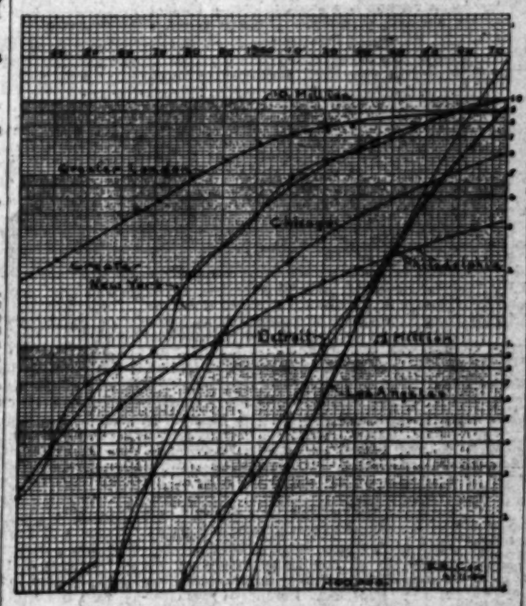
BREAKS WITH US

"(5.) Rival cities. There are none closer than San Francisco and other things being equal, climate will always swing the balance in our favor. It is up to the wisdom and foresight of the leaders of Los Angeles to see that other things are kept at least equal, bearing always in mind that the supreme attraction of Los Angeles is for home-seekers and that living conditions must meet with their approval.

"To be the biggest city in the world much of Los Angeles must be rebuilt and it will cost a lot of money to recarve the most glaring mistakes of temperamental realtors. Nevertheless, it must be done without excessive taxation or prohibitive assessments. Every city has its bugbear. In Chicago it is racketeering; in Detroit it is automobile saturation; in San Francisco union domination; in Los Angeles assessments.

"Assuming that the essential needs of the future are met, Los Angeles should have a population of 2,300,000 in 1940; of 4,300,000 in 1950, of 7,500,000 in 1960 and of 10,000,000 in 1966. It is a good mark to shoot at."

Mathematics Point City's Future



Figures Don't Lie

Edwin C. Cox, Los Angeles engineer, has delineated on a chart as graphic curves the lines of growth during the last century of the five largest American cities and London and, interpreting them in terms of the future, says: "In order to estimate the future growth of cities it is necessary to extend an investigation of their past over a long enough period to indicate a definite trend. This would cover so wide a range of values that if plotted to the ordinary scale of equal spaces it would become excessively cumbersome. For example, if it required a height of three inches to show the trends between 100,000 and 1,000,000 population, it would require thirty inches to extend this to 10,000,000. To get away from this difficulty engineers have adopted the logarithmic scale for plotting values with a wide range. In the accompanying chart heights are proportioned to the logarithms of the population, while the ten-year intervals are equally spaced. The five largest American cities and London are charted from 1830 to 1930 and extended to 1974, starting the population scale at 100,000. This is sufficient to obtain the general trend and shows some very interesting features, which would bear a whole volume of analysis."

Bowl Concert Season Drive Will be Pushed

With a little more than two weeks remaining before the opening of the Hollywood Bowl season on July 8, next, social leaders and clubwomen throughout Los Angeles who have joined in the campaign to make Bowl concerts the best attended in their history this year will launch an effort to complete the enrollment of seasonal patrons.

Contracts have been arranged for the bringing of internationally famous artists to the Bowl for the series of symphonies, and a larger sum is to be spent for this purpose than during any previous season, Business Manager Tindall announces. As a result an increased attendance is looked for.

Reservations coming in for seasonal memberships from points as far distant as San Diego show that music patrons in many southern counties will be regular visitors at concerts this summer.

Sacred Parade to be Made by Catholic Group

More than 30,000 persons are expected to join at 4 p.m. today in the Corpus Christi procession from the Church of Our Lady of Guadalupe, 4123 Fisher street, to La Soledad Church in Belvedere.

Rt. Rev. Joseph Gutierrez, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Guadalupe, announced yesterday the procession, in which the Blessed Sacrament will be carried, will be more colorful than ever before.

Picturesque Mexican costumes will be worn by many of the participants, who will sing hymns during the march. Both the American and Mexican orders of the Knights of Columbus will be represented.

FEDERAL JOB TEST RULINGS ANNOUNCED

Announcement was made yesterday of the regulations governing examinations soon to be held to fill vacancies in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce for junior and associate commercial agents. The examination rules, announced by the United States Civil Service Commission, require applicants to be graduates from a recognized university, or to have at least four years' banking experience in foreign trade. Knowledge of at least one foreign language is not essential, but useful. Applicants must have reached the age of 20 years when the time limit for the receipt of applications is reached, July 8, next. The salaries for the offices to be filled range from $1800 to $2300 a year. Further information can be had by applying to Room 725, Central Building.

SEWERS REQUESTED

A petition for the construction of sewers in Elder Court between Elder and Pickwick streets was filed with the City Council yesterday and referred to the City Engineer.

SANHUBER BANK DEALS SCANNED

State Links Mrs. Oesterreich to Joint Account

Attorneys Say Maiden Name and His Alias Used

Brother of Slain Man Will be Witness Tomorrow

The District Attorney's office announced yesterday that a joint bank account, assertedly kept by Otto Sanhuber, so-called ghost of the garret, and Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich, had been discovered and records from it would be introduced tomorrow at Sanhuber's trial for the murder of Fred Oesterreich, in Superior Judge Hardy's court.

The finding of the asserted joint bank account was hailed by Dep. Dist.-Attys. Costello and Russell, prosecuting Sanhuber, as one of the most important bits of evidence uncovered so far, in that it will be introduced for the purpose of showing association and conspiracy between Sanhuber and Mrs. Oesterreich, who is also under indictment for her husband's death, but who will be tried later.

BALANCE UNTOUCHED

The bank account, according to the prosecutors, was established at a suburban bank in 1918, the year the Oesterreichs, followed by Sanhuber, moved here from Milwaukee. It was continued and drawn against, it was declared, until approximately the date of Oesterreich's murder on August 22, 1922, but since that time a balance of $480 has remained untouched.

The joint bank account was opened under the names of D. Korschel and Otto Weir. Korschel, Costello and Russell assert, was Mrs. Oesterreich's maiden name and Weir was an alias often used by Sanhuber.

BROTHER TO TESTIFY

Tomorrow, it was declared, John L. Oesterreich, 754 East Howard street, Pasadena, brother of the murdered man, will be placed on the witness stand to testify to Mrs. Oesterreich's maiden name, and then the bank records will be introduced. The prosecutors said yesterday that these documents have been analyzed by police handwriting experts and that their connection with the two defendants has been definitely established.

Sanhuber's trial commences its third week tomorrow. When court adjourned Friday, the jury was listening to an asserted confession of the murder made before the grand jury by Sanhuber. At that time the "ghost man" told of his years of association with Mrs. Oesterreich and of five different aliases that he had lived in so that he could be near her.

The District Attorney's office yesterday admitted they are trying to trace an anonymous telephone call to John Oesterreich threatening him if he took the witness stand in the Sanhuber trial. Oesterreich reported that he received the call Friday.

McGROARTY TO BE HOST

Members of American Legion Auxiliary Unit of Tujunga, and all their relatives and friends are to enjoy the hospitality of the John Steven McGroarty home in Tujunga, at a bridge tea on Wednesday. There will be a door prize, game prizes and refreshments.

SUSPECTED CAR THIEVES TURN OVER

Mile Chase by Police Ends When Stolen Auto Jumps Curbing and Upsets

Two men driving a stolen car were captured by police yesterday after a mile chase through traffic which ended when the officers shot a tire from the pursued car, which turned over. They gave their names as Clarence Warner, 30 years of age, of 432 South Alvarado street, and Roy Dexter, 19, transient, and are booked on suspicion-of-robbery charges.

The chase began at Beverly Boulevard and Western avenue when Officers Alpers and Maney attempted to halt the men driving a car which was listed as stolen from E. L. Baynes of 2885 Leeward avenue. In front of 209 South Oxford street the car jumped the curbing and turned over on the lawn. The men admitted stealing the car and have been identified as the bandits who recently robbed J. W. Canton, 4533 Orchard avenue, of a small sum.

DAVID M. ROTH WINS CONTEST

He Forms 1703 Words from "Times" Star

James Causey Gets Second Prize in Puzzle

pled up a large total in the first contest she has ever entered.

James T. Causey, winner of second prize, was pushed in the last two days, working forty-eight hours continuously to get under the deadline, while Mr. Roth estimated that he spent 150 hours on the educational and fascinating feature.

All contestants declared The Times puzzle to be the most intriguing, simple and educational ever presented by a newspaper in Southern California.

For the benefit of those who are interested in this unusual type of contest a replica of the original star is reproduced in today's Times.

CAREFULLY CHECKED

Contestants and other readers will doubtless be interested in tracing out the words that won for Mr. Roth the $1000.

Each list was given a careful checking by a Los Angeles county school-teacher, rechecked by a different teacher, and given a third checking by Paul M. Bryan, manager of the contest.

It was found, according to Mr. Bryan, that the majority of contestants not only overlooked many words, but made errors in listing the words they found. Hundreds of words were misspelled, in many cases one or more letters being left off the end. Even the winner of the first prize overlooked the word O, although it is the only vowel in his name. He also overlooked BULLIEST, the superlative case of the adjective made famous by Roosevelt.

covered by Dan True, office engineer the engineering bureau.

The specifications declare what material shall be used in public improvements. The changes refer to said. According to Werner, had the changes not been discovered, a mon. oty on sand provided for concrete pavement, base and gutters would have been created. The changes made it obligatory that sand used be washed "in a mechanical washing machine."

One man has the patent on such a machine in this territory, Werner said. Another change required a heavy proportion of silica.

The changes were made by pasting typewritten slips on the face of the document. Werner checked the typewriters in his office and determined that the work was not done there. The time necessary for alterations would have been but a few minutes, Werner said.

The alteration of public documents is a felony and Werner called in investigators from the District Attorney's office to aid him.

Werner expressed himself as astonished that anyone should attempt such a brazen act, as the changes were sure to be discovered in short order, when the Council could reverse its action.

Five Contracts Announced for City Projects

During the past week the Board of Public Works awarded contracts for five public improvements, aggregating $43,162.63, according to a report yesterday by City Engineer Jessup.

The contracts include grading, paving and improving of streets in the Gravois avenue and Levanda avenue district, $14,634.67; the grading, sewering, paving and improving of streets in the Somers avenue and Filion street district, $13,790.85; the paving and improving of Harbor View avenue from Ninth street to Weymouth avenue, $5230.45, and the paving of two alleys.

City Engineer Jessup also submitted to the City Council the ordinances of intention for the paving of Reynolds avenue from Mercury avenue to Raynol street and for the paving of Ninetieth street from Central avenue to Avalon Boulevard.

THE LANGER

the Hollywood habit of high and heroic drama, some of the stories told by these simple Italian fishermen are extremely naive.

On her last voyage out one of the fishing ships hit a submerged rock and hung there for a while.

In telling the story the captain said: "When we hit, two or three of our men began to cry. Some one yelled 'Oh, my God!' My partner's father-in-law was at the wheel. He was so frightened that for three days he sat at the bow without sleep. All the boys got into the habit of standing there, peering into the water. It takes a long time to get over a scare like that."

That is probably what really happens in most sea disasters; only that isn't the way the stories sound by the time the survivors get back to the newspaper reporter zones.

FOREIGN TRADE GROUP WILL MEET AT U.S.C.

In response to an invitation sent to Delta Phi Epsilon, national foreign-trade fraternity, now convening in Washington, D. C., to hold its 1932 convention at the University of Southern California, Dr. R. R. Von KleinSmid, president of the university, received a reply yesterday from Harry Cutler, national president, accepting the invitation in behalf of the organization. Dr. Von KleinSmid was president of the fraternity for two years.

LAVINE MAY FACE BERMAN

"Bright Boy" Possibly Will be Called by State; Separate Trial for Miss Johnson Urged

Jacob Berman, "bright boy" of the Julian prosecution, may be subpoenaed as a witness in the extortion case of Morris Lavine, former newspaper man, and Leontine Johnson, scheduled to go to trial in Superior Judge Schauer's court tomorrow, it was indicated at a hearing on a motion to try separately the cases of Lavine and Miss Johnson, heard by Judge Schauer yesterday.

Judge Schauer said he will rule on the motion tomorrow. The motion was introduced by William Beirne, attorney for Miss Johnson, and supported by Dep. Dist.-Atty. McKay, for the prosecution.

"There is no objection to this motion by the District Attorney's office if the court desires to grant it," said McKay.

REASONS ADVANCED

The motion was asked on the ground that there is insufficient evidence to connect Miss Johnson with the case, only three witnesses having involved her directly. One of these is Blaney F. Matthews of the District Attorney's detective staff, who heard telephone conversations between Miss Johnson and Charley Crawford, political boss who later gave Lavine $75,000 to prevent, he said, the publication of certain newspaper stories. Another is Hubert Morrow, attorney who was consulted by Miss Johnson regarding the articles on the Julian case she was to write, and the third is Warden Woolard, city editor of the Examiner, who said he was introduced to Miss Johnson in the presence of Lavine.

The jury, according to the motion, was "led into a state of bewilderment" by the huge mass of testimony it was called on to digest, and it was "psychologically impossible" for the jurors to separate the case of Lavine and Miss Johnson. If they could have done so, the motion contends they would have acquitted Miss Johnson.

COURT DELAYS RULING

Dep. Dist.-Atty. McKay said that if Berman, then in Federal prison at McNeil Island, had been available as a witness, it would have been possible to have proved conspiracy against Lavine and Miss Johnson.

"Well, he's here now," interrupted Judge Schauer. "Are you going to make him a defendant?"

"He hasn't been indicted," replied McKay.

"Then he is available as a witness."

"The State would be glad to have him as a witness, but it is our impression he would refuse to testify," replied the prosecutor.

Judge Schauer then said he is interested in saving the State money by combining all trials possible, and not granting separate trials without adequate cause.

"I must give this matter careful consideration," the court stated.

STATE'S PLANS

Dep. Dist.-Atty. McKay said it is not the intention to use Miss Johnson as a State's witness against Lavine, although he told the court that Lavine will be tried first, in case a separate trial is granted.

Attorney Richard Cantillon, for Lavine, said he will be pleased to have a separate trial for Lavine, although he did not join in the motion to sever.

There was before the court yesterday a motion to continue the case for two weeks because of the absence of an important defense witness, also a motion to take the deposition of Raymond T. Van Etisch, former managing editor of the Examiner, now in Seattle, regarding "certain new aspects" of the case. These motions will be passed on by Judge Schauer tomorrow.

GRAF TO MAKE TRIPS

Mullin Travel Service, representatives for the Graf Zeppelin, have received advices from Europe that the giant ship will operate on a schedule of flights over Europe from now until August 30, next. There will be flights over Germany, Austria, Switzerland, the Mediterranean, over Norway and Spitsbergen, and the British Isles.

RANDOLPH IN NEW BATTLE FOR ESTATE

McNeil Island Convict Resumes Fight for Money in Union Held Illegal

From prison Jack W. Randolph yesterday resumed his fight for the fortune of $145,000 left by his wife, May Wheeler Randolph, for whose murder he once was tried and acquitted. Randolph is serving a sentence at McNeil Island Federal prison on conviction of using the mails to defraud. Through counsel yesterday he moved before Superior Judge Archbald for a new trial on the award of the estate.

After hearing arguments by Attorney Harris for Randolph and by Attorney Pink for the daughter of the dead woman Judge Archbald took the matter under submission.

Randolph was disqualified from sharing the dead woman's estate by the fact that his marriage to her was invalid, as she never had been legally divorced from a former husband. Another reason originally in the decision but later expurgated, was that Randolph had Negro blood and that a section of the Civil Code makes it illegal for a Negro to marry a white.

Mrs. Randolph married James E. Moore in 1883 and divorced him in Reno in 1910. In 1927 she and Randolph were married at Santa Ana. Mrs. Randolph died February 3, 1928, of poisoning, it was charged. Randolph was accused of her murder, tried and acquitted. Later he was convicted by Federal authorities on the fraud charge.

Joseph Memoli Funeral Service to be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Joseph P. Memoli, musician and teacher, victim of the Ameco barge disaster on Memorial Day, will be conducted tomorrow at 3 p.m. in Grace chapel, Inglewood Park Cemetery. Services will be under the direction of the E. B. McCormick mortician.

Mr. Memoli one of a large family of musicians, was, at the time of his death, a teacher in the Harding High School at Sawtelle, and the director of the Bay City Community Orchestra. He was the son of Phillip Memoli, Sr., 3542 Westmount street, bandmaster of the Boy Scouts of America. His brother, Phillip Memoli, Jr., for many years has been an oboe and English horn player with the Philharmonic Orchestra. A younger brother, Tom Memoli is an organist and teacher in Santa Paula.

Joseph Memoli was 31 years of age, and was born in Birmingham, Ala.

ART LEAGUE EXHIBITS PORTRAITS AT PARK

FRIENDS PAY LAST HONOR TO SHELLEY

Elks in Charge of Rites for Veteran Member of District Attorney's Staff

Judges, attorneys and friends of Fred Shelley, veteran prosecutor of the District Attorney's office who died late Thursday night, yesterday crowded the funeral chapel of Reynolds & Eberle at 825 East Orange Drive, Pasadena, for the last rites read by members of the Elks' order. The services were in charge of officers of Pasadena Lodge No. 672.

Pallbearers, selected from among Mr. Shelley's personal friends at the District Attorney's office, were: Daniel Beecher, Wayne E. Jordan, Percy Hammon, Bonner Richardson, Blayney Matthews and William Knost.

Interment was in the Hollywood mausoleum.

Mr. Shelley was born in Texas fifty-eight years ago. Soon after entering the legal profession he was elected District Attorney of Cochise county, Arizona. Coming to Los Angeles twenty-two years ago, he entered local politics, at one time serving as chairman of the Democratic central committee. He had been associated with the District Attorney's office for more than ten years.

FIRE TABOO IN GIVING UP OF OIL FIELD

Hancock Rigs in Wilshire Area Will be Abandoned Beginning on July 1

Abandonment of all oil rigs and equipment in the Hancock oil field, between Wilshire Boulevard and West Third street, will begin on July 1 without the burning of sumps to dispose of them, according to a communication from County Fire Warden Turner, which will be received and acted on by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors at its meeting tomorrow.

The sumps of the abandoned field will be entirely disposed of without fire, according to the warden, thereby eliminating any possibility of a repetition of the damage done when sumps were fired several years ago creating havoc in the field and smoking up fashionable homes for miles around.

All permits for burning sumps in the Hancock field were rescinded three months ago and no new ones will be issued, according to Turner.

Boy Scouts to be Guests at Aerial Circus

Mines Field, Los Angeles' Municipal Airport near Inglewood, will be turned over next Saturday, beginning at 10 a.m. to Boy Scouts of Los Angeles, San Fernando Valley, and other near-by communities, and aviators will entertain them with an aerial circus.

This event has been especially promoted for the Scouts by the Aviation Post of the American Legion in co-operation with Maj. Richard B. Barnitz, director of the airport.

The Legion, has sent invitations to more than 8000 Scouts and 2000 Scout leaders. Daring feats will be performed by pilots for the boy spectators. The Scouts will give a number of land demonstrations, but they will not be taken on air trips.

FIRST IN WORLD, DESTINY OF CITY

Engineer Plots Population Curve of Metropolis

late restrictive measures. London, of course, was hard hit by the World War, which set back the growth of population about eight years. Possibly this loss may be regained and the curve has been extended so as to draw only conservative conclusions. There is a noticeable knee in the curve at about 1910."

"Though less distinct, a similar change in trend occurs for New York between 1900 and 1930. For Chicago it is quite distinct between 1890 and 1910. If, as reported, the present census shows less than 2,000,000 for Philadelphia, a distinct knee will appear between 1910 and 1930. For even growth Philadelphia is unique among American cities. We must go to Europe to find a parallel. However, in 1854 she annexed the whole thickly populated county and jumped from 133,000 to 475,000. Since then she has been content to let nature take her course.

NECK-AND-NECK

"Detroit and Los Angeles show no changes in general trends, though these may develop later. The sharp upward sweep in Detroit's curve between 1900 and 1920 is due, undoubtedly, to the development of the automotive industry. If the slowing down in the following ten years is due merely to over-production this will right itself and be followed by a series of similar oscillations. If, however, it indicates incipient saturation, a distinct knee in the curve will appear. Only the census of 1940 can determine this definitely.

"The oscillations in the growth of Los Angeles, which were very marked in the last century, have about disappeared and if no new cause intervenes the growth should be quite even from now on.

"If present trends continue we may confidently expect the following:

LONDON DISTANCED

"(1.) New York will pass London between 1950 and 1960, probably about 1955.

"(2.) Detroit and Los Angeles will have the same population in 1986 and both, running neck and neck, will pass Philadelphia at about 1940. Los Angeles will definitely draw away from Detroit about 1943.

"(3.) Both will pass Chicago between 1950 and 1960; Los Angeles at about 1951 and Detroit four or five years later.

"(4.) Los Angeles will pass New York at about 1963 with a population of 9,500,000, and henceforth will have no rival in the wide world.

CHICAGO'S EXAMPLE

"You will note that all of these forecasts are based upon an "if"—if the trends do not change. Chicago is a striking example of a trend that changed. The growth between 1860 and 1890 is practically the same as that of Los Angeles between 1900 and 1930. What changed the trend of Chicago's growth?

"Many causes might be assigned. The hard times and low prices of wheat between 1892 and 1894 hit the Midwest a hard blow. Then the panic of 1907 and after that the World War may have been contributing factors. Poor leadership, bad government and racketeering may have played a part. Whatever the cause or combination of causes initiating the new trend, it would tend to be maintained by the increased growth of neighboring rival cities. The slowing down in Chicago's growth is accompanied by sharp upward sweeps in the growth of Detroit, Cleveland and other cities of the Midwest.

"In the case of Los Angeles we may enumerate a number of causes which might cause such a change in trend.

"(1.) Bad government and failure to control crime. Other cities draw population by means of established industries furnishing employment. Los Angeles draws from the middle and well-to-do classes of the whole country. At least 90 per cent of these are home-seekers and retain a wholesome, old-fashioned regard for safety of life and property.

"Unless we keep this in mind we will find the smaller cities of Southern California growing at the expense of Los Angeles. One of the most immediate and pressing problems is the curbing of the assessment evil. It is keeping more people out and driving more people away than all other causes combined.

"(2.) Shortage of water supply. Everyone realizes the importance of this and the approval of the water bonds and the certainty of Boulder Dam seem to eliminate this danger.

TRAFFIC FACTOR AGAIN

"(3.) Traffic congestion. This is a problem shared by all American cities but is particularly acute here on account of the high percentage of automobiles. The arcading of sidewalks in the congested district and the widening of thoroughfares now undertaken would help greatly. The next step necessary would seem to be tubes or elevated railways. It is a problem which will undoubtedly be solved in due time.

"(4.) Pay rolls and employment. Though Los Angeles is undoubtedly the mecca of home-seekers and its greatest attraction is agreeable living conditions, people cannot live by climate alone. Fortunately, manufacturing is fully keeping pace with population. With an ample supply of cheap fuel, water and raw materials, combined with ideal all-the-year working conditions, there is no limit to Los Angeles' manufacturing capacity. It should readily develop as fast as the market. All things point to the Pacific as the future field of trade expansion and Los Angeles as the strategic center.

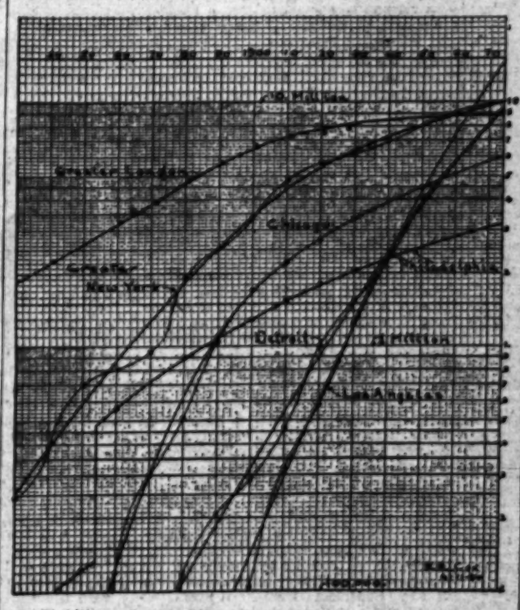
BREAKS WITH US

"(5.) Rival cities. There are none closer than San Francisco and other things being equal, climate will always swing the balance in our favor. It is up to the wisdom and foresight of the leaders of Los Angeles to see that other things are kept at least equal, bearing always in mind that the supreme attraction of Los Angeles is for home-seekers and that living conditions must meet with their approval.

"To be the biggest city in the world much of Los Angeles must be rebuilt and it will cost a lot of money to recarve the most glaring mistakes of temperamental realtors. Nevertheless, it must be done without excessive taxation or prohibitive assessments. Every city has its bugbear. In Chicago it is racketeering; in Detroit it is automobile saturation; in San Francisco union domination; in Los Angeles assessments.

"Assuming that the essential needs of the future are met, Los Angeles should have a population of 2,300,000 in 1940; of 4,300,000 in 1950, of 7,500,000 in 1980 and of 10,000,000 in 1966. It is a good mark to shoot at."

Mathematics Point City's Future



Figures Don't Lie

Edwin C. Cox, Los Angeles engineer, has delineated on a chart as graphic curves the lines of growth during the last century of the five largest American cities and London and, interpreting them in terms of the future, says: "In order to estimate the future growth of cities it is necessary to extend an investigation of their past over a long enough period to indicate a definite trend. This would cover so wide a range of values that if plotted to the ordinary scale of equal spaces it would become excessively cumbersome. For example, if it required a height of three inches to show the trends between 100,000 and 1,000,000 population, it would require thirty inches to extend this to 10,000,000. To get away from this difficulty engineers have adopted the logarithmic scale for plotting values with a wide range. In the accompanying chart heights are proportioned to the logarithms of the population, while the ten-year intervals are equally spaced. The five largest American cities and London are charted from 1830 to 1930 and extended to 1974, starting the population scale at 100,000. This is sufficient to obtain the general trend and shows some very interesting features, which would bear a whole volume of analysis."

Bowl Concert Season Drive Will be Pushed

With a little more than two weeks remaining before the opening of the Hollywood Bowl season on July 8, next, social leaders and clubwomen throughout Los Angeles who have joined in the campaign to make Bowl concerts the best attended in their history this year will launch an effort to complete the enrollment of seasonal patrons.

Contracts have been arranged for the bringing of internationally famous artists to the Bowl for the series of symphonies, and a larger sum is to be spent for this purpose than during any previous season, Business Manager Tindall announces. As a result an increased attendance is looked for.

Reservations coming in for seasonal memberships from points as far distant as San Diego show that music patrons in many southern counties will be regular visitors at concerts this summer.

Sacred Parade to be Made by Catholic Group

More than 30,000 persons are expected to join at 4 p.m. today in the Corpus Christi procession from the Church of Our Lady of Guadalupe, 4123 Fisher street, to La Soledad Church in Belvedere.

Rt. Rev. Joseph Gutierrez, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Guadalupe, announced yesterday the procession, in which the Blessed Sacrament will be carried, will be more colorful than ever before.

Picturesque Mexican costumes will be worn by many of the participants, who will sing hymns during the march. Both the American and Mexican orders of the Knights of Columbus will be represented.

FEDERAL JOB TEST RULINGS ANNOUNCED

Announcement was made yesterday of the regulations governing examinations soon to be held to fill vacancies in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce for junior and associate commercial agents. The examination rules, announced by the United States Civil Service Commission, require applicants to be graduates from a recognized university, or to have at least four years' banking experience in foreign trade. Knowledge of at least one foreign language is not essential, but useful. Applicants must have reached the age of 30 years when the time limit for the receipt of applications is reached, July 8, next. The salaries for the offices to be filled range from $1800 to $2300 a year. Further information can be had by applying to Room 735, Central Building.

SEWERS REQUESTED

A petition for the construction of sewers in Elder Court between Elder and Pickwick streets was filed with the City Council yesterday and referred to the City Engineer.

SANHUBER BANK DEALS SCANNED

State Links Mrs. Oesterreich to Joint Account

Attorneys Say Maiden Name and His Alias Used

Brother of Slain Man Will be Witness Tomorrow

The District Attorney's office announced yesterday that a joint bank account, assertedly kept by Otto Sanhuber, so-called ghost of the garret, and Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich, had been discovered and records from it would be introduced tomorrow at Sanhuber's trial for the murder of Fred Oesterreich, in Superior Judge Hardy's court.

The finding of the asserted joint bank account was hailed by Dep. Dist.-Attys. Costello and Russell, prosecuting Sanhuber, as one of the most important bits of evidence uncovered so far, in that it will be introduced for the purpose of showing association and conspiracy between Sanhuber and Mrs. Oesterreich, who is also under indictment for her husband's death, but who will be tried later.

BALANCE UNTOUCHED

The bank account, according to the prosecutors, was established at a suburban bank in 1918, the year the Oesterreichs, followed by Sanhuber, moved here from Milwaukee. It was continued and drawn against, it was declared, until approximately the date of Oesterreich's murder on August 27, 1922, but since that time a balance of $480 has remained untouched.

The joint bank account was opened under the names of D. Korschel and Otto Weir. Korschel, Costello and Russell assert, was Mrs. Oesterreich's maiden name and Weir was an alias often used by Sanhuber.

BROTHER TO TESTIFY

Tomorrow, it was declared, John L. Oesterreich, 734 East Howard street, Pasadena, brother of the murdered man, will be placed on the witness stand to testify to Mrs. Oesterreich's maiden name, and then the bank records will be introduced. The prosecutors said yesterday that these documents have been analyzed by police handwriting experts and that their connection with the two defendants has been definitely established.

Sanhuber's trial commences its third week tomorrow. When court adjourned Friday, the jury was listening to an asserted confession of the murder made before the grand jury by Sanhuber. At that time the "ghost man" told of his years of association with Mrs. Oesterreich and of five different attics that he had lived in so that he could be near her.

The District Attorney's office yesterday admitted they are trying to trace an anonymous telephone call to John Oesterreich threatening him if he took the witness stand in the Sanhuber trial. Oesterreich reported that he received the call Friday.

McGROARTY TO BE HOST

Members of American Legion Auxiliary Unit of Tujunga, and all their relatives and friends, are to enjoy the hospitality of the John Steven McGroarty home in Tujunga at a bridge tea on Wednesday. There will be a door prize, game prizes and refreshments.

SUSPECTED CAR THIEVES TURN OVER

Two men driving a stolen car were captured by police yesterday after a mile chase through traffic which ended when the officers shot a tire from the pursued car, which turned over. They gave their names as Clarence Warner, 30 years of age, of 432 South Alvarado street, and Roy Dexter, 18, transient, and are booked on suspicion-of-robbery charges.

The chase began at Beverly Boulevard and Western avenue when Officers Alpers and Maney attempted to halt the men driving a car which was listed as stolen from E. L. Baynes of 2885 Leeward avenue. In front of 209 South Oxford street the car jumped the curbing and turned over on the lawn. The men admitted stealing the car and have been identified as the bandits who recently robbed J. W. Canton, 4533 Orchard avenue, of a small sum.

The solution to the age-old controversy about heredity and environment seems to be solved by the Chicago baby that is living with a bullet in its brain.

OPTIMISTIC NOTE
Night baseball should have a favorable effect on the general efficiency of office and factory workers, particularly during those periods when the home team is playing its "traditional rival."

EASING IT OFF
Periodicals that publish muckraking articles are obliged to provide ample space for the flood of denials and criticisms that are sure to follow. But that is less costly than going through the courts.

NOT A WET-DRY ISSUE
Organized racketeering against business is far from being a product of prohibition. Saloons were wide open when the labor unions terrorized the country with dynamite and graft demands.

REALITY OF SPACE
Prof. Einstein is reported as asserting that space is the only thing that is real. This would almost permit a Senator to establish his standing as an entity. According to popular gossip his noodle activity is the finest display of space now extant.

CONTENTMENT IN STYLE
Lilyan Tashman confesses that she dresses very neatly on $25,000 a year. When she was first lady, Mrs. Roosevelt admitted that her wardrobe cost $300 per annum. And probably neither one would have cared to share the other's lot.

PUSH-HIKERS
Two hikers pushing a wheelbarrow containing their clothes passed through Los Angeles the other day en route to New York for a purse of $25,000. At that the worker about the new building under construction who pushes a wheelbarrow full of mortar will likely have more dough in the long run.

RULING RUMANIA
King Carol wants what he calls a concentration government, but he doesn't seem able to find it. A concentration government is one in which the parliament is made up of representatives of all parties, but there are so many parties in Rumania and they are at such variance that these representatives could not sit in council without continuous embroilment. One-party government is the thing and then hold that particular party responsible for its deeds.

GERMAN OPTIMISM
Dr. Ernst Feder of the Berlin Tageblatt, one of the party of European journalists now visiting this country, says there is a new spirit in Germany and that it is full of optimism. There has been a change, he says, in the attitude of the German people toward the Allies, and particularly toward America. It is no longer one of deep resentment. Germans have a rather friendly feeling toward their former foemen, and for this country it is also a feeling of admiration.

This is not the loose, overstated dictum of a guest anxious to please his host. It is borne out by Americans who have traveled recently in old Deutschland. One of the conditions concerning which Germans are still somewhat resentful is that though Germany signed the Versailles Treaty with the understanding that the armament of all nations would be gradually reduced, the reduction has been altogether too gradual, nothing whatever having been done to carry out the spirit of it in such a way as to place Germany anywhere near a position of equality.

But the main cause of lingering resentment toward the war victors has been the occupation of the Rhineland regions ever since the armistice. However, when the last foreign soldier marches out of that territory on June 30 the resentment may be expected to cease. It will be a day of German jubilation and a new chapter in the postwar history of Germany will be opened.

WINGS OF PEACE
When Andrew Carnegie, in his desire to dedicate his vast fortune to human welfare, set aside in 1910 a sum of $10,000,000 to finance a peace foundation, he proved his sincerity by attacking one of the heaviest burdens the race is forced to shoulder. Carnegie endowed many institutions for the public benefit, but none with a more worthy object. Moreover, he made sure that the Peace Foundation should not fritter away its resources in sentimental and foolish vaporings, but should apply them in a practical way to obtain practical results.

Those who are administering this trust have employed no more practical means for meeting the wishes of its founder than in planning and carrying out a series of international observation tours for newspaper men of different countries for the exchange of views and sentiments with fellow-craftsmen and the better appreciation of other nations' problems.

Fourteen journalists from Northern and Central Europe, at present touring the United States, whose short sojourn in Los Angeles has been a high-water mark in good fellowship, form the fifth of these groups exchanging international courtesies. In 1927 twenty-five American editors under the care of the Carnegie Peace Foundation toured England and continental Europe. A year later the Foundation arranged a return visit of fourteen leading British journalists to all the largest cities of the United States. Last year representatives of the Southern European press followed while eleven Americans made an extensive tour of Japan, China and Manchuria.

All these various delegations were carefully picked to form a cross section of public opinion from the countries they represented. They also included many leading journalists. Thus the British visitors in 1928 were headed by Ralph D. Blumenfeld, president of the Institute of Journalists and editor of the London Daily Express, the present delegation from continental Europe includes in its numbers such well-known publicists as Felix Salten of the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna, Alfred Hermann of the Hamburger Fremdenblatt and Dr. Ernest Feder of the Berlinger Tageblatt. On the Foundation tours both of Europe and the Orient the Pacific Coast representative of American journalism was Fred Hogue of The Times.

Of the hundreds of well-meant programs for promoting better international relations possibly none is so well calculated to achieve this object as this familiarizing of newspaper men at first hand with the conditions and sentiments of peoples widely separated by geographical boundaries and historical antecedents. Nearly 90 per cent of the opinion held concerning foreign countries is formed from reading the daily newspapers. The press of any nation can do more even than statesmen or diplomats to determine foreign relations by the manner in which it reports or editorializes on the acts and intentions of other governments when controversial questions arise of a dangerous nature.

Pulpit and press are recognized as the two leading powers for molding public opinion. Churches in the past have stirred up strife, but no church today, certainly no Christian church or Jewish synagogue, serves under any banner but that of international amity. The Carnegie Peace Foundation foresaw that if the leading journalists of the world could be enlisted in the same cause the final outlawing of war might indeed become an accomplished fact. To bring this about the Foundation conceived a series of visits by representatives of various newspapers to the countries of which they must write in their respective daily issues.

Peace by sentiment through the pulpit and peace by understanding through the press—with these accomplished, peace by diplomacy should be a foregone conclusion, since the popular opinion thus cemented would form a rampart against which jingoism would beat in vain.

Andrew Carnegie's allocation of a part of his fortune to so noble an object is a notable example of the new disposition seen in modern capitalists and masters of industry to pour the accumulated wealth of the world into helpful channels. No field for human betterment, be it for relieving sickness and banishing disease, pushing scientific discovery for the easing of ancient burdens or educating the popular mind in the righting of ancient wrongs, but is fertilized by the bequests and donations of those who in different lines of endeavor have risen to leadership. A practical scheme to advance international understanding ranks with the finest philanthropies this century has brought to fruition.

MORE MILITARY PLANES
Contracts for the construction of 402 military airplanes at a cost of $6,000,000 have just been let by the government. Of these 190 will be built at Santa Monica at a cost of $2,221,623, while 131 planes of the value of $1,563,183 will be built at Seattle, or a total for coast construction of $3,764,806, which is considerably more than one-half the amount to be paid to the eastern and western contractors. The eastern contracts go to Buffalo, N. Y.; Paterson, N. J., and Bridgeport, Ct.

Up to 1927 the United States military air service compared poorly in numbers of craft and pilots with that of other great nations, but in that year the attention of Congress became focused on aviation, as France and Britain were putting forth mighty efforts in that line, and of late years there have been notable accessions to our list of military planes and dirigibles. With the completion of the dirigibles ZRS-4 and ZRS-5, each 785 feet long and each costing $4,250,000, together with smaller ones, we shall be better equipped with lighter-than-air craft by the end of the year than any other nation, but it remains to be seen how we shall compare with other countries in the matter of airplanes.

By the provisions of the act authorizing a five-year aircraft program, the rate of the Navy's air service expansion was to be as follows: 1927, 235 planes; 1928, 313 planes; 1929, 335 planes; 1930, 357 planes; 1931, 374 planes. The cost of these aircraft is to be $85,078,750, about one-fourth of which will be expended in 1931, when the largest number of planes is to be built.

This is a heavy national expense and to it must be added the cost of operation and maintenance. But the outlay seems necessary, for as a means of defense a great fleet of serviceable aircraft is a first consideration with modern military men.

GAS
The factory wheels of Chicago will soon be turned by natural gas from Texas fields, says a recent announcement. A gas main 1250 miles long has been let by contract and Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky will soon be natural gassed.

Within the past five years lines running from one to 500 miles have been laid and billions of cubic feet of gas from various oil fields are being conveyed to Cleveland, St. Louis, Denver, San Francisco and other points. Natural gas began helping feed the factory fires of Los Angeles and cook her dinners a long time ago.

A dozen years ago we were told that the natural gas supply was rapidly diminishing and that it would soon be gone entirely. During the present year $250,000,000 is to be invested in gas pipe lines alone. Instead of diminishing, the new discoveries have greatly augmented the output. Needless wastage of gas has been greatly reduced by proper conservation methods. It is impossible to estimate the amount of gas in the earth, but the two fields that supply San Francisco with 400,000,000 cubic feet daily are believed to have a future life of at least seventy-five years.

Coal in the crude state will not be burned as much as formerly. It is being generated into gas at the mine and distributed through pipes cheaper than coal can be shipped by rail or water. Gasoline will also be produced from coal and a dozen different alcohols will be distilled.

Coal burning will soon be history and smoke and soot that deposit 460 tons annually on a square mile of Pittsburgh and Chicago will disappear. A property loss of $500,000,000 a year will also be saved.

The LEE SIDE O' LA
BY Lee Shippey

Personal Glimpses of Famous Southlanders

IN ALL the firmament of motion-picture stars, ranging from Jupiters and Venuses down to infinitesimal splashes in the Milky Way, Irene Rich is unique. She had been married twice and borne three children before she ever broke into pictures as an extra girl. In the disappointments and defeats which would have blighted the lives of most women she had found herself. She had come to the one sound philosophy of life—that nothing or nobody can ever down you except yourself, and all you have to do is keep smiling and working and using your head and you'll win out in the end.

So now Irene is being starred alone in the picture, "On Her Back," which soon will be released; she has the leading support role in Will Rogers's "So This Is London," as she had in "They Had to See Paris." And in private life she is Mrs. David Blankenhorn, the gracious mistress of a gracious house at 626 South Windsor, which her two daughters and her husband's two sons find the pleasantest of homes, and is rejoicing in the return of her daughter Frances from Smith College and her daughter Jane from the Santa Barbara Girls' School. She is happy as mother, wife and actress, with the future looking very good to her.

One Vacationer Who Stuck

It was a vacation trip to Los Angeles which made an actress of Irene. She had wanted to be an actress all her life, but something always had interfered. Her mother before her had wanted to be an actress, but things always had prevented her from making the attempt. She, the mother, had married a building contractor in Buffalo, N. Y., and then children had put an end to her ambitions. Irene seemed destined to go the same way, for she married at the age of 17 and then her daughter Frances came along to complicate matters. But Irene had married much too young and before she was 20 felt she had to free herself. Then she wanted to go on the stage, but her father would not hear of such nonsense. So, being an obliging girl, she tried matrimony again, that time with an army officer. She lived four years in Honolulu as an army bride without ever learning to drink, which, we think, shows a good deal of character. Then again she felt she had to free herself, and went to San Francisco to make a living for her two little girls. There had been a boy, too, who died.

But she didn't go about looking for shoulders to weep on. She began hustling clients for a real estate company and was such an energetic and pleasant and trustworthy body that she made a living and a little over. So, when she had a wad of savings raked together, she took a vacation and came to Los Angeles to try what she always had wanted to try—to be an actress.

She got a job the first day she applied for work as an extra, and every day thereafter, for two weeks, including Sundays, she was working. So she hurried back to San Francisco, resigned her job there, brought her mother and two children here—and for months thereafter didn't get any more jobs at all.

Couldn't Get Her in a Rut

Those were heartbreaking days, but she never lost faith or courage. She trudged from studio to studio every day. When at last she got a job she called up all the other studios to tell them she couldn't be around that day, but to remember her. Every time she got a job she did that. She never gave them a chance to forget her and her personality was such that they always remembered her pleasantly.

Pretty soon she got a chance in a "vamp bit and did so well that they cast her for other vamp parts. The directors almost got her classified and confined to the narrow lines of vamping. But fortunately Will Rogers came along and wanted her for just the reverse—the sweet gingham-aproned country lass. And she did so well in that sort of thing that the directors forgot all about how completely she had fooled them once and classed her only as a gingham-aproned type. Ernst Lubitsch, however, saw deeper than that and cast her as a Spanish queen in Mary Pickford's "Rosita." And after that Warner Brothers decided she was the ideal neglected-wife type and for five years she was the most neglected wife in Hollywood, weeping through a grand total of about 300,000 feet of film. She still gets letters from women who saw her then in "Compromise," "My Wife and I" and "Being Respectable." Neglected wives all over the world have felt she was the one woman who really understood their cases. And maybe she was. Anyway, she has a gift for friendliness.

Serious Yet Bright

When we called at Irene's house she and her two daughters were dressed in beach trousers and short-sleeved shirts. That is their favorite house dress. She led us into a very charming room in which two big pictures stood out, one either an old master or a very old copy of one, a sort of madonna-and-child picture, and the other a softly sunlit landscape by Swinnerton. She offered us a cigarette, but didn't care for one herself. And then we got to talking, for Irene is really worth talking to. She has ideas and warm friendship for many people she has known in her twelve years here. She is convinced that life is good and the people are good and we're all good fellows together. And yet she is a very serious woman—brightly and charmingly serious, but serious all the same and all the time. She has found herself and made a lot out of life instead of letting it break her. We came away feeling she is one of the most sensibly courageous women we have met.

WHAT OTHERS THINK ABOUT IT

THE WONDER CITY
[New York Herald Tribune]

Los Angeles is the wonder city of the 1930 census, at least in the class of cities above 500,000. Its population has risen to 1,231,730, its increase has been 115.71 per cent, and it has jumped from tenth place to fifth. In 1920 Detroit jumped from eighth place to fourth, with an increase of 113 per cent. Detroit's was a motor splurge; Los Angeles is an oil and "movie" splurge, each representing industrial specialties of its decade.

The "movie" metropolis grew by annexation as well as by intensification of its favorite activities. It did not suck the surrounding areas dry, however, for Los Angeles county's increase (138.88 per cent) is larger than the city's. Southern California is a new empire, and California must be added to the other empire States—New York and Texas.

It is amazing to think that in 1890 Los Angeles had a population of only 50,395. Even in 1900 its population was only 102,479. But the silver screen, the oil gushers, the golden climate and the Middle Western exodus got to work, and Los Angeles City has passed into the 1,000,000 class, and Los Angeles county has population exceeding New York county's and about equaling Kings county's. When a reapportionment does justice to California, Los Angeles county will have eight or nine Representatives in Congress instead of two, as at present. The Representatives from these two districts have a unique distinction in the House, one of them having been elected in 1928 by a majority of 162,301 and the other by a majority of 281,369. Each of these districts has a population of more than a million.

Great is Los Angeles and great is California, both now entering the flood tide of progress, population and national influence!

FLOWERS IN THE DESERT
[Philadelphia Public Ledger]

Summer as we know it comes rarely to Death Valley in the West and winter shuns it altogether. This fearful canyon among the mountains knows no climate save heat, greater or less, with scattered spring rains, which vanish so quickly in the rocky earth that they bring no life into the valley.

But a miracle of weather has come to Death Valley and brought other miracles with it. For nearly three weeks on end in May rain fell on this lowest level of America, and now it is covered with a quick growth of green and gay flowers. An unsuspected garden was waiting there for kindly weather. Living seeds were among the dry sands and food enough for them to grow and flourish when rain came.

Call this, if you please, a touch of careless kindliness on the part of Mother Nature. It has its parallel among men, some of whom are barren of good for lack of sympathy and encouragement.

THE WEEK IN POLITICS

BY KYLE D. PALMER

The time having elapsed in which candidates may file nominating petitions for various public offices appearing on the August preferential primary ballot, the helpless and hapless populace probably can best meet the situation during the next sixty or seventy days by listening with such resignation as it can command to the customary pointing with pride and viewing with alarm.

The closing time for nominations occasioned no last-minute changes of any importance. The Republican gubernatorial race lies between Gov. Young, Dist.-Atty. Fitts and Mayor Rolph of San Francisco. In the fight for Lieutenant-Governor it appears that a Southern Californian is certain to gain the office, as all of the formidable bidders for the second position on the State ticket reside in this section of the State.

They are: Lieut.-Gov. Carnahan, State Senator Merriam and former State Senator Chamberlin, all of Los Angeles county. Withdrawal from this contest of State Senator Nelson of Eureka, whose fractured leg proved too great a handicap for a State-wide campaign, leaves the field virtually open in Northern California, despite the candidacy of State Senator Tubbs of San Francisco, who is an eager, but not an especially impressive candidate.

So far Congressman Evans in the Ninth District and Congressman Crail in the Tenth District seem to have the best of it, but the latter may find serious opposition in George H. Barnes. It is probable that the county's two Representatives will be aided in their work at Washington by several new colleagues from Los Angeles following the Congressional election two years hence, as the reapportionment of Congress membership under the 1930 census will have been determined before that time.

Aside from the fight for Governor and for Lieutenant-Governor in this territory, several aggressive political combats are developing, among them the effort to retire Sheriff Traeger, a candidate for re-election, and various contests for places on the Superior bench, all eleven incumbents seeking to retain their posts and several of them having energetic opposition.

And, furthermore, a genuine political battle royal seems to be in prospect for the Los Angeles county State Senatorship, two of the county's best-known incumbent State Senators having decided to seek the honor—and the work—which will fall to the lot of the man chosen this year to take over the interests heretofore represented by eight State Senators. This situation develops, it may be recalled, by reason of the enforcement of a constitutional amendment approved by the people two years ago limiting any single county in the State to one member in the California Senate. The candidates are State Senators Lyon and McKinley of Los Angeles.

On the other hand, the just apportionment of Assembly seats to this county, denied by the Legislature for many years and only accomplished when the constitutional amendment was adopted, adds seven new Assembly districts to the city and county, making a total of twenty-two seats to be filled either in the August primary or in the final November election.

Attorney Milton K. Young of Los Angeles, distinguished Democrat, will get the Democratic nomination for Governor, according to representatives of various Democratic factions, and get it, they say, on a virtually unanimous basis, giving Mr. Young the further opportunity to lambaste his Republican opponent during the final election campaign and, having lambasted him, to extend congratulations after the votes have been counted.

Until the horizon clears a little with regard to aspirants for other State offices, it will be difficult to determine whether the incumbents will have to make a fight to gain re-election. At this stage of the campaign, however, it seems that State Controller Riley is reasonably assured of re-election and that this optimistic outlook applies also to State Treasurer Johnson.

There are rumblings, here and there, of a fight on Atty.-Gen. Webb and Secretary of State Jordan.

The Republican gubernatorial race, slowly warming up, finds Young, Rolph and Fitts in the field, making addresses, discussing State problems and looking for support wherever it may be found.

Supporters of Rolph in Northern California are almost ecstatic in their optimism. In this section of California the outlook for San Francisco's chief executive is not so rosy, if reports from various areas are true reflections of popular opinion.

Dist.-Atty. Fitts has appeared before several representative meetings in the northern portion of the State during the last few days and is reported to have made an excellent impression.

Incidentally, the Los Angeles County Republican Central Committee is receiving considerable applause from newspapers throughout the State for the committee's recent formal action in castigating Gov. Young's reaffirmation of the Governor's ancient grudge against the Republican party. Letters of commendation, and many editorials of like tenor, have been sent to Col. William Eric Fowler, chairman of the Los Angeles committee, who has taken an active part in a movement throughout Southern California to strengthen party lines and vitalize party loyalties.

THE ORIENTAL DON'T

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Chinese religion emphasizes negation. "Thou Shalt Not . . ." is the theme song of Confucianism.

"And it has probably played an important part in retarding the progress of my country," E. K. Moy told me . . . that most charming Chinese journalist friend of Mei Lan-fang.

"For instance, with your people it is, 'Do unto others as you would wish others to do unto you' . . . but in China it is, 'Do not do unto others that which you would not wish them to do unto you' . . . a rather subtle distinction. You are positive, we are negative. Our creed tends to stultify initiative enterprise, action. All the same, it prevents us doing a great many 'goods deeds' that are unwelcome . . ." said Mr. Moy, smiling slyly.

"You see, it is quite possible for good positive people to become rather officious. They are always, for instance, wanting to reform each other. They want to pass legislation which they think will improve people and conditions . . . and so often their kind attentions are sadly unappreciated. Here you can see where there are certain charms about our 'Do not do unto others which you would not wish them to do unto you.' Very few reformers would themselves like being reformed . . ."

Mr. Moy says all this in a smiling way . . . sly, gentlemanly, quiet . . .

So that I rather gathered that, while he realized that our passion for the positive, for initiative, for action, is probably largely responsible for the glory and progress of America, it is also apt to be a bit uncomfortable.

But Mr. Moy sees China slowly, laboriously, acquiring a little positiveness. The good will visit of Mei Lan-Fang, for instance, is a positive gesture of friendship. Coming from any other country it would not have had half the significance.

If those vast 500,000,000 of China ultimately become positive, it is going to be highly impressive . . . and perhaps disturbingly uncomfortable for the world, too. They are so extraordinarily thorough, these Chinese, in whatever they undertake. Nothing but their attitude of negation has prevented them stirring things up considerably. Imagine a China as devastatingly enterprising, as strong in initiative, as passionately devoted to action and the "Do it now" creed as we are!

One phrase that Mr. Moy used was tremendously effective. He told of the vogue for cynicism which he, as a journalist, also frequently felt. "But cynicism is only justified when it has for its purpose the restraint of idealism within the range of practicality."

"WE WHO ARE TO DIE"

By The Foothill Philosopher

Is it because of the writer's karmic relation to some of the small animals of the "lower order of life" or is it because he has a sympathy complex and is in love with melancholy that so many little creatures come to him when they are ready to die?

"Daddy, here's an old dead cat right in front of your bedroom door!" exclaimed my little son one morning last week. I picked the little fellow up (he was a black cat, too) and buried him deep in the back yard.

Next day, as I was walking the dusty road two miles from my home, a little cur limped out of the bushes and looked up at me with a strange appeal in his eyes. I took him in my arms and carried him home. I fed him milk and graham crackers and then took him out for a walk. He was not crippled, but he could hardly "navigate."

I took my little friend back into the house and laid him on a rug. He lay quietly for a few minutes and then suddenly began to tremble and froth at the mouth. Then I knew. He had been poisoned. Luckily I had some chloroform and in a few minutes he lay lifeless on the rug. I wrapped some papers around him, carried him to the back yard and buried him by the side of the black cat. Neither of them ever will know that they might have been enemies. May they awaken in a world in which dogs and cats follow the example of the angels of peace instead of imitating the actions of men. JAMES WARNACK.

If you think the Canary Islands were so named because the trees were full of yellow songsters, guess again. Large numbers of dogs roaming around caused King Juba II of the Mauretanias, who discovered the islands, to take the Latin name "canaries," meaning "dogs," and bestow it on the place. W. B. J.

MR. HOOVER MAKES REPLY

President Hoover's brief statement that the treaty speaks for itself is answer enough to all of Hiram Johnsons in the world and out. The absurdity of Senator Johnson's pretension that there may be some hidden obligations of this country is apparent when the matter is looked at in the light of the Constitution. President Hoover could not tell the United States without negotiation by the Senate, and the body is more aware of this fact than Senator Johnson.

The President points out further that the only basis for objection to the treaty is the consequence involves building of Navy out of a 1930 fleet amounting to 1,126,000 tons in the form of cruisers with eight-inch guns as against the treaty provision of 38,000 tons of cruisers with six-inch guns. Mr. Hoover calls attention to this argument on 3 per cent of the total Navy has expired on both sides.

This gets the treaty down to its true proportions. It takes a person of the caliber of Senator Johnson to measure—or down—to the demands of 3 per cent fight. The Senator Hiram is determined that President of the United States shall not betray the country to the extent of getting 3 per cent of the Navy 8500 tons (in weight and two inches small in gun diameter. That the kind of patriot the Senator Hiram is. And that is why the squabble is over. Only such issues are statesmen born in California and in Bunco county.—[Dallas News.

WHEN

When we have pneumatic tires
Upon the benches in the park
When we've found a way to banish
All the big assessment sharks

When directors get the cream
That is given to the stars,
When they have an airship in that runs
From Hollywood to Mars;

When our banks are free from hold-ups
And all dope fiends cured to stay,
When the hit-and-run performers
Have been quietly laid away

When the women's skirts grow longer
And they cease to roll their

When they put away the

And decide to wear more

Takes a picture with a smile,
Then we'll all forget our troubles
And this life will seem worth

RED MASS PROTEST BALKED

Plaza Demonstration Over Valley Convictions Fizzles and Four Land in Lock-up

A proposed mass demonstration at the Plaza of local Reds and Communist sympathizers, in protest against recent conviction and imprisonment of nine radicals for fomenting Imperial Valley labor trouble, failed to materialize yesterday due to the vigilance of police and lack of interest among the demonstrators.

Four asserted Communists were arrested by Detective Lieutenant Hynes and his anti-Red squad as a result of the attempted disorder. Hynes said only a few known radicals appeared and they were forced to keep moving.

A heavy patrol of officers went on duty at the Plaza at the hour announced as the time for the demonstration. They were armed with night sticks and tear bombs and given orders to prevent any public disturbance.

A few of the Communists attempted to start a riot in front of the Federal Building but Hynes's men stepped in quickly and broke up the gathering before traffic was blocked or anyone injured.

Later Hynes raided a South Los Angeles rendezvous of the local Communists, seizing and destroying several bales of inflammatory literature, and the proposed demonstration of the radicals fizzled completely.

Those arrested gave their names as Martin Shapiro, 18 years of age, 916 North Soto street; George House, 58, of 523 Gladys street; Miss Johanna Reed, 22, of 2337 East Third street, and Miss Jesse Shulen, 17, living at 2723 Malabar street. All were booked for violation of Sec. 416, which pertains to seditious speech and unlawful assemblages.

COMEDIAN BACK FROM HONOLULU

Harold Lloyd Makes Trip on Liner With Company to Shoot Sound Films

Harold Lloyd, motion-picture comedian, returned to Hollywood yesterday, following his special trip to Honolulu to shoot boat scenes for his forthcoming comedy.

A total of 15,000 feet of sound film was shot on the ship and in Honolulu.

He spent only three days at Honolulu, where he was feted as a guest of the Aloha Temple of the Shrine, which arranged a unique Hawaiian Luau.

Lloyd was accompanied by Mrs. Lloyd, while others of his company included Barbara Kent, his leading lady; Clyde Bruckman, director; John L. Murphy, production manager, sound technicians, electricians, carpenters and other actresses and actors.

While in Honolulu Lloyd talked on the radio at the request of residents of Kolsaupapa, Molokai, the settlement of the living dead.

He will resume work on his picture tomorrow at his Hollywood studio.

Memorial Park to Get Painting Sent From Italy

A portrayal of the Lord's Last Supper on fire-painted cathedral glass, created for Forest Lawn Memorial Park by Rosa Caselli-Moretti, Italian artist, will leave Genoa today for Los Angeles after having been five years in the making. It is in a huge window and is scheduled to arrive August 3.

The window measures twenty-nine feet long by fifteen feet high. Each figure is twice life size. The work was begun in February, 1925. It will be installed in the Memorial Court of Honor at Forest Lawn, where it will be permanently housed.

ORATORS TAKEN TO CATALINA

Collegiate Finalists on Week-end Trip to Island; One of Party Flies Home

Young men who participated in the finals of the National Intercollegiate Oratorical contest, held here Thursday under auspices of the Better America Federation of California, spent the week-end at Catalina. One member of the party, Franklin P. Cole of De Pauw University, Greencastle, Ind., returned home yesterday by plane, having flown here a week ago.

Tomorrow evening the orators will be entertained by the Lions' State Theater and will be introduced from the stage. On Friday evening they were entertained at the Los Angeles Athletic Club by the Better America Federation, President A. C. Denman presiding.

The boys also were guests at luncheon on the Paramount lot Friday, with June Collyer as hostess. Later they visited the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

They expect to return to their homes some time this week.

Dancing Center at Paseo Opens With Festival

A dinner and reception marked the opening of the Sala de Festejos at the Casa la Golondrina Cafe in the Paseo de Los Angeles last night. The new room has a dance floor that is reached via an archway cut through the sturdy old brick wall of the cellar of the Pelanconi Winery.

Tables were reserved early in the week and many who went stood about waiting for a vacant table and service. A musical program was presented by Senorita Maria Luisa Bernal, Senor Arturo de Palma, Mildred Costello and the La Golondrina quartet.

Among the patronesses seen at the tables were Mrs. Secundo Guasti, Senora J. L. de Asunsolo, Senora Izabel Del Valle de Cram, Mrs. Wilfred L. M. Chapman, Mrs. Victor Ford Collins, Mrs. Eleanor Gaughrs Kinney DeWitt, Mrs. Charles H. Johnstone, Mrs. Estelle C. Holmes and Mrs. N. L. Coleman.

Neither the Swiss Alps nor the Mediterranean Riviera, famed for their beauty, offers more fascinating scenery than does an air trip between Los Angeles and San Diego, W. Irving Bullard of Boston, founder of the Colonial Air Transport between that city and New York, said yesterday.

Mr. Bullard, who is chairman of the aeronautical committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce, has flown in almost every country having regularly scheduled air service, and arrived in Los Angeles recently on a visit.

OLIVE PACKING AT END FOR SUMMER

LINDSAY, June 21.—Completing a pack of 160,000 cases, or 28 per cent of the output of the entire industry, the Lindsay Ripe Olive Company has closed for the summer. The other 74 per cent is divided among twenty-two other plants. Last year's peak was 180,000 cases. This year's output is several thousand cases above the early estimates. Operations will be resumed in September.

PORT TO FOSTER BUS LINE PLANS

Adequate Metropolitan Area Facilities Sought

Manager Confers With Rail Board Examiner

Favorable Action on Three Requests Expected

BY WALDO DRAKE

The Harbor Department will lend its aid to all bus-service applicants to secure adequate transportation facilities between the port area and the metropolitan district, it was announced yesterday by Port Manager Burt Edwards. Mr. Edwards's announcement follows a conference with Examiner Williams of the State Railroad Commission, relative to the department's jurisdiction over highways within the port district.

As a result, Mr. Williams said, he will recommend that the Railroad Commission recognize the Harbor Department's control over all streets in the harbor area in granting operating permits to the three applicants now desiring to operate motor coach lines between Los Angeles Harbor and the uptown area. These include the Los Angeles Motor Coach Company, whose service would include Hollywood, Los Angeles, to San Pedro via Broadway and Main street, and Wilmington; the Harbor Stage Company, which has applied for permit to operate direct service between the port and uptown, and the Union Pacific motor coach service, which seeks to add local service to its stage line connecting its East San Pedro terminal with the East Los Angeles station, via Atlantic avenue and Long Beach.

The applicant pointed out in the hearing on the 19th inst. before the Railroad Commission that this extension would give the eastern metropolitan area direct passenger service to Long Beach and the harbor area, there being no facilities over this route at present.

Mr. Edwards said that the revenue the Harbor Department will derive from bus operations is a secondary factor; it being the department's desire to encourage in every way direct passenger transportation from all sections of the city to the harbor.

BIDS ON RAMMED CRAFT REPAIR ENTERED

Bids were received yesterday from local shipyards for repairs to the British motorship Silverguava, of Kerr Line's Los Angeles-Singapore direct service, which was rammed early yesterday by a Standard Oil bunkering barge. Several plates were dented and one punctured on the ship's port quarter and one propeller blade badly bent in the crash.

In early yesterday from the Dutch East Indies, the Silverguava brought for local discharge 7000 cases of rubber and consignments of spices, sugar, hemp and pig iron. The accident will not delay the Silverguava's schedule, her regular departure being the 26th inst.

Probability of Panama-Pacific Line's inclusion of San Diego in its eastbound schedule was expressed yesterday, with inclusion in the new rivers and harbors bill of a $646,000 authorization for removal of the San Diego entrance bar. The entrance will be dredged to a depth of forty feet, to a width of 800 feet and a length of 1500, running inward from the Point Loma sea buoy. L. E. Archer, Pacific Coast manager of the Panama-Pacific Line, will arrive here today for a survey.

Lieut. Apollo Soucek, navy flyer who recently established a new world's altitude record, will arrive here with his bride on July 5 aboard the Panama-Pacific liner Virginia. Lieut. Soucek, well known here as a former aviator aboard the fleet flagship California, has been assigned to duty aboard the aircraft carrier Lexington.

Shipping Board leaped ahead during the week just closed establishing high figures in several endeavors. An all-time record was set in the dispatch of petroleum, 3,370,128 barrels going forth to ports around the world during the past seven days. Last week the total was 1,987,580.

Arrivals of commercial ships also reached an unusual total of 195, which was surpassed only by the week of September 7, last, when 198 vessels entered port. That means an average of twenty-eight arrivals and as many departures every day, most of which ships can stow hundreds of railway carloads of cargo each.

Even lumber receipts, which have been in the doldrums many months, showed a slight gain, rising from 20,900,000 board feet the previous week to 21,198,000 feet during the period just closed.

The Dollar liner President Van Buren is due from New York at noon today, bound around the world with 100 passengers and cargo. Approximately forty travelers will disembark here and as many more will embark from here, including a dozen school-teachers, booked to Manila and return by other Dollar liners.

Hamburg American Line's new motor liner Oakland will arrive from Northern Europe at 4 p.m. today, with every passenger accommodation filled, and with 2000 tons of cargo for discharge here.

LIGHT TESTER'S CLAIM MODEST

Dr. Michelson Can Vision No "Practical" Value

Measurement of Speed May be Made in Ten Days

Aides' Work on Long Tube Pleases Scientist

SANTA ANA, June 21. (Exclusive) The forthcoming experiments of Dr. Albert A. Michelson, noted physicist of the University of Chicago, to determine the exact speed of light will be his "final contribution to science" but "probably have no practical value."

That casually expressed opinion of the eminent scientist was pondered here today as he sojourned at Pasadena, following his first visit late yesterday to the Irvine ranch, scene of the proposed tests.

Dr. Michelson expressed pleasure over the way the mile-long vacuum tube and other apparatus have been installed under the supervision of his assistants, Dr. Francis Pease and Fred Pearson.

"I will probably not return here until Dr. Pease and Mr. Pearson are ready for me to start the tests," Dr. Michelson said. He added that approximately ten days will be required for this.

The final determination of the speed of light is indefinite, according to Dr. Michelson. Weeks may elapse before everything is ready for the actual tests, he indicated. At this point he expressed doubt as to the practical value of the experiment.

GROUP WILL SEEK JOBS FOR BOYS

Task of Finding Proper Places for 3000 to be Studied at Luncheon

The problem of the boy and his employment will be considered Wednesday at the prevacation luncheon of the Council for the Promotion of Boys' Welfare at the Alexandria. With more than 3000 boys completing their education and seeking permanent employment within the next few days, business men who comprise the council are making efforts to place these young men in business houses and industrial plants to which they are best adapted.

Joseph Scott, chairman of the boys' week committee of the council, will be toastmaster, and speakers will include Leo V. Youngworth, past Imperial Potentate of the Shrine; Frank S. Hutton, Exalted Ruler of Elks' Lodge No. 99; Judge Gavin of the Superior Court and Col. LeRoy F. Smith of the Better America Federation.

The organization also is making plans for a health camp to open later in the summer, at which undernourished boys will be built up in preparation for their next year's school work.

Dr. James Steinberg, president of the council will introduce new directors recently added to the board. These include Herman Nater, Bank of Italy; D. W. Pontius, president of the Pacific Electric Railway; A. R. Hewitt, American Education Association; Will G. Fischer, Southern California Edison Company; J. J. Doyle, Past Exalted Ruler of the Elks; Mr. Youngworth, Bonner Adams, Los Angeles Railway Company; Mr. Hutton, Dan B. Miner, advertising; George Bradley, Bradley Shoe Company; Herman Spittel, insurance, and Charles Spear, superintendent of Silverwood's.

COUPLE CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Starr, 272 South Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary yesterday at their home. More than 100 guests were present and took part in the celebration which lasted during the entire day. Mr. and Mrs. Starr, who have been residents of this city for the past fifteen years, were married in Pennsylvania. Their two children, Mrs. A. E. Adams and Mrs. Charles Perrill, both of Los Angeles, attended.

VALUE OF TRADE MEETING CITED

High Interest Shown Here in Pan-American Meet

Tour of State Will Precede Sacramento Session

Oakland Man Gives Talk to Commerce Club

Southern California's direct interest in the Pan-American reciprocal trade conference, scheduled for Sacramento August 25 to 30, was the keynote of a talk before the Foreign Trades Club of Southern California yesterday by Clif Brooks, Oakland, director of the State tour, which precedes the opening of the business sessions in the State Capitol.

The Foreign Trade Club met at luncheon at the City Club and included the membership of the Los Angeles county co-operative committee for the Pan-American reciprocal trade conference. Max E. Sochs, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, represents the co-operative group as chairman.

"Los Angeles must be complimented upon the progressive attitude of its Chamber of Commerce in the development of Latin-American trade," Brooks asserted in his talk to the foreign trade body. "The gradual trend of trade in the Western Hemisphere has been north and south—not east and west as it was in the early part of the twentieth century.

ENTHUSIASM SHOWN

"The Pan-American reciprocal trade conference has met with the instant approval of every far-sighted Latin-American business man who plans to attend the unofficial and informal meeting in California during August. The opportunity to meet his northern neighbor at informal, round-table discussions has never been presented before, and the Latin-American representatives firmly believe that many vexatious barriers of trade may be removed by free, unhampered talk among the various delegations."

Eighteen of the twenty Latin-American countries have already stamped their approval on the California conference, although the sponsors of the reciprocal trade movement did not expect any of the governments to send delegates, according to the tour director.

"Great stress has been placed on the unofficial character of the meeting," Brooks indicated. "However, the various nations apparently realize the immense amount of progress which could be accomplished by a meeting of this type, and they plan to send official delegates from their governments.

TOUR PLANNED

"Unofficial delegations, however, representing farm, civic and business organizations of Latin America, will form the larger part of the unofficial conference. Present plans of the program committee include round-table discussions of every topic of interest to the visiting leaders, as well as a two weeks' tour of the State.

"Los Angeles is the starting point of the State tour and will be host to the distinguished gathering longer than any other point included in the tour," said Brooks. "For three days, at least, the visitors will be shown points of interest in Los Angeles county, and the sponsors of the conference are gratified that so much interest has been shown by the local Chamber of Commerce and the Board of Supervisors.

Governors of provinces and States, trade commissioners, United States Congressmen and possibly several ambassadors from Washington will be present at the opening of the August meeting to add color to the representative conclave, the tour director indicated.

"Los Angeles was one of the first California cities to form a co-operative group to assist the conference officials in their effort to make the hospitality of this State outstanding," Brooks asserted. "And through the work of the Los Angeles committee, it is believed that the visit of the delegates here will prove very interesting."

Croushorn Will Direct Sheriff's Nine Stations

Effective tomorrow morning, Dave Croushorn, homicide investigator, becomes director of the Sheriff's nine substations, taking the place of Harvey Bell, who assumes new duties in the homicide detail.

The transfer was made by Sheriff Traeger, who said that Bell, long in the service of the Sheriff's office, had requested the change because of the confining nature of the director's position. His new work will permit him to be outside.

Croushorn has been attached to the office for seven years, serving as investigator and jailer.

PAVING DIVISION ASKED

The Hollywood Holding and Development Corporation yesterday requested the City Council to divide into two parts the proceedings for the paving of Mulholland High Way from Cahuenga Boulevard to Laurel Canyon. The division point requested is one and one-third miles west of Cahuenga Boulevard. The matter was referred to the City Engineer and the Public Works Committee.

THREE CANCER CLINICS TO AID WAR ON SCOURGE

Relief for the more than 1000 patients of the Coffey-Humber cancer clinics, as well as for the physicians in charge of the work, will be afforded by the establishment of three permanent clinics it was announced yesterday by officials in charge. The new clinics will serve to take the pressure off the crowded conditions at the club rooms in the Pacific Electric Building.

A clinic has been established at the Kellogg Foundation, 303 North Boyle avenue, under E. L. Harris. He will be responsible for the treatment of 2000 patients. Another permanent clinic, at the General Hospital, under Dr. James F. Percy, will care for 150 patients. Dr. R. W. Starr, clinical director in Southern California, will be in charge of the clinic at the Pacific Electric Building, at which 350 patients will be treated. About 200 other patients will be accommodated at the Community Hospital at Long Beach, with Dr. F. C. Renfrew in charge.

Dr. A. S. Linser and Dr. Starr will visit the various clinics during the week. Mondays and Thursdays they will be at the Kellogg Foundation at 1:30 p.m. On Wednesday, at 7:30 a.m., and Fridays at noon they will visit the General Hospital. Wednesdays and Fridays at 2 p.m. they will be at Pacific Electric clinic and on Tuesdays, at 1:30 p.m., at Long Beach clinic.

Dr. John D. Humber will make frequent visits from San Francisco to Southern California to supervise the work, it was announced.

NONAGENARIAN ON FIRST AIRPLANE RIDE

Mrs. Rebecca Kildow

MANY ERAS OF TRAVEL WITNESSED

Woman Who Remembers Conestoga Coach Rides in Modern Air Liner

When Mrs. Rebecca Kildow, 95-year-old resident of Santa Monica, arrived at the Western Air Express airport here late yesterday from San Francisco she realized a crowning ambition of later life. She rode in an oxcart during her childhood at Kayser, W. Va., a Concord stage during her early teens, a steamboat, a railroad, an automobile at the beginning of the twentieth century—and now an airplane. W.A.E. officials said she was the oldest person to have traveled over their lines.

"The only trouble with my trip was the shortness," Mrs. Kildow stated. "Never before did I realize the luxury and comforts afforded air travelers.

"I have witnessed the progress of transportation from the pack-horse or horseback era down to these modern airplanes, and my eyes are not too dim now to take note of the beginning of a new transportation era.

"Well do I remember the Conestoga coach, which, I believe, received its name from the fact that it was originated in the valley of the same name in Pennsylvania. Its chief peculiarity was its curved bottom made so that its load would not slide going up and down hill.

"I have noticed that in the beginning of all different modes of transportation people are reluctant to use them. But that's human nature, I suppose."

Carl Laemmle Denies Rumors of Sale Deal

Carl Laemmle, Sr., president of Universal Pictures Corporation, emphatically denied yesterday reports current in Hollywood that his picture studio and holdings are for sale or that there are any negotiations whatever for such a sale.

"We are going ahead on a larger scale than ever before with our next year's production program," Mr. Laemmle stated yesterday. "We have already engaged seven of the outstanding directors in the business and have expended thousands of dollars for new story material.

"The picture corporation that I head is emphatically not for sale and never has been."

The reports that New York interests were dickering for the Laemmle holdings came as a result of Laemmle's recent visit to the East. At that time it was declared a group of picture interests, said to have been headed by William Fox, made an offer for Universal, but it was rejected. It was said that German interests also were involved in the negotiations.

STATE BAR BOARD SESSION ADJOURNS

After a short session in which they disposed of routine matters, the board of governors of the State Bar of California adjourned yesterday. The board met for three days in the courtroom of the District Court of Appeal in the Associated Realty Building. The next meeting will be held July 18, in San Francisco.

Affairs of the Week
by Juana Neal Levy

Weddings, weddings and then some more weddings, one almost as before the national anthem should be either the "Lohengrin" Mendelssohn wedding march, so often are they played. And the summer seems to be scheduling weddings almost every day until the June summer, every other function taking a second place, interest almost girl graduate fading a bit against the bride's radiant beauty. More than usual interest to as well as in the the wedding of Thursday Brooklyn, when Wards, daughter of the C. Wards and Mrs. of Ridgewood, and grand- of Frederick Wards, well- Interprise, gown of rich ivory satin, fashioned in princess model with court train, her veil of tulle edged in rare old lace, an heirloom in the family, and held in place by pearls and orange blossoms, cap fashion, and she carried orchids, gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Valmai Schmidt, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing yellow organdie, with hat of green, and she carried an armful of golden blooms, while bridesmaids including Miss Adele Wimpfheimer of Hollywood, two cousins of Mr. Heald and three friends of the bride from the East, wore frocks of green organdie over taffeta, with buttercup hats with long streamers of orchid falling from the crown to the floor, and they carried armfuls of lavender. P. Ernie served as best man and the ushers were all eastern men.

The double-ring ceremony was used and in the old-fashioned way the bridesmaids came from the side down the center aisle to meet the bride and escort her to the altar. This aisle was arched over with garlands of rich foliage brought from Florida for the occasion.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Heald left by motor for New York and are sailing tonight at midnight for Europe aboard the Berengaria, planning to pass at least a year abroad before returning to Southern California, where they will make their future home. The bride, who has a host of friends here, was graduated from the Bishops School in La Jolla, and attended Marlborough School and Washington Seminary while Mr. Heald claims Boston School of Technology as his alma mater and is a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

Quite a number of Southern California friends went east for the wedding.

A wedding which united two widely known families in Southern California was that of Miss Marquita Ysobel Salveson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Salveson of Long Beach, and Robert Russell Dowling, son of Rev. and Mrs. Frank M. Dowling of Anaheim, the ceremony taking place in the Christian Church, with Rev. Dowling, pastor emeritus, officiating in the presence of some 350 guests.

The dias of the church was banked with ferns, palms and white flowers, completely hiding the altar and organ, cathedral candles being lighted at each end of the embankment, while the aisles were marked with Easter lilies tied with great bows of white tulle.

The bride wore ivory satin with short puffed sleeves, her veil of tulle fashioned cap shape and circled at the nape with orange blossoms and she carried lilies of the valley, white roses and gardenias. Miss Mary Hope of Los Angeles was maid of honor while other attendants, Miss Louise Weisel, Miss Lilah

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED HERE

Couple to Reside in San Francisco

Miss Elizabeth Crowley

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES CROWLEY of 1130 South Lake street announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Crowley, to Elton McCrillis of San Francisco.

Miss Crowley was prominent on the campus of the University of Southern California, where she took an active part in both the Alpha Delta Pi and the Zeta Phi Eta sororities. Mr. McCrillis was graduated from University of Southern California last June, and is a member of Delta Phi Delta Fraternity.

Following the wedding, which will be an event of July 23, they will motor to Pebble Beach for their honeymoon, later making their home in San Francisco.

Gala Fetes in Society

Schulte, Mrs. Charles Petty, Miss Alice Wailes, Mrs. Stanley Strain and Miss Jane Elizah in chiffon frocks of orchid, green, blue, salmon pink and green, respectively, carried sweet peas in yellow, apricot, pink, orchid and orange tones, great poke bonnets of organdie to match their frocks adding a smart touch, while the maid of honor wore apricot d'esprit with green accessories and carried Talisman roses and sweet peas.

John Bryan of Placentia was best man and Charles Petty, Merrill Gregory, Hugh Edwards, Dr. George McClelland, Wendell Irwin and Stanley Strain ushered.

Mrs. Harriet Fowling Laidlow of Los Angeles presided at the organ and a quartet, including Mmes. G. A. Chaoman, Ben Burton, Roy Burton and Jones, sang.

A reception followed the ceremony after which Mr. and Mrs. Dowling left for a motor trip through California and will make their future home in Oakland.

The bride, who celebrated her twenty-first birthday anniversary on her wedding day, was graduated from Pomona College while Mr. Dowling was graduated from Fullerton High and later attended Stanford, where he is a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Huntly Collins are honeymooning in the north and after August 1 will be at home to their many friends in Portland, Or. Mrs. Collins was formerly Miss Harriet Manierre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Manierre of Pasadena, the wedding taking place in Westminster Presbyterian Church with Rev. John C. E. Fry officiating. Miss Mary Hannah assisted as maid of honor while Misses Edith Shankland, Virginia Sevier, Mary Isabel Fry and Jane Arnold were bridesmaids. Emily and Martha Collins were the dainty flower girls and Richard Collins served as best man while William Doran, Allen Ayres, Winston Wiseman and Alfred Loveland ushered.

Another lovely wedding of the month was that when Miss Marguerite Corwin, daughter of the late Mrs. Corwin and William Bassett Corwin of Laurel Canyon Road, and Thomas Patrick Scully, taking place at the home of the bride's father with Rev. George Davidson officiating. Mrs. Juan B. Martino was matron of honor while Mr. Martino served as best man, other attendants including Mrs. Bruce Humberstone, Mrs. William Bunker Rossetti and Miss Kathleen Nolan, while James H. Pierce, H. Bruce Humberstone, Roger Hand and William B. Rossetti were ushers. Mr. and Mrs. Scully have not divulged where they are passing their honeymoon but after their return in July they will be at home at 3623 Laurel Canyon Road.

After an extended wedding trip in the northwest Mr. and Mrs. Louis John Gerpheide will make their home in Long Beach. Mrs. Gerpheide, formerly Miss Mary Ina Bryant, is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ewell Bryant of North Vista street, Hollywood, the wedding taking place in Hollywood Congregational Church with Dr. James Hamilton Lash officiating. Miss Alberta Williams was maid of honor while Misses Virginia Thom, Veryl Sweeney, Evelyn Martin and Marjorie Chambers bridesmaids, and little Sizanne Pierce was the dainty flower girl.

Henry Gerpheide, Jr., served his brother as best man and Hilton McCabe, Jess Hibbs, Gwen Redwine and Jack Bryant ushered.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Gerpheide claim University of Southern California as their alma mater, the former being a member of Sigma Chi and Mrs. Gerpheide is affiliated with Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority.

Another attractive bride of the month is Mrs. Aldrich Rufus Peck, formerly Miss Dorothy Thayer, daughter of Mrs. Everett Henry Thayer of Springfield, Mo., the ceremony taking place at the home of Mrs. Arthur Rufus Peck, mother of the bridegroom in South Irving Boulevard. Mrs. Garold Mangenheimer was the only attendant of the bride while Harold Bond of Greenwich, Ct., served as best man, 125 guests were bidden.

Mr. and Mrs. Peck motored to San Francisco after the ceremony and are now in Honolulu, and after their return will make their home at 302 South Mansfield avenue.

After a reception for 100 friends at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. B. S. McLaren, 446 Linda Vista street, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gill, left in their machine on their honeymoon, driving through the northwest and will make their future home in the San Mateo Rancho in San Diego county.

The marriage of Miss Helen Elisabeth Trimble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Trimble of Linda Vista street, Pasadena, to Alex Gill, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Gill of West Los Angeles, was solemnized in the Church of the Angels, with Rev. Harry Parke officiating, the altars being massed with blue delphinium and gladioli and lighted by myriads of tall white tapers.

The bride wore a directoire model of white satin, her veil of tulle caught into a cap of rare old rose pointe lace, more than 150 years old, a family heirloom, held in place by orange blossoms and she carried gardenias and valley lilies.

Miss Dorothy Townsend, maid of honor, wore blue net and horsehair hat to match, carrying pini roses while the bridesmaids, Misses Dixie Lazenby, June Greenwood, Viola Gill and Bobby Wilder, wore pink net, trimmed with blue flowers, large pink horsehair hats and carried old-fashioned nosegays of Cecile Bruner roses and delphinium.

Seldon Trimble gave his sister in marriage, Harry M. Trimble was best man and Al Gibsom, Frank Dale and Buck Blakemore ushered. Both Mr. and Mrs. Trimble attended U.C.L.A., the former being a member of Sigma Pi, and Alpha Kappa Psi fraternities and the bride is a Pi Beta Phi Sorority member.

What Hostesses Have Been About Lately

Before an improvised altar of palms, ferns and Easter lilies, Miss Alice Tanner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Tanner of Lorraine Boulevard, became the bride of John Dallas Williamson, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Williamson of Queen Anne Place, the ceremony taking place at Casa del Mar, Santa Monica, with Judge Marshall McComb officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess model in white satin, with lace bolero jacket, a cap of princess lace and long tulle veil held in place by clusters of orange blossoms and she carried an arm shower of gardenias, roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Mabel Tanner, in pale blue chiffon and picture hat of pink, assisted her sister as maid of honor, carrying pink roses and blue delphinium while Osburn Cocky was best man.

A reception and wedding supper followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Williamson left for a motor honeymoon to Lake Tahoe, and after their return will make their home in Oakland.

The bride attended the Principia School in St. Louis and Marlborough, while Mr. Williamson was graduated from University of Arizona, and is affiliated with Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

Miss Gwendolyn Ann Turner daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Turner of Courtney avenue, Hollywood, became the bride of John Kier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer L. Kier of San Diego, the 12th inst. the ceremony taking place in All Saints, Beverly Hills, with Rev. William W. Fleetwood officiating. Miss Marjorie Isherwood of Portland, Or., assisted as maid of honor, in a French blue grown, with picture hat to match, carrying a shower of pansies, while John Phibbs of San Diego served as best man. The bride was charming in ivory satin and rose point lace, which was an heirloom in the family, the veil caught by orange blossoms, and she carried a shower of orchids, gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The wedding celebrated the silver wedding anniversary of the bride's parents, and a reception and wedding supper followed the ceremony. Miss Gretchen Kier sang preceding the ceremony, and Steve Fletcher of San Diego and William Dallas of San Francisco ushered.

The bride was graduated from Hollywood School for Girls, afterward attending University of Oregon, and later was a student at Chouinard Art School for a year, while Mr. Kier is now attending Stanford, and will be graduated this year. He was graduated from New Mexico Military Academy, afterward attending University of Oregon at Eugene. Mrs. Kier is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority, while Mr. Kier is affiliated with Phi Delta Theta Fraternity.

In a very attractive garden setting at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Austin, 1121 Arden Road, Pasadena, Miss Gwendolen Austin became the bride of U. Floyd Rible, son of Mr. and Mrs. U. O. Rible, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Leslie E. Learned, the bride given in marriage by her father, wearing a becoming gown of crepe chiffon, and carrying a shower of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Dorothy K. Austin, who wore flowered net over green satin, and carried pink roses, while Jack Soldini came from Porto Rico to be best man, and William Austin, Harold Austin and Donald Stauffer ushered.

A reception in the garden followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Rible left for an extended wedding trip, and will be at home after their return at 754½ South Orange Grove avenue, Los Angeles.

Mr. Rible was graduated in architecture from University of Pennsylvania and is a member of Acacia and Lau Sigma Delta fraternities while his bride is affiliated with Lambda Lambda Chi, being graduated from Pasadena High School.

The wedding of Miss Virginia Frances Wheeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Wheeler of Gardner street, Hollywood, and George Fuller Peters, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Fuller Peters of South Almond Drive, took place in All Saints Church, Beverly Hills, with Rev. William Fleetwood officiating. Mrs. Marion Pulford sang preceding the ceremony, and the church was elaborately decorated with pastel-shaded summer flowers and a profusion of ferns and greenery.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess gown of white satin, the veil of lace held in place by a coronet of old princess lace, and she carried bride's roses, lilies of the valley and white sweet peas.

Miss Bernice Schultz, maid of honor, wore blue organdie and carried pink roses, while the bridesmaids, Misses Katherine Weaver and Riddell Couch, wore peach and green organdie, with small horsehair hats to match, and carried roses and sweet peas.

Paul Peters served his brother as best man and Jack Fitzsimmons and Donald Tapely ushered.

A reception at the family home followed the ceremony, and after a motor trip north Mr. and Mrs. Peters will make their home at 1753 Gardner street. The bride was graduated from Hollywood School for Girls, while Mr. Peters was graduated from Loyola College, Montreal, Can.

YOUNG GRADUATE TO SAIL EAST

Friends Will be Visited on Jaunt

[Gibbon Allen studios]
Miss Margaret Deutsch

AMONG the attractive June graduates is Miss Margaret Deutsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Deutsch of 1924 North Catalina street, Hollywood. Miss Deutsch and her parents are sailing on the California for New York by way of Panama Canal, and will visit friends in New York, Pittsburgh, Atlantic City and Chicago. She was one of the most popular co-eds at University of California at Los Angeles, being a member of Alpha Epsilon Phi Sorority and received her bachelor of arts degree this month. Upon her return she will work for her master's degree at University of Southern California.

She will remain abroad until the late fall.

Home This Week

Mrs. James Calhoun Drake, who has been in the East visiting her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Sayre MacNeil, at their home in Cambridge, and stopping in New York for several weeks, will return to her home in South Hoover street the latter part of this week.

Honors Bride-Elect

Mrs. Edwin Lee Gardner of Riverside Drive, Glendale, gave a party last Saturday afternoon at her home complimenting Miss Helen Wilkinson, fiancee of Edwin Sandys. Decorations were of varicolored summer flowers in pastel tints, the same hues being used in all appointments. The hostess was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. Ethel Oliver; her grandmother, Mrs. David English, and Mmes. Glen Wells, William Hogue and Kenneth Grumbles.

A huge garden hat of pastel colors filled to overflowing with gifts in gay wrappings was presented to the honoree.

The forty guests included members of the tri-Delta Sorority, to which the hostess and Miss Wilkinson belong, and the occasion served as a reunion for classmates who had not met for some time.

Wedding Announced

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Sallie T. Stevens of 7353 Sunset Boulevard to Frank Culver Nichols, also of Hollywood, the ceremony taking place Tuesday at Walpole, N. H.

The bride was graduated from Smith College, Northampton, Mass., the day before the wedding and after a short honeymoon at Lake George Mr. and Mrs. Nichols are returning to Hollywood by way of the Panama Canal and will make their home at 476 Landfair avenue, Westwood.

Going East

Mrs. William D. Barnard and Miss Gwendolen Laughlin, who make their home at the Biltmore, have gone east for an extended stay, probably six months or a year, before they will return to Southern California.

Weds Navy Man

The marriage of Miss Alice Louise Wolfskill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wolfskill, to Lieut. Curtis Stanton Smiley, U.S.N., was solemnized the 14th inst., the ceremony taking place in Amanda Chapel, Carthay Center, where the wedding of the bride's sister, Miss Edith Frances Wolfskill, and Lieut. Clarence Eugene Ekstrom, U.S.N., took place eighteen months ago.

Dr. Charles T. Murphy officiated and after the ceremony a reception and wedding supper followed at the home of the bride's parents, 5719 Hillcrest Drive, Beverly Hills.

The church was decorated in green and white, while at the house a color motif of yellow and blue was effectively carried out, Mrs. Wolfskill receiving her guests in a gown of blue, trimmed with rhinestones and pearls, while at the church she wore a wrap of deep blue velvet over her evening gown.

The bride wore a gown of eggshell satin fashioned on simple lines, her veil of tulle caught to her head by orange blossoms and a short veil fell over the face. She carried an arm sheaf of Easter lilies.

Mrs. Eckstrom assisted her sister as matron of honor in eggshell chiffon and the bridesmaids, cousins of the bride, Misses Marion Perry and Marcella Wolf, wore similar frocks and all carried Easter lilies.

Lieut. John V. Peterson, U.S.N., and classmate at Annapolis in '23, served his brother-officer as best man and the ushers, Lieut. John H. Griffin and Lieut. Stanton B. Dunlap, were his fellow-officers in the Aviation Corps at Coronado, where Lieut. and Mrs. Smiley will make their home during his detail here.

Lieut. Eckstrom was unable to be present at the ceremony as he is in the East, where his studies at Harvard, following his post-graduate work at Annapolis the past two years, required his intensive study at this season. Mrs. Eckstrom will remain here until September, when she joins her husband in Boston until he has completed his study in aeronautical engineering.

The bride is the great-great grand-daughter of the late William Wolfskill, grand-daughter of Lewis Wolfskill and grandniece of the late John Wolfskill, all of whom were prominent pioneers in the history of Southern California, and especially Los Angeles. Both she and her sister, Mrs. Eckstrom, attended Marlborough School.

Here for Summer

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Kent, who have made their home in Phoenix, Ariz., have arrived in Los Angeles for their summer visit and are at home to their many friends in their charming cottage at Del Rey over the week-end, although they are making the Hollywood Plaza Hotel their headquarters while here.

Smart Affair

Miss Nancy Bonestell Arnell, attractive daughter of Mrs. Frank Furnival Peard, was the charming hostess at a tea given at her home in Alexandria avenue, entertaining a coterie of Marlborough classmates and friends.

Mrs. Peard assisted her daughter in receiving the guests, the home being a bower of flowers in lavender and yellow tones and punch was served on the broad flower-decorated verandа.

Miss Arnell was a student for two and a half years at school in Florence, Italy. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Roy Valentine Rippey, Mrs. Chester Bean Bonestell, Miss Dorothy Bauer, Miss Joan Rippey, Miss Kate Ridgway, Miss Allison Coulter, Miss Patricia Stanton, Miss Patricia Burks, Miss Virginia Andrews and Miss Vernette Ripley.

WEDDING EVENT OF MIDDLE OF MONTH

[Murillo for Western Press]
Mrs. George E. Wiggers

One of the prettily appointed weddings of the month was that of the 14th inst., when, in the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, Miss Gladys Edith Nelson became the bride of George E. Wiggers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Wiggers of Kaukanna, Wis., with Rev. Herbert Booth Smith officiating. Miss Thelma Schuchart in flame taffeta carrying pink roses, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Misses Mildred Nohr, Thelma Matthews in pink and green taffeta, carrying pink rosebuds, while Jean Mathews and Gloria Jensen were flower girls. Price Walker was best man and Frank Jensen and Grant Flint ushered.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kai Gottschalk of West Thirty-seventh Drive, was given away by her father, wearing white crepe romaine with veil of tulle held by orange blossoms and carried butterfly roses and valley lilies. After the wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Wiggers will make their home here.

Mrs. Wiggers was graduated from Jefferson High School, while Mr. Wiggers, prominent in athletics, attended University of Southern California and is a member of the Scarab Club there.

predominated in the decorations and appointments of the tea table.

On Extended Trip

Miss Gertrude Eckels, daughter of Mrs. H. G. Eckels of 921 West Eighteenth street, accompanied by Miss Mathilde Ross of 1350 Wright street, left for an extended trip through the East and Canada and on their return trip will visit in Banff and Lake Louise. Honoring the travelers Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Anderson of 132 North San Marino, San Gabriel, entertained with a picnic luncheon, the tables being arranged in the grape arbor in the gardens, and fourteen guests were bidden.

Old-Fashioned Gowns Worn

Quaint costumes of 1830 worn by the bride and her attendants lent a distinctive charm to the wedding Tuesday evening at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, Glendale, of Miss Anna Laura Van Wormer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Sumner Van Wormer of Watertown, N. Y., to Arthur Knox Rossner, son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Rossner, Beverly Hills. The bride's costume was of white satin with a long train, Juliet style, and trimmed with rose pointe lace. The lace veil was caught to a Juliet cap with pearl bands. She carried a bouquet of orchids, lilies of the valley, white roses and maidenhair fern.

The old-fashioned picture was completed by the maid of honor, Miss Sally Fischer, who wore a gown of orchid Marquisette, 1830 style, and the other attendants, Miss Anneteen Fischer, Miss Florence Farrar, Mrs. Rush Hinsdale and Miss Maude Theresa Morgan, who wore gowns of a similar description, trimmed with ribbons of pastel shades. All of the bride's attendants carried old-fashioned nosegays in lace paper holders. The flower girls, Miss Lucille and Miss Evalyn Fischer, wore pink marquisette dresses similar to the other attendants.

Cornelius Rossner, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man and the ushers were Dr. Herold Hare, Rush Hinsdale, Beryle Keene and Jack Fischer. Dr. Elmer E. Helm officiated.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. G. J. Fischer. The church and the home were attractively decorated with spring flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Rossner's honeymoon trip will consist of a motor trip through the northern part of the State.

Armstrong-McMillan

The marriage of Miss Constance Louise Armstrong to Gilholme John McMillan was solemnized Saturday, the 14th inst., the ceremony taking place in St. John's Church, West Adams street, with Rev. George Davidson officiating.

The bride, a member of Sigma Delta Chi Sorority, was graduated from Compton Junior College, and was given in marriage by her brother, Thomas E. Armstrong.

She wore a gown of eggshell satin and carried gardenias and lilies of the valley, while the maid of honor, Miss Dorothy Byrnes, was in green and the bridesmaids, Miss Dorothy Dell Doak of Alpha Tau Sorority wore peach, Misses Kathryn McKay, Camille Ingui and Jean Gillejie of Sigma Delta Chi Sorority were in pink, orchid and yellow, all of them carrying arm bouquets of sweet peas to match their frocks, while Albert McMillan, Robert Armstrong, Todd McMillan and Dr. Clay Kniss ushered. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. McMillan left immediately for a honeymoon at Red Rock Canyon, Lake Tahoe, Stockton and the Yosemite, and after July 15 will be at home at 3872 Third avenue.

Mr. McMillan was graduated from University of California at Los Angeles and is a member of Kappa Gamma Epsilon Fraternity. Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Miss Lillian Kelso and Mrs. Orpha Arnold of Stockton, aunts of the bride.

Announcement is made of the recent wedding in Yuma, Ariz., of Miss Lillian Munson Elliott of Los Angeles to Dr. Ralph S. Roberts of Campo and Hollywood. Owing to the recent death of the bride's father, the late Charles P. Elliott, only a few intimate friends were told of the wedding plans. Mrs. Roberts is a native of Rochester, N. Y., having come to Los Angeles with her parents five years ago. She has passed much of her life in Europe, receiving most of her schooling in England and Germany.

For Bride-Elect

In honor of Miss Katherine Jean, who will become the bride of Lawrence Thayer Bourne of Cleveland next Friday, Mrs. George Edwin Orme entertained with a bridge-tea at her home in Beverly Hills. The decorations were French bouquets of roses, sweet peas and valley lilies. Assisting the hostess were her mother, Mrs. George E. Hallett, and Mrs. Bradford N. Trenham, Miss Amy Phillips, Miss Pauline Hoffman, Mrs. Jose Lacayo, Mrs. Cecil May, Mrs. Georgia Toolen and Mrs. John Melville Hull. Sixty guests were bidden.

Silver Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Archibald J. Dixon of 418 South Orange avenue, Monterey Park, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary Saturday evening, the 14th inst., with a reception, the house being beautifully decorated with a profusion of ferns, gladioli and white jassamine blossoms, and during the evening Mr. and Mrs. Charles Batten of Culver City and Miss Elgin Hurley of Monterey Park gave a musical program. A mock marriage followed by games formed entertainment, and a beautifully iced wedding cake was the piece de resistance of the supper, the same ornaments which had adorned the wedding cake at the wedding twenty-five years ago being used.

The wedding took place at St. Athanasius Church here in 1905, with Rev. D. T. Mackenzie officiating, assisted by Rev. S. S. Sherman. After living ten years in Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Dixon moved to their present home in Monterey Park. Those bidden to the silver anniversary included Mrs. E. L. Tripp, Miss Ruth Tripp of Beverly Hills, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Batten of Culver City, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Preston and Thomas Preston, Jr., of Lincadia; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Berry of Pico, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Oberg, Mr. and Mrs. A. Quartermaine and Miss Amy Quartermaine of Willman; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Haines, Mr. and Mrs. R. Macfarland, Mr. and Mrs. J. Garth, Mr. and Mrs. W. Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Ellis, Miss S. S. Sherry, Miss Gladys Michin, R. Alters and W. W. Rountree of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dangel, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Preston, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hendershott, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Evans, Mrs. Emily N. Preston, Mrs. E. R. Baldwin, Miss Eidie Hurley, Miss Amy Dixon, Miss Emily Dixon, Spencer Dixon, Kennett Dixon, Arthur and Ernest Dixon of Monterey Park.

Luncheon-Fete

Honoring Mrs. Edward Gaylord Miller of 308 North New Hampshire street, who returned recently from a tour of the Orient, Mrs. Rufus A. Holt of 129 North McCadden Place entertained Friday afternoon with bridge-luncheon and lawn fete.

An unusual feature of the festivities was the dedication of a trio of huge bronze storks from the studios of Nogawa, in Kyoto, Japan, presented by the guest of honor to Mrs. Holt.

Mrs. Charles Baird assisted her sister in receiving the guests, the decorations of ferns, Russell roses and delphinium carrying out the summer motif. Those included were Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Grace Haldeman, Mrs. Henry Lissner, Mrs. H. O. Berkis, Mrs. Herbert Brown, Mrs. Charles P. Baird, Mrs. Nathaniel Stockwell, Mrs. Howard Baumgardt, Mrs. Claire Overholtzer, Mrs. Carl Beckman, Mrs. Jack Arnoldy, Mrs. William Beard, Mrs. Lawrence Stedman, Mrs. Harry Chamberlain, Mrs. Gerald White, Mrs. George Ernsberger, Mrs. Lewis Gaulden, Mrs. Frank Butterworth, Mrs. Kenneth Gill, Mrs. Robert Parker, Mrs. Stanton Packard, Mrs. I. W. Birnbaum, Mrs. Henry Chamberlain, Mrs. Robert Sommer, Miss E. J. Cavarly and Miss Estelle Miller.

Eastern Wedding

Miss Miriam Arnold, recently graduated from Pinch School, New York, and Hollins College, Virginia, has chosen Saturday as the date for her wedding with William Livingston, prominent track star and alumnus of University of Southern California, the ceremony to take place in Mexico, Mo. Novel Affair

One of the novel affairs of the younger social set was the baseball dinner given by the members of the Black-Foxe baseball team in honor of Miss Betty Haney and Miss Elinor Pace in the banquet hall of the Black-Foxe Military Institute Wednesday evening. The banquet was held as a tribute to the loyalty of Miss Haney and Miss Pace who acted as official mascots to the varsity baseball teams during the current season.

A huge baseball in black and gold, the school colors, provided the table centerpiece. Tapers in blue and gold settings added to the school color motif.

Several songs were rendered by the Phi Delta Sigma Fraternity Quartette with all of the guests joining in on the choruses. A number of selections were given by the Black-Foxe school band.

Visiting Here

Mr. and Mrs. Ray W. Frohman (Helen Hammond) of Portland, Or., are visiting with Mrs. Frohman's mother, Mrs. Milton E. Hammond, 1181 West Thirty-sixth street.

Wed At Sorority House

The new chapter house of Zeta Tau Alpha on the Westwood campus was the scene of an attractive wedding celebration recently when Miss Helen Lundgren became the bride of Walter Johnson of Alhambra. The bride wore a gown of eggshell chiffon trimmed with lace and a bridal hat of eggshell net trimmed in orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of pale pink roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Katherine Parkhill, maid of honor, wore a yellow chiffon frock and carried a bouquet of yellow roses and pink and lavendar sweet peas. Other attendants were the Misses Lois Wattson, Dorothy Yungbluth and Genevieve Ulvestad. A reception and wedding supper followed the ceremony.

The bride is planning to return to the University of California at Los Angeles where she will graduate in June, 1931.

Dinner-Dance

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Breckenridge of Valley Brink Road entertained with a dinner-dance in the Cocoanut Grove of the Ambassador Hotel Tuesday evening with ten guests in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Breckenridge, accompanied by their two children, Marjorie and Paul, Jr., will leave shortly for their summer home at Catalina.

Graduation

Among the pupils who graduated from the Carl Curtis School Thursday were Edward Lawrence Doheny, III, Miss Helen Jane Evans, Miss Cynthia Smith, Miss Mary Jane White, Miss Elizabeth Jane Burr and Carrie Belle Breyer.

Announcement Party

Charming appointments marked a bridge-luncheon given Tuesday at the University Club by Mrs. Will Flood of Santa Ana which served as the occasion for the announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Flood's daughter, Miss Fern Flood, to J. Norman Pixley. Yellow gladioli and blue delphinium were used on the luncheon tables and the place cards and tallies were silhouettes. The betrothal announcement was inscribed on the tallies.

The guests were Miss Lois Walker of Bakersfield, Mrs. Edward McWilliams and Mrs. Mae Ellis of Los Angeles, Mrs. Glenn Moore of Santa Fe Rancho, Mrs. Harl Kittle of Beverly Hills, Mrs. Jack Neville of Anaheim, Mrs. Frank Kirker of Fullerton, Mrs. Ray Benedict, Miss Mittie Crain, Miss Ruth Hamill, Mrs. Frank Martin and Mrs. John Button, all of Pasadena. Mmes. Horace Stevens, Baxter Jouvenaut, Heibert Miller, Richard Emison, Harvey Smith, Richard Winckler, Jim Hermon, John Ball, Will Spurgeon, Harvey Filton, Frank Miller, Lloyd Chenoweth, Lester Carden, Roy Chandler, Loring Dale, Carl Strock, John McKittrick, Arnold Peck. Misses Velma Miller, Frances Battey, Nell Bales, Wilma Satuer, Kay Chandler, Sherrill Spurgeon of Santa Ana.

Fern Flood is a graduate of University of California at Berkeley, and has been teaching in Santa Ana. Mr. Pixley is an alumnus of the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity at the University of California at Berkeley.

Alaskan Trip

Miss Marjorie Helwig of La Mirada avenue, San Marino will accompany her parents and brother on a trip to Alaska. They intend to stay several days in Portland, Or.; Seattle, Wash., and Vancouver, B. C., before sailing for Alaska, July 3. Miss Helwig has just completed her sophomore year at the University of Southern California.

Roberts-Smith

The Wilshire Latter Day Saints Chapel was the scene of a charming wedding celebration Wednesday evening, when Miss Wilma Louise Roberts, daughter of Mrs. William Henry Roberts, 2230 Meadow Valley Terrace, Moreno Heights, became the bride of Francis Mitchell Smith, Jr., with Bishop G. W. McCune officiating. The bride wore a Patou model of heavy white crepe with a yoke of real lace. Her tulle veil was fitted to a lace cap caught with orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a diamond bracelet, the gift of the bridegroom. The bridal bouquet was of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Elizabeth Ashworth of Provo, Utah, was the bride's sole attendant. Stephen Owens served as best man and the ushers were William Barret, Harold Hunter, James Payne and Jack West. The maid of honor wore a gown of peach-colored net with hat and shoes to match and carried a sheaf of sweet peas of the same shade.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Among the out-of-town guests were Francis Mitchell Smith, Sr., father of the bridegroom; Mrs. Robert Pratt and Mrs. Richard Parsons, sisters of the bridegroom, all of Providence, and Mrs. V. Heymanson of Salt Lake City, the bride's aunt.

The honeymoon trip will include a voyage through the Panama Canal, with stopovers at Havana, Fla., and New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will make their home in Providence.

Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Nat Schwartz, 638 South Highland avenue, celebrated their twentieth wedding anniversary at a delightful dinner party in the Silver Palm Room of the Santa Monica Breakers Club recently. The tables were beautifully decorated with a variety of flowers and a special program of music was played for the party by the Santa Monica Breakers Club orchestra. Sixty-five guests were entertained.

The guests included Misses Josephine Cohen, Sadie Harris, Larkin; Messrs. W. M. Kahn, M. Mirsky, Nat Nash; Messrs. and Mmes. Ben Bernie, J. S. Cohen, Nat Cohn, Ralph Cohen, Harry Davis, Morrie Davis, E. J. Feisel, M. Hirschbine, Jess Kerkes, S. Korngut, Morton Schreiber, Louis Shelley, William L. Slanner, Joe Tracy, A. J. Wolfberg; Mmes. A. Bush, Leah Forrester, Eva Grant, Rosekrants, Mollie Servall, Anna Weinberg.

To Visit Relatives

Miss Margaret Goodyear, 2480 California street, Walnut Park, will sail on the S.S. California the 23rd inst. for a trip through the Panama Canal. She will visit relatives in New York City and Cleveland, O.

At the Sea Breeze

Miss Freda Cady of San Francisco was the guest of honor at a dinner-dance given by Dr. and Mrs. Fred D. Schildwachter of Beverly Hills recently in the new supper-room of the Sea Breeze Beach Club.

Miss Cady is house guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Blanchard during her stay in the Southland, and a number of social affairs are being planned in her honor.

Covers were laid for Capt. and Mrs. Fred Jerome Weinland, Dr. and Mrs. Maxwell M. Dixon, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Schildwachter, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Linne and Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Blanchard.

Miss Mariana Hall was the honoree at a charmingly appointed luncheon and miscellaneous shower given by Miss Irene Hall in the Egyptian Room of the club Thursday. The table was lovely, with mounds of pink Cecile Brunner rosebuds set on a bank of green fern. An entire bridal party in miniature with dolls in formal wedding attire provided an unusually attractive and unique centerpiece.

The guests included Mmes. G. Barry Atwater, Clinton Bump, Clement Stewart, Wilbur Binford, Ormond Osborn and Misses Dorothy Goodrich, Marjorie Thorson, Betty Wilder, Elma Burnkrant, Margaret Nichols, Patricia Huddleson, Beatrice Adelstein, Lucille Beach, Ella Jo Covington, Ruth Frost, Marion Little, Mary Sherwood, Mollie Griss, Ruth Greenberg Josephine Saxton, Sally Meerson, Marvel Emmons, Elsa Gottesman, Lois Whittier and Bess Sneiderman.

Mrs. C. H. Barton entertained Tuesday at a delightful bridge-luncheon held on the veranda of the club. A large mound of yellow tulips and blue delphinium formed the centerpiece of the table. A corsage of fresh summer blossoms was presented to each of the guests.

Bidden were Mmes. Charles N. Wilcox, J. P. Martin, Robert N. Heath, J. D. Miles, J. N. Rhodes, D. S. Waterhouse and M. A. Warren.

One of the most colorful social affairs held at the beaches during the past week was the matinee bridge-luncheon given by Mrs. Evelyn Straube Brown on the esplanade of the clubhouse in honor of Mrs. B. H. Richardson.

A profusion of vividly hued spring flowers added color to the affair. Hand-painted place cards and dainty nut cups in striking colors further accentuated the summer motif in the floral decorations.

Guests were Mmes. M. T. Keitzer, Ralph Munger, H. W. Straube, Chester Versteeg, Charles E. Straube, Julia Salter, Mae Ripley, E. I. Pouliot, B. M. Latham and L. E. Cudahy.

Betrothal Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh L. Dickson announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Louise Dickson, to Dr. Irving Blom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Blom of Honolulu, T. H., the wedding to be an event of November 18.

The guests were welcomed at the Town House yesterday by Mrs. Dickson and Miss Dickson and her bridal party, which includes Mrs. Lester Heilman, who will assist as matron of honor; Miss Meredith McKee, maid of honor, and the other attendants, Miss Dorothy Dickson, Miss Floreine Dickson, Miss Eleanor Veale, Miss Frances Black, Mrs. Chase Wanglin and Mrs. Earl Hoisington.

Each guest received a corsage of early summer flowers with a tiny pastel heart attached, the miniature pictures of the betrothed framed in gold being inside the hearts, with names engraved and the date of the wedding on the outside.

Miss Dickson was graduated from University of Southern California and is a member of Alpha Chi Omega Sorority, while Dr. Blom also claims the same university as his alma mater and is affiliated with Delta Sigma Delta Fraternity. He has been practicing in Honolulu since being graduated, and will take his bride there after the honeymoon to make their future home.

Church Wedding

The marriage of Miss Alys Earl Hazelton of San Diego to Seymour J. Thurber was solemnized Wednesday evening, the ceremony taking place in First Presbyterian Church, Santa Barbara. After their return from the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Thurber will be at home at 3732 South Van Ness avenue.

Here for Ten Days

Mrs. Anna C. Boyd of Forest Hills Gardens, Long Island, N. Y., is passing some time in Southern California and while in Los Angeles will be registered at the Biltmore for a week or ten days.

Sorority Entertained

Delta Kappa Nu Sorority pledges entertained the members of that organization at a bridge held at the Breakfast Club on Wednesday, the 11th inst. High scores were held and first prize was won by Miss Jeanne Butler, second by Mrs. Marguerite Anderson and the consolation prize going to Miss Virginia Clark.

Members included were: Mmes. Billie Stevenson, Marjorie Clary, Sylvia Hepburn, Ruth Gould, and Misses Dorothyee Field, Irene Southerland, Clara Wingate, Lucile Whitson, Bobbie Cullen, Martha Wafelld, Louise Emerick, Florence and Helen MacKowan, Dorothy Murray and Ruth Markle. Pledges: Jane Smith, Jean Trudeau, Lou Bay, Magdalene Michael and Jo King.

Visiting Parents

The many friends of Mrs. Alexander Naughton (Ulric Cole) gifted young Los Angeles composer-pianiste, will be pleased to learn that she has arrived here to pass the summer vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Cole, at their home, 4933 Rosewood avenue. Since her last visit here Mrs. Naughton has passed two years in Europe, studying part of the time with Nadia Boulanger in Paris. Mrs. Naughton is accompanied by her husband, who after receiving his degree of Doctorat de l'Université de Paris, was appointed instructor in French at Yale University, where Mr. and Mrs. Naughton and their little daughter have been residing for the past year.

Bridge Party

Mrs. Arch Wilson Davis (Betty Kirby) entertained recently with a bridge party and boudior shower honoring Miss Anne Henthorn, fiancee of Robert Bateman, the affair taking place at the Davis home, 141 Reeves Drive, Beverly Hills. A charming bridal motif was effectively carried out in the decorations and appointments and twelve guests were bidden. Miss Henthorn is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henthorn of Beverly Hills.

STUDENT LEADER RETURNS TO HOME

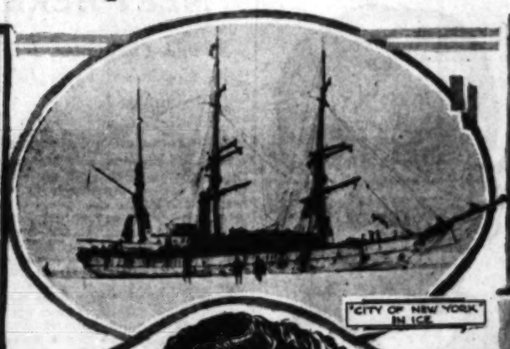
Pictorial Record of Byrd's Expedition to South Pole Coming to Screen Here



RUSSIAN FILM GENIUS HERE

Eisenstein, Recognized Internationally as Power in Art, Studying Sound, Music and Color

BY PHILIP K. SCHEUER

Hollywood's most daring experiment since the "importation" of Ernst Lubitsch, German film director, got under way last week. Sergei M. Eisenstein, first Russian genius to be recognized internationally as a power in film progress, arrived last Monday at the Paramount studio, and on Tuesday gave an exclusive interview to The Times.

He is a man who knows what can be done with a camera and a reel of film; he is here to learn what can be done with sound, music and color as well, and perhaps, if the gods are kind, to make a picture or two for America.

SERGEI M. EISENSTEIN

Eisenstein, at 32 years of age, confesses himself a student of film art. This despite the acclaim already bestowed upon him for his productions, for Sovkino of "Potemkin," "Ten Days That Shook the World," and "Old and New." He looks like a student: short, a not-too-serious face lent a faintly inquisitive aspect by a thin nose, alive eyes, a shock of wavy brown hair above a wide forehead, a quiet voice almost without accent. And he is inquisitive about "soundies"—he repeated the word, "soundies"—as distinct from talkies, which he does not approve.

Director Eisenstein left the dramatic theater, with which he had been active four years, in 1924. In the films, he saw possibilities beyond any the stage had to offer; but he saw, too, that their realization would be slow. Art being a reflection of a social age, there must be, for Soviet Russia—the U.S.S.R.—a new beginning, primary, fundamental, ABC.

FOUNDS TECHNIQUE

So he founded a technique on the principle of "montage," of which D. W. Griffith, principally, had first made actual use in his early one-reelers, later in "The Birth of a Nation." But Griffith, believes Eisenstein, invented it through necessity, and only dimly appreciated its potentialities. At first, "montage" implied the principle of cutting and splicing the film strip in such a manner as to create an illusion of continuous action—i.e., A runs out of Scene 1, runs into Scene 2.

But then it was found necessary to depict simultaneous action; and the second principle of "montage" was developed. A was shown running, in Scene 1; B pursuing him, in Scene 2. By "cutting" back and forth between the two runners, the same impression of continuous action was conveyed despite the interruptions for simultaneous action. And through the resultant "suspense" in the outcome, drama came to the films.

The third principle—and this, to Eisenstein, is the real beginning of the art form—consisted in gradually shortening the length of each scene for climactic effect. Thus, in the shots of the two men running, the footage might be arranged in this manner: A, 10 seconds; B 10 seconds; A, 6 seconds; B 6 seconds; A, 2 seconds; B, 2 seconds. Double montage would be achieved as a consequence of increased speed on the part of the runners, briefer flashes of each as they ran.

Hitherto Eisenstein has confined himself to presenting the masses through the individual. When he left the legitimate theater, he explained, he wanted to get as far away from its limitations as he could. Because the "plot" was so inherently a property of the drama, he forsook it. For the same reason he believes that dialogue has little or no place on the screen, especially when it is used to tell what should be told in pictures.

Sound is different.

"Let us say we wish to depict mounting terror," he said. "Our rising emotions are shown in silence, pantomimically. But our line must reach a breaking point"—he moved a hand slowly upward— "and that breaking point will be a scream. With sound, we can hear it."

The Russian director has formulated a plan for his first American picture. Beyond its outlines, he has no story. He concedes, however, the provision of a story to fit his outline, so that the film may be successful with American audiences. That story is yet to be written.

ACCOMPANIED BY AIDES

In Hollywood with Eisenstein are Gregor V. Alexandrov, his scenarist and chief assistant, and Edward Tisse, his cameraman.

The contract is a generous one, implying mutual confidence and a three months' mutual "trial." To date the director confesses himself fascinated, and this not only by the film industry, but by the cities he has visited, and the people.

"Russia senses a kinship with the United States," he declares. "Your industrialization is immensely admired; this admiration is evident in the plants like those which Ford is operating in Russia, with harmony between your representatives and our workers. Russians are intensely interested in anything national, and so in anything international. Our children do not read fairy books or play with toys; they are taught the uses of machinery with which to cultivate the soil. And the principal difference between your film patrons and ours is that yours go to be amused, ours to be educated."

Eisenstein has traveled for nine months, speaking at universities both abroad and here. His next destinations are China and Japan. But first there is this movie business.

Schedule—Eighteen days' work in ten days.

Spot—A hypothetical mark where an actor is supposed to stop in order to be in focus.

Stage Control—A young man who counts loudly into the microphone for no good reason.

Synchronisation—A contributory cause to an outburst of profanity.

SCULPTURE HELD STRIKING

Life-size Bust of Rufus B. Von KleinSmid, Work of Helen Jensen, Held Uncanny in Likeness

BY ARTHUR MILLIER

An almost uncanny likeness! That is the exclamation of most visitors to the Stendahl Galleries upon seeing the life-size bust of Rufus B. Von KleinSmid, executed by the sculptress, Helen Webster Jensen, and now exhibited for the first time.

Whether the awaited words will form a learned discourse on Trojan traditions, a masterly plea for building endowments or a peroration in praise of ham an' eggs, the feeling of life in the sculpture is so strong that one expects it to speak. And, as the man who is both president of U.S.C. and the Breakfast Club is a Los Angeles institution, such a lifelike portrait of him becomes almost a civic event.

QUALITY ARRESTING

The human quality of the bust is more arresting than its qualities as sculpture, and this is in keeping with Mrs. Jensen's unusual flair. Her head of a "Laughing Girl" attained popularity throughout the country because its laughter is so infectious that it cheers up depressed or sick people. Its captivating powers have sold thirty-five terra cotta copies of it in less than two years.

Helen Webster Jensen and her husband, Holger Jensen, an architectural sculptor, came here from Miami, Fla., following a rather disastrous wiping out in the hurricane. Their home and studio with practically all of the works housed therein were destroyed.

They went to Miami from Chicago, where they had been studying at the Art Institute, to make portraits of the William Jennings Bryan and other families. The "Laughing Girl," by the way, was made to fill in their first exhibition there, which was seen by 14,000 people. The little head made a hit.

After the hurricane the pair went to New York with nothing but the head to show. It made a hit there, too. But Holger Jensen's health was not too good. His years in the air service had not strengthened his constitution, so the two artists came to California for its beneficial climate.

Bust of Rufus B. Von KleinSmid by Helen Webster Jensen

OPENS WAY TO CAREER

Here more portrait work came to the sculptress, who for a time was forced to carry the main load—her husband had broken down—and her remarkable gift of making lifelike portraiture, especially child portraits, opened the way to a busy career.

Now she numbers among portraits done here the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Foster, the grand-daughter of William Stewart, Jack Bradford of Pasadena, Norton Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Lee; the grandmother of Mrs. H. A. Everett of Pasadena, the son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stendahl, and portraits of Dr. William Evans, the Bible authority, and Dr. Ross Moore.

The laughing head is owned by Mary Pickford, Sid Grauman and other well-known people here, and is in art galleries and private or public collections elsewhere throughout America. The Congress Hotel, Chicago, has two copies in the lobby for the cheery effect they have upon the guests. The Vista del Arroyo Hotel also owns a copy of this head.

The popular sculptress will shortly hold an exhibition of children's portraits at the Stendahl Galleries, Ambassador Hotel.

FILM TECHNICIAN ARTIST

Progress Made in Camera Tricks and Effects Makes For Advancement of Motion Pictures

BY JOHN SCOTT

While swanky cars unload bejeweled stars at gala premieres, the modest film technician is quietly working away at home on new devices, new camera tricks and effects for the advancement of motion pictures.

To find such a technician is to penetrate into the very heart of a film plant, for these artisans have no private dressing-rooms or quarters save, perhaps, a quiet corner in the studio laboratory.

WILLIAM H. DIETZ

A typical example of action and thought is William H. Dietz, "aerial camera man" and film effects chief at Pathe studios in Culver City. An enthusiastic aviator, the young man, who resembles Conrad Nagel to the point that he has been asked for autographs by fans while on a trip East, straps a parachute on himself, a camera on his plane and plays tag with the clouds while photographing air scenes and panoramic shots of whatever is desired.

Dietz recently returned from New York, where he flew over the city and harbor taking background scenes for "What a Widow," Gloria Swanson's new picture.

Questioned as to the best way to obtain aerial shots, Dietz pointed out that whereas most photographers go up with a pilot and while flying move the camera in the direction of the object to be filmed, he pilots the plane himself and with the camera securely mounted on the side of the cockpit, maneuvers the ship to shoot the scene. Instead of pointing the camera down, Dietz tilts his craft up on one wing and when he desires a panorama shot he wheels the airplane about for it. He saves time this way, he says, by not having to constantly coach the pilot which way to turn.

EFFECTS IMPORTANT

Flying, however, is but one of his duties. Effects, as they are called, are an important item in motion pictures and in Dietz's own words "they are either real good or they are terrible."

One of the technician's favorite trick effects is the "mat shot." When it is impossible to obtain a technically correct background for a scene the foreground is constructed at the studio and when ready to start filming Dietz places a piece of plate glass directly in front of the camera lens, covering both the foreground and whatever background is showing at the time. Then, sighting through the camera, he marks with a pencil the boundaries of the foreground as seen through the glass and blacks out the background. This part, then, does not photograph.

After the film is developed it is placed back in the camera, only this time the foreground is blacked-out on the plate glass. A synthetic background of painted trees, clouds or whatever effect is needed is set up and recorded on the original film containing the foreground action. Thus, for example, Dietz can take a picture of a man looking up at a small two-story building and by his process turn out one with the same man gazing skyward at the Chrysler Building in New York or the Los Angeles City Hall. Ocean scenes with tropical backgrounds and cloud effects are often obtained by these "mat shots."

EXPERT ON MINIATURES

Dietz is an expert on miniatures which are used when it is inadvisable or impossible to secure motion pictures of some actual object. The youthful technician recently constructed a miniature of the Ile de France, one of the largest ocean-going ships, complete in detail, even down to the passengers on the decks. The boat measures six feet in length and the figures are two or three inches high. It was copied from pictures and blue-prints of the huge passenger liner and is propelled by water power.

One of Dietz's best feats was accomplished when he "dubbed" twenty different scenes onto the same film for the ballet sequences in "Paris Bound." He filmed each scene separately, placed each in a different projection machine and then threw them all on the same screen at the same time. In this way he timed the different steps with the music and when all was in readiness he superimposed the various sequences on a blank film. The music timing was one of the most difficult tricks he has ever tried, he says.

Every inventor or mechanically-minded man has a hobby separate from his business, it seems, and Dietz admits to radio telephony as his own particular pet. He is an operator, as is his wife, and now he is building a set to reach the far corners of the earth. Mrs. Dietz is also an air pilot and Mr. and Mrs. Dietz spent their honeymoon flying about the country together.

Yet Other Stars Shudder at Thought of Aging

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Someone once said it was a hideous tragedy to be old in Hollywood. But it all depends. I think it is being a little older than young that is so disturbing.

You know, that period during which an actress still wishes to play youthful roles and yet is not quite old enough to play mother roles. When she gets over that period, if she has the pluck, the sense and the ability, triumph awaits her in motion pictures.

We have a dozen or more sumptuously successful dowagers in talking pictures today, some of them making second and third careers to the envy of all beholders.

Marie Dressler stands at the head of the list. Marie, who doesn't mind making herself look a gosh awful sight, who depicts an amiable sentimental drunk so sublimely that producers hate to caste her for a sober role . . . Marie draws a bigger salary than many of the most supreme young beauties at the height of their fame. Marie can fill the theater any old day. And no matter what else one forgets about a picture, one never forgets Marie's character and every tiny stunt she puts over. Yet Marie once played girl roles on the stage in the long ago. She won fame there. Later she was to win new fame in silent pictures. Now she shines as an arch-success in the talkies. Yet one can imagine this dear Marie looking forward anxiously to the time when her youthful charms were no longer available as an asset. Marie, when most actresses would have retired to obscurity, stands on a new pinnacle of success.

BOASTS OF YEARS

Or consider that marvelous old dear, May Robson . . . Ma brags on her years and puts many a blase flapper to shame. For lo, these many years, she has taken her own company round the world, finding new welcome in every city

PICTURE WRITERS FACE PAY ON ROYALTY BASIS

BY WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON
(Publisher of Motion Picture News and Writer on Film Topics)

There is much talk of a story shortage in Hollywood. Yet, in the same breath you will be told that most of the writers in the country are here.

Various theories are advanced. Writers have not as yet grasped the new technic of talking pictures. There is a new picture theater audience whose do's and don'ts the producers are not as sure of as in the experienced days of silent pictures. There is a hiatus of stage play material because Hollywood robbed New York of its playwrights. And so forth.

The trouble, it seems, goes deeper than that; and that Samuel Goldwyn puts his finger on the sore spot when he engages Frederick Lonsdale to write for him on a royalty basis.

NEW YORK PERCENTAGE

There is a big word in the picture trade parlance of New York which one never hears in Hollywood: Percentage.

Just a brief explanation of what percentage means—to lead up to its application to the writing of picture stories.

Years ago the New York distributor sold pictures on a flat rental basis. He got all he could and the theater fought to pay as little as possible. The struggle was a wily, bitter poker game. Factors other than the quality of the picture were apt to determine the result.

Gradually, and naturally, the idea began to prevail that the drawing power of the picture should determine its value; in other words, what the public was pleased to pay for it. Distributor and theater would then divide the box-office proceeds upon some fair basis of percentage.

PRODUCER AND THEATER

Thus was percentage born. It has worked so well that today it all but rules the relations between the producer and the theater. For one thing, the producer is spurred to make better box-office pictures. His zeal and skill will be definitely rewarded.

Putting an author upon a royalty basis is just another instance of percentage. As the theater pays the producer for the quality of his goods, so the producer in turn pays the story man for the worth of his creation.

Which is sound.

The salaries paid to writers are, for the most part, generous enough. But salaries call for routine work. And creative work of a high order never was and never will be routine work.

Good stories don't come forth from a writer's brain with any more certainty and system than good pictures come forth from a studio. Systematic effort may produce a good grade of product but it rarely makes sensational successes.

IDEAS GO TO SEED

If the best novelists in the world were salaried by governments, or foundations, or private finance, they would probably grow fat on their salaries and slim on their creations. It is quite possible that they would put aside their best ideas to let them flower when they were free from bondage.

Salaries are apt to cheat either way. If the employer doesn't draw an ace story from his high-salaried writer's brain he feels mulcted. If, on the other hand, some God-given inspiration of the writer goes forth in picture form to garner a record-breaking gross the creative man feels eternally robbed.

I was in a producing executive's office the other day when another studio called up and offered him for a play he owned the sum of $150,000. Probably it was a case of buying a story to fit a star, but in any event if writers knew that this amount could be earned on a royalty basis by writing directly for the screen would not this thought make them direct their best efforts to and for pictures?

Again, I know of a picture that grossed several million dollars; yet the story cost a few thousands, treatments, continuity and all. There's a disparity here that cannot be reconciled—certainly not by the rules of good business.

Take the cost sheets of the pictures of any studio and you will find the widest of variance between story costs and grosses. Why should they not parallel each other?

STORIES HARD TO GET

Stories are of the utmost importance. That fact is so commonly known that the statement needs apology for its triteness. But we know just as well that enough pictures do not have good stories.

Stories are not easy to obtain. Many people write, but few are chosen. A magazine has a desperate struggle to fill its pages with material that impresses. The one that thrives and lifts its head away above the others does so because, somehow, it is a magnet for the best efforts of the best writers of most of the world.

Picture production should make itself just such a magnet. Pictures need the best efforts of all the writers of the world. But the way to get this material is not to go forth and capture the writers; the way, the obvious way, is to capture their best efforts, and to do this by letting these efforts participate in the exceptional earnings and the world-wide fame of motion pictures.

Royalty participation, or percentage, is the answer.

ALOOF FROM EAST

Hollywood would, I believe, have learned this lesson earlier had the studios not been so aloof from the eastern distributing offices.

An industry that has all its production on one coast of the country and all its marketing contact on the other is at a tremendous disadvantage. It would be bad enough for automobiles, but for pictures, where the taste of the public changes so quickly that the dictum of one month is anathema the next, it is too great a disadvantage.

This business of serving millions of people with their daily amusement fare is no light matter. But, take it lightly or seriously as you will, one thing is certain and that is that it demands cohesion.

Hollywood is ideal for picture production. And the reasons are not the superficial ones generally given. There are forces behind production here deeper than we reckon. The charm of American pictures is their spirit of youth, and that is the spirit of Hollywood in this new empire of the west.

Hollywood cannot and should not move its studios to New York; but perhaps, some day, New York will see fit to move many of its desks to Hollywood.

LECTURE TO BENEFIT BOWL

Announcement of Talk Directly in Line With Arbos Spanish Programs Later in Summer

BY ISABEL MORSE JONES

The announcement that Mrs. Richard Fudger of Los Angeles would sponsor a lecture on modern Spanish music by Olin Downes July 1 is directly in line with the anticipated Spanish programs to be given later in the summer by Arbos of Madrid at the Hollywood Bowl.

Olin Downes is a musical authority who writes with great charm and interest for the New York Times. He made a fleeting visit to California several summers ago during Fritz Reiner's conductorship at the Bowl and made friends here. He has returned this year at the request of Dean Sellers of Stanford summer school, to lecture at Palo Alto, and will drop down for a brief stay to give this timely talk at the Biltmore. The Hollywood Bowl will benefit.

Downes has been interested in the comparatively unknown subject of modern Spanish music for a number of years and has recently spent some months in Spain. So little has been written about Spanish music that it is natural to expect a comprehensive book from Mr. Downes later.

Fernandez Arbos, now conductor of the Madrid Symphony Orchestra, has been a mentor and guide to many eastern music critics in the uncharted realms of Spanish music. He was formerly a resident of Boston and played in the Boston symphony. The Arbos program, which will begin August 21 and end August 30, contain interesting new works by Albeniz, Turina, de Falla, E. Halffter, Granados and the conductor himself. Of course, the balance of his programs are made up of the classics.

Symphonic conducting in Spain is quite a different matter than it is in America or the other capitals of Europe. Only in Barcelona and Madrid are there orchestras of any size, but in Madrid they rather overdo the matter with three major orchestras. Strange hours are kept for concerts. The popular concerts for the "people" are in the mornings and Sunday concerts are an economic necessity. The fashionable concertgoers attend the evening programs, which begin at 10 p.m. Formerly the orchestras played in the late afternoon and ended their concerts somewhere around 8 or 9 p.m.

In Spain, as in the United States, there is very little incentive to the resident composer. The orchestras rarely present new works, or if they do, the composer is asked to conduct and usually has too little experience to present his works in the best way. These works are seldom heard across the Spanish frontier for the composers do not have the money to publicise them and there are no facilities for popularising new works throughout Spain.

Ernesto Halffter, de Falla and Oscar Espla have had "festivals" of their works which have aided them in becoming known outside. Halffter, the son of a German father and Spanish mother, 30 years of age, has shown exceptional talent and Arbos will play his best-known work, the "Sinfonietta" here in August.

Albeniz and Granados are comparatively well known, both having died in the height of their musical productivity. De Falla is immensely popular in Spain and France and interest in America has been so keen recently that he is scheduled for an American tour, probably under the auspices of the Pro-Musica Society.

Joaquin Turina lives and teaches in Madrid and became famous with de Falla in Paris. They both came from Andalusia and express a certain affinity of color but not of construction. Turina's works are vigorous pictures of domestic life in Seville. Halffter and Turina works have been played here by Pedro Sanjuan of Havana.

Senor Arbos will not suffer the handicaps of some conductors with the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra because he speaks English well and some of the men have played under his baton before. He is a keen student and is known to have some original ideas about interpretation.

REDLANDS PRESENTS PROGRAMS

Widely Known Artists Appear in Concerts of Summer Season.

The Redlands Community Music Association will begin its summer season in the Bowl early in July, and Mrs. G. E. Mullen, the president, has been concluding arrangements to bring widely known artists to Redlands for the Friday-evening concerts, while California and resident musicians and dancers are to present programs on Tuesday nights following the weekly community singing led by Hugo Kirchhofer.

At an opening event for this season and as a benefit to help finance it, the association is sponsoring a production of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" in the Bowl the evenings of Tuesday and Wednesday. The production is being given by the Redlands Community Players, with Bess Fredendall Woodruff, formerly of Ontario and Pomona College, directing. A large cast of dancers and minor characters are joining with the principals in this production, for which rehearsals have been conducted during the past month. Colorful Greek costumes and special music by Philip Goodwin's orchestra will add to the beauty of the play.

In addition, this will be the first full-length production given in the handsome new Prosellis (a combination orchestra shell and stage) which was presented to the city by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence G. White and dedicated with due ceremony in April. The semi-Greek architecture of the structure affords a perfect setting for the play. Miss June White, a student at Scripps College, daughter of the donors, is to have one of the leading roles.

All proceeds from this production are to go toward meeting the expenses of the summer concerts, which will include such soloists as Elsa Alsen, soprano; Percy Grainger, pianist and composer; the Smallman A Cappella Choir, the Woman's Symphony Orchestra of Los Angeles and the Pomona Symphony Orchestra.

GALLICO TO BE IN CITY TOMORROW

Summer Class Starting Tuesday Extended This Year to Eight Weeks

Paolo Gallico will arrive in Los Angeles tomorrow to begin his summer master classes. Mr. Gallico comes under the auspices of the Olga Steeb Piano School. This is his seventh year of teaching in this city. This summer the classes have been extended to eight weeks. They commence Tuesday and meet thereafter every Tuesday and Thursday and are two hours in duration.

Olga Steeb first became acquainted with Mr. Gallico through the late Walter Henry Rothwell, first conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. Mr. Rothwell and Mr. Gallico were students together in Vienna and close friends.

A pianists' class in advanced repertoire is offered, in which both active members and auditors are welcomed. In this class Mr. Gallico gives a very thorough lesson covering phrasing, fingering, dynamics, rhythm, tonal conception and style. A tremendous amount of material is covered.

The teachers' normal class consists of lectures and practical analytical work on building technique, teaching materials and teaching problems of all kinds are discussed.

Recital to be Given Thursday

The graduating class of the Zoellner Conservatory of Music will be presented in recital on Thursday evening. Those graduating are Leslie Maloche, piano diploma, teacher's certificate; piano, Clara Williamson and Ella Stabbert; violin, Rose Rosex and Henri Tardit, and violoncello, Betty Dartnell.

The following evening, Friday, the graduating exercises will be held. An address will be delivered by Dr. C. H. Robinson, university examiner and associate professor of education, University of California at Los Angeles, and the invocation will be by Rt. Rev. Robert B. Gooden, D.D. The Zoellner Quartet and Hardesty Johnson, tenor, will each give a group of numbers. The graduating recital and exercises will be held in the auditorium of the conservatory, 3839 Wilshire Boulevard.

Abe Lyman Band Does Film Bit

Abe Lyman's Band, night club, phonograph record and stage musical organization plays for Nancy Carroll's number in the screen frolic, "Paramount on Parade," now on view at the Million Dollar. The number is called "Dance Mad" and is one of the most tuneful of the fifteen starring interludes in the festival.

BASSO TO APPEAR

Oscar Teel, who has been professionally prominent in musical circles in Chicago for a number of years past, has recently returned here and will make his first public appearance since his return, at the Barker Brothers Monday afternoon musicale. Mr. Teel has been singing in light opera, recitals and concert work through the Middle West. In his appearance at the Monday afternoon musicale he will sing the aria from Massenet's Opera "Herodiade," a French folk song, "La Charmante Marguerite," and Schumann's "The Two Grenadiers." He will also present an English group by Oley Speaks, Edward German and James Richardson.

INTEREST ATTACHES TO EX-STATESMAN

Adolfo de la Huerta

The interest attached to the circle of singers which Senor Adolfo de la Huerta has gathered around him in Los Angeles is not only due to his well-known ability as a voice builder but to the fact that he was formerly a well-known political figure and President of Mexico. He retains the charm of a popular statesman in his comparatively quiet life in Los Angeles.

The ex-President of Mexico was first and always a musician and singer, and his political activities were the result of a queer turn of fate. As a young man he studied singing in Europe and planned an artistic career. All Latin intellectuals and artists are vitally interested in the politics of their country and take an active part in discussions and elections, as a matter of course. Becoming a leader among his fellows, de la Huerta was forced into the Presidency and by the time he got out of politics he could not then begin a concert career.

He could, however, devote his knowledge of voice building, which he had never lost interest in and the study of which he had carried on during his political regime through emissaries to Italy and other centers, to training those who were groping for practical aid in voice production. He has established himself in Los Angeles and is surrounded with Spanish and English students.

No repertoire or interpretative lessons are given by de la Huerta. His sole interest is in voice building. After the voice has developed purity and resonance he sends them on to others.

STUDENT RECITAL GIVEN

The Purves-Smith piano school of Pasadena was represented in a student's recital at the Shakespeare Club recently in which children from seven years onward were heard in difficult compositions.

ORGANISTS OF NATION MEET HERE

Annual Convention Will Be Conducted From July 28 to August 1

The twenty-third annual convention of the National Association of Organists—the first national convention of the association to be held on the Pacific Coast—will take place here July 28 to August 1, next, according to announcement made yesterday by Harold Vincent Milligan, president of the association and executive director of the National Music League of New York.

Several musical events have been scheduled for the convention week. Warren D. Allen, organist of Stanford University, will give a recital at the university at Palo Alto on the Sunday afternoon preceding the convention and on the Sunday afternoon following the convention another special invitation recital for convention delegates and their friends will be played by Dr. H. J. Stewart on the outdoor organ in San Diego. Besides Mr. Allen and Dr. Stewart, the convention recitalists will include Palmer Christian of Ann Arbor, Mich.; John Doane of New York, Lillian Carpenter of New York, Frank Asper of Salt Lake City, Clarence Mader of Los Angeles, Richard Keys Biggs of Hollywood and Arthur Poister of Redlands. Mr. and Mrs. William H. Barnes of Chicago, who have made a special study of music for organ and piano, will give a novelty program of music for these two instruments together. An orchestra concert will be given in Hollywood Bowl and there will be a special performance of the Brahms "Requiem," sung by the Smallman Chorus.

Reception to Take Form of Musical Tea

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Rowdon are entertaining 250 guests in their studios in the Beaux Arts Building this afternoon. This annual reception to summer guests and students takes the form of a musical tea which always precedes the organization of the summer classes.

Twelve States are represented in the student group this summer, many of the students coming here to take advantage of the work in analysis and correction of faulty tone production.

Mr. Rowdon is at present engaged in writing a book that deals with various phases of voice production, enunciation and the technic of breathing, for singers and speakers. He should be well equipped for this task, because of his thorough scholastic foundation, acquired at Trinity College in Dublin and augmented by two years of post-graduate work in anatomy at the University of Heidelberg. Moreover, this thirty years' experience as a vocal teacher should prove helpful in analyzing and treating the problems that confront the singer and speaker.

PIERRE KEY'S Music Article

BY PIERRE V. R. KEY

NEW YORK, June 21.—Speculation touching Willem Mengelberg's successor is at an end. The man who will take his place as co-conductor of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra is Erich Kleiber, Director of the Berlin State Opera, he has risen steadily to a position of eminence in a country where distinguished musicians are numerous enough to make recognition a thing demanding outstanding talent and capability. Barely forty, Kleiber gained several years ago a place which marked him as certain to have a brilliant future. Physically compact, his personality is striking. There is a snap to his keen eyes, alertness and vigor in his speech and actions. Smooth-faced and sparse of hair, you get at first sight of him a consciousness of authority.

Although a classicist and, therefore, a respecter of traditions, Kleiber is nevertheless ready enough to turn to modern compositions when they impress him as deserving of attention.

From Vienna, where he was born and gained most of his preparatory musical training, Kleiber went to the Darmstadt Hoftheater for his first post. Next came the opera at Dusseldorf, and when Artur Bodansky left Mannheim it was Kleiber who was summoned to succeed him.

Invited eight years ago to replace Leo Blech as first conductor of the Berlin State Opera, Kleiber so quickly demonstrated his versatility that when Max von Schillings fell into disfavor the newcomer was asked to assume the responsibilities of general director.

A SYMPHONIC LEADER

Despite his widespread opera activities Kleiber found opportunity to exercise his talents in the symphonic field. Proving his qualities at the very outset before exacting Berlin music patrons, he was considered before this year as a Philharmonic - Symphony possibility; and two years ago he might have acceded to General Manager Gatti-Casazza's invitation to join the Metropolitan Opera forces, had his Berlin contract permitted.

Kleiber impressed me, when I attended a concert he conducted in Berlin six years ago, as a man who would bear watching. He had not all one would ask for, at that time; but his resources today are undoubtedly broader.

A ripened musician, he will have during the first six weeks of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony programs an orchestra second to none anywhere. And with Toscanini, Stokowski and Molinari following him there will be plenty of opportunity to take his full conductorial measure.

New York will be the scene during 1930-31 of the keenest contest among symphonic conductors this city has known. It may prove to be the keenest in the experience of any single orchestra of the last half century. For Stokowski will strive to outdo Toscanini . . . with Kleiber making no inconsiderable effort to be held as a worthy associate.

Happy beyond words over his European triumphs, Toscanini deported himself in a manner during the recent foreign tournee that astonished everyone. He mingled with his men before and after concerts, and expressed himself as utterly satisfied with their responsiveness at every concert. That foreshadows a more pliable attitude when the Philharmonic-Symphony programs are recommenced; and it should predicate greater accomplishments than ever during the season to come.

ROXY'S NEW THEATER

Premier showman of them all, Samuel L. Rothafel (Roxy) is to have a new theater. It is to be built on the property adjoining the present Roxy and will afford this remarkable man wider scope than ever to exercise his imagination. The plan calls for something different from anything yet undertaken in the amusement line. Speaking generally, the plan calls for a combination-program to consist of every conceivable form of stage effort—which means operatic excerpts, quasi-vaudeville, ballet, and concert offerings on a scale to intrigue both eye and ear as they rarely are.

There is far more to the project than I am at liberty at this moment to make known. But I am of the opinion that for sheer novelty, the programs will go farther than anything hitherto attempted. The scale will be of the "grand" order. One can visualize Roxy as striving for the top mark in his career.

BABIES AND MUSIC

Children of all ages—some of them mere babes—are to mingle with music this summer. Plans to provide for every degree of musical inclination have been completed, and will be carried out this summer at teachers college at Columbia University. Peter W. Dykema, who conceived and will supervise these experiments (since such they will be,) appears to have made provision for all. There will be gauzy colored costumes for prekindergarten youngsters, who are to be encouraged to express themselves after the fashions promulgated by Isadora Duncan. While these tots are waving arms and legs, their elders will be engaged at developing their talents in singing and the playing of instruments . . . and those who have creative talent are to be aided in putting their musical thoughts on paper.

VIOLINIST WILL BE HEARD IN PROGRAM

Fritz Kreisler

Heading the violinists to be heard in Los Angeles this winter under the Behymer management is Fritz Kreisler, popular Viennese artist, who has not been on the coast for several years.

Mischa Elman, Russian artist, will make another tour of the Coast in concert. Joachim pronounced the boy a finished artist at the age of 12.

Toscha Seidal, who was introduced on the Coast several years ago by the Behymer office, is returning for a number of engagements, including appearances as soloist with various symphony orchestras in the West.

Last to be heard in the list of violinists is Yehudi Menuhin, who will return from a summer spent on the shore of Lake Geneva with his family, to enter the most strenuous season he has yet had. Nine concerts are scheduled on the Coast, with appearances at the Shrine Auditorium, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Santa Barbara, San Diego and Phoenix in this part of the country.

Chorus Records Cadman Music

Alexander Bevani's Cinema Ensemble recently recorded two numbers with music by Charles Wakefield Cadman, lyrics by Housten Branch, which will be part of a music drama laid in the swamps of Louisiana.

In addition to conducting this chorus Mr. Bevani is receiving pupils for individual coaching and training, and is also holding classes in Italian and French.

Edwin C. Rowdon of the Rowdon Studio has arranged a language class among his pupils, which is taught twice weekly by Mr. Bevani.

Lectures Set for Wednesday

Margaret Goetz will begin a summer course of lectures on composers and operas next Wednesday at 1051 Westlake avenue. The first subject will be Edward MacDowell, in which forty stereopticon slides will be used.

Paulina Cohen, Gloria Woodward and Leslie Brigham will assist on the programs to be presented at 2 and 8 p.m. The lectures to follow on the fourth Wednesdays of each summer month are on "Lohengrin," "Manon," "Tannhauser" and "La Boheme."

Park Program Soloist Named

Fay Hamlin, coloratura soprano and pupil of Guido Caselotti, has been engaged as soloist to sing this afternoon at 2 p.m., at Westlake Park. Miss Hamlin was one of the winners in the recent Atwater-Kent Radio Foundation.

Caselotti also announces at this time that the proposed showing of the film "Georgette & Company," in which Louise Caselotti, his daughter and pupil is starred, which was to have been shown on the 21st inst. at the Million Dollar Theater here, has been postponed.

Prize Choral Victors Given

Winners of the first choir choral sponsored by California Christian College, held in Grayson Memorial Auditorium last Wednesday evening are: First, University Christian Church, Los Angeles; John W. Lince, director, $100; second, First Christian Church, Los Angeles, Z. Earl Meeker, director, $50; third, Glendale Christian Church, Wesley Kuhnle, director, $25. Seven choirs were entered in the contest, the motive being to increase interest on the part of local congregations in their church choirs, and to add a cultural event to the college's commencement-week activities. It is planned to make the chorale an annual event.

INTEREST IN KRUEGER

Vienna-Seattle Conductor Expected ... Lovers Interesting Week

He is ... lovers one of the most interesting weeks at the Bowl ... ductor on July 18, when Richard Crooks, the young ... imparted a ... Hollywood Bowl ... conductors here.

Since 1926 Krueger has been identified as leader of the Seattle Symphony Orchestra, but beginning next year, he plans to return annually to Vienna and divide his time between this European music center and the west coast.

The German's development of the Seattle Symphony Orchestra since its reorganization under him in 1926 is regarded as one of the noteworthy accomplishments in the music world.

MADE DIRECTOR AIDE

Krueger was born in 1894, and at an early age began the study of the 'cello. Later he switched to the organ. He studied under Robert Fuchs, Franz Schalk and Felix Weingartner in Vienna and under Nikisch in Leipzig. As an organ virtuoso he toured Europe. Following the successful tour he was made assistant to Schalk, then director of the Imperial Vienna Opera, and later succeeded him. He has appeared as guest conductor with leading European and American orchestras.

To Krueger is credited the introduction to the United States of the genre of opera intime as it was produced in the famous performances by the Vienna opera in the Redoutensaal, Vienna.

The Viennese musician will lead the second week of "symphonies under the stars," July 13 to July 19, following Alfred Hertz.

Starting his fourth season as guest conductor at the Hollywood Bowl this year, Maestro Pietro Cimini must take rank with Alfred Hertz, one of the most popular of the Bowl baton wielders. He is slated for but one concert, that on August 19, but his large following is certain to form an enthusiastic audience on that night.

ACTIVE LOCAL INTEREST

Maestro Cimini is now definitely settled as a resident of Los Angeles, and is taking an active interest in all local musical events.

The Italian conductor has the distinction of being a graduate of the celebrated Conservatory of Bologna, which the musical world calls the "Italian Bayreuth." The conservatory was made famous by Mozart, Rossini and Donisetti.

Graduating with the title of master of music, he left Bologna, his home town, to appear as conductor at the Costanzi Theater in Rome. Later he became conductor at the Milan Lyric Theater, and in theaters in Turin, Venice, Genoa and Parma.

His success brought the president of the Russian Imperial Opera to engage him as general director. He wielded the baton in Warsaw, Moscow, Petrograd and Odessa until the outbreak of the war.

Maestro Cimini then came to the United States for the first time, filling a five years' engagement as conductor of the Chicago Grand Opera. In 1924 he conducted the opera season at the Colon Theater in Buenos Aires. With this wide background of leading orchestras in many parts of the globe, Cimini has

STAGE and SCREEN

Two Prison Yarns Among the Week's Grist at Film Houses

William Powell is in "The Shadow of the Law," due some time this week at the United Artists Theater. Robert Montgomery (at right) plays an important part in "The Big House," the penitentiary drama coming to the Criterion. Richard Arlen and Fay Wray are the love birds in "The Border Legion," current at the Paramount, and the chic miss with all that headroom is Alice White of "Show Girl in Hollywood," at Warner's Hollywood.

BEERY PUT IN "BIG HOUSE"

Penitentiary Gates Clang Shut Behind Huge Actor in New Film; Good Lesson Taught, He Says

BY MURIEL BABCOCK

Seventeen-odd years ago, as an awkward, gawky Swedish housemaid, the big-statured Wallace Beery first loped his way across the screen. This was in an Essanay comedy.

Mr. Beery, a former caretaker for a herd of elephants for Ringling Brothers circus, decided then and there that the motion picture game (it wasn't called an industry in those days) afforded him the best money-making opportunity he had yet found.

"I was thinner in those days," he remarked one day last week between mouthfuls of a ham-and-eggs luncheon, "and so I got along all right as a female impersonator. In fact, I was good.

"And now I'm a comedy heavy. No, I have never been a star. That's why I'm still acting for a living and getting along all right, or at least, seemingly getting along all right."

Mr. Beery, it must be mentioned, has one of the important roles in "The Big House," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, arriving at the Criterion Theater next Wednesday. This is the first of the big prison pictures—of which there are going to be a lot in the next few months—to reach town.

According to those who have seen the previews, "The Big House" is strong meat. It takes the picture-goer inside the penitentiary walls and lets the gate clang shut upon him. It depicts riots first and romance second. It puts Beery in the role of a good-natured, yet dangerous convict, who will try anything once and then play the role of the simple-minded "goof" when caught.

For example Beery at mess table one noon incites one of the worst of the prison breaks. After it has been quelled, a guard comes up to him and says, "Hey, you were talking in line just before this started!"

"Who, me?" says Wally, looking wide-eyed with amazement at his accuser. They put him in the dungeon just the same.

"The fellow I play just cannot understand the meaning of law and decency," he explained. "He's one of the biggest liars I've ever known, just lies naturally. Yet, he's never really mean—just good-naturedly dangerous."

"I'm glad to see 'The Big House' and pictures like it released," he continued. "We've had so many films glorifying the crook and the gangster as smart, likable fellows that it's a mighty fine thing to show what the inside of a prison looks like.

"'The Big House' should make a good many think twice about breaking laws. While it isn't intended as a moral lesson—it's got plenty of kick and punch — — it's also got reality. And the reality of prison life is no joke."

Although "The Big House" is the joint work of Frances Marion and George Hill (Miss Marion, who is Mrs. Hill, wrote much of the story and her husband directed) it is known that a former inmate of San Quentin supplied much of the more intimate prison phraseology.

ROVING EYE LEADS INTO DEEP WATER

Reginald Owen, Bachelor With Troubles in Comedy, "Caprice"

The bachelor's name is Counselor Albert Von Echardt. All his life, he has been troubled by a roving eye and—heart-burn. He is about to marry a delightful and capricious sweetheart when suddenly, without warning, his 16-year-old son by an amour of years past pops onto the horizon. Shall he continue his mellow and selfish course in life, or shall he, miraculously ennobled, clasp his son and the former amour to him?

With such a plot and such characters, this is "Caprice" the Viennese comedy which has been crackling forth from the Belasco stage for six days and pulling in such crowds as the theater has not enjoyed since "Journey's End."

Reginald Owen, an English actor of standing, is the irrepressible counselor; Miss Fay Bainter is the capricious sweetheart; David Scott, the boy; Lilly Cahill, the old love.

Owen says the part is one of the most difficult he has played in some time. "I suppose it is because I have to spend so much time on the stage listening. I have to bear what first, this character and then that one, says without saying anything or doing anything much myself.

"In the play, I suffer from indigestion. Surprising as this may be, I never had any trouble along those lines in my life until a few weeks ago. So the bicarbonate of soda which I take in play doesn't hurt me a bit. Only it's not bicarbonate. It's sugar of milk!"

Owen was summoned from Chicago by Messrs. Belasco and Curran

ZEAL SHOWN IN FOREIGN FILMS

Remarkable Care Evinced in Production of Pictures for European Marts; An Interesting Arrival from Abroad; Director Tells of Favored Stars of the Orient

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

THESE foreign versions of motion pictures are no myth. They are a serious and arduous reality.

There is no more remarkable experience vouchsafed by the film studios to the observer of cinema doings nowadays than the one of going onto a sound stage where not English, but French, German and Spanish are the prevailing languages.

I caught a glimpse of "Olympia" in the making the other day with an all-German cast, imported from Europe especially for the production. The film was being photographed and recorded with all the painstaking care that goes into the American version of a picture, perhaps even more. The one scene that I saw was enacted at least four times to insure its excellence and the players who were appearing were unquestionably a group of the most efficient that might be secured in the foreign circle of actors.

There is no doubt but that barriers of language will be conquered right in Hollywood if the work is carried out in this fashion. There won't be any need to build studios abroad, except possibly for creating a favorable political impression, so-called in the countries to which the pictures are distributed. Certainly, however, the ideal milieu for film production is afforded uniquely and only in this locality.

"Olympia," I might note, is

OLD PHONOGRAPH SET GOAL

Operatic Yearnings of Fred Scott Founded by Caruso Record; Pathe Gives Contract

BY ELENA BOLAND

In his mother's house was an old phonograph and one day he found a record which sang. Time after time he played it until he drove his mother frantic. But six years later, when he was 14, he started to do what Caruso's voice had inspired him to do—sing.

After a succession of "breaks," hard ones and lucky ones, Fred Scott is now singing in Pathe pictures. Before him is that goal for which all singers strive—opera. An offer has been made him to appear here with Jeritza in the fall. Such things come to pass and again they don't, so Scott wastes no more than a single hope on that ambition.

He has spent the past eight years working as an extra for his present position in the film world, and for the time he is content. He has had three leads; the first was in "The Grand Parade," already released. The second is in "Swing High," a piece of circus life now at the Orpheum. The third he is still working on, "Beyond Victory," a tragic half-hour of war.

Concerts, prologues, the radio, have all paid Scott for his tenor tones. His choice among them is the concert stage, but his real preference is the musical picture; or, rather, the picture which incidentalizes music.

"Singers don't sacrifice any of their art by singing in movies, even now. Some day soon there will be a still bigger chance for them. A picture like 'The Rogue Song' has done more for singing films than anything else ever did. It broke down all the old technical fears.

"It showed that a voice can be let out to its full volume and that the microphone will carry it. One can sing with confidence now and with no self-consciousness."

This urge to sing, which has ruled Fred Scott's life since he was 8 years of age, is balanced by another equally strong. He realises that he is expected to be a full-grown man, but he can't separate himself from a desire to make believe. When he worked in a tire factory, when he was learning how to lay bricks, he would pretend it was all part of a play. He pinned his songs on a wall in front of him and studied them. So that movies to him seem not the usual profession, but a prolonged game. He can be all sorts of different people, he can wear a uniform or a cowboy outfit and he can be perfectly happy.

"Making 'Beyond Victory' is just like playing soldiers, only you have more to work with. You can blow up a bridge and then go and look at what you've done. I'd like to be in a western. We used to pretend we were cowboys and Indians up on the ranch. We were scalped and tortured several times a day."

Fred Scott is the kind of person who chooses to read "Robinson Crusoe" while waiting on the set. He has read it before, but he knows it is good; therefore, he reads it again. He likes nothing which is not natural. He can't "act," he can only feel inside. That is why he reads all of Ernest Hemingway's books; because Hemingway suggests more than he writes. Scott has taught himself to sing in seven languages. He has tried to play the piano and he can't, which he thinks is funny. He won't go to his own pictures, though he will watch the rushes, and when he sees himself in a love scene he feels foolish. He admits he must be slightly crazy and it feels so grand he never wants to change.

SOUTHERNER SINGS WAYS TO TALKIES

Lottice Howell, Luminary of "Deep River," Now in Audible Films

BY PHILIP K. SCHEUER

When Arthur Hopkins, whose name used to be synonymous with the best in the New York Theater, put on "Deep River," a "native opera" from the pens of Laurence Stallings and Franke Harling, his cast glittered with a new luminary. Starlight shone from the eyes of Kentucky-bred Lottice Howell, a recruit from the cinema palaces, in her first important dramatic essay; as leading woman of the opera, she won consideration from the critical critics, the gentlemen who, while she was a part of "Roxy's Gang," wouldn't have known her if she had stepped up and slapped them in the face.

As a matter of fact, this was just about what she did—figuratively speaking, of course—when she appeared in her crinolines and laces, and opened that soprano mouth of hers. From then on, Miss Howell was known as a "comer."

Engagements in other musical plays, a season with the American Opera Company (Mozart Opera) followed. And by this time, Lottice Howell was enough of a favorite to be regarded as a "draw" in herself. She went out on the declining Orpheum Circuit, put new life into many a dying bill. She was here in Los Angeles something over a year ago; she had "class," Angeleno discovered, adding that they hoped she would come again.

Miss Howell did; but under different auspices. She came out to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, having been sent for, and waited around. After a while, they put her into a stage finale in Buster Keaton's first talkie, "Free and Easy." Hardly anyone noticed her there. Then there was another long wait;

DAUGHTER ROLES TRAIL DULCY COOPER ALWAYS

"It was dear generous Marjorie Rambeau who really gave me my first chance," says Dulcy Cooper, with fond gratitude . . . she being the practical daughter who tries to regulate mamma's love affairs, in "Under a Virginia Moon" at the Vine-street.

"But, of course, dad is an actor . . . he's in a New York show right now . . . and I began at 2½ years of age as the prattling babe in a San Francisco show. I used to play Little Eva, too, and did Oliver Twist at 8 years of age, a part they usually used a woman for. I was even in pictures . . . as the child in 'Live and Let Live' with F.B.O.," says Miss Cooper, whose early years were spent in wild melodrama, playing up north in Vancouver.

"See what a sun-burned blushing bride I am for this play. It's the first time I was ever a bride on the stage and I love this wedding gown. I was out here hoping to get into pictures," she confesses laughing, "when they needed a daughter for Miss Haswell. I've been collecting stage mothers for years. It was Marjorie Rambeau who first launched me as an ingenue—as her own daughter. Isn't she a dear? Always helping people. And then later I played her parts in stock, and believe me, I copied her as much as I could. Later on I toured with Charlie Ray in 'The Girl I Love,' and we got stranded in Des Moines, Iowa . . . so I got a job in stock there, when Fay Bainter was the lead, and Robert Armstrong, who is also out here now, was her leading man."

Dulcy is English, born in Sydney, Australia, but came to the United States as a baby with her parents.

"I was here playing leads with Edward Everett Horton at the old Majestic . . . I followed Mary Newcomb in 'The First Year,' and later did 'Beggar on Horseback' and 'Outward Bound.' It was after that that I took my courage in my hands and went to New York . . . with the great luck that I was given the name role in 'The Little Spitfire.' It had a gorgeous long run.

"Then there was 'Courage,' wherein I was another bossy daughter. That ran for several months in New York, too. I was always very dramatic as a child; my mother used to drum diction into me by the hour. That's the chief schooling I got. I'm an awful dub at arithmetic . . . After 'Courage' closed I stood myself a trip to Europe . . . those English, the effect of the war has been to give them that hurt, subdued look. My dad's going on tour with 'Journey's End' soon . . . he'll love that, especially as he is English."

"You know this 'Under a Virginia Moon' is interesting from several angles . . . it has the picture technique, don't you think? You know, the interpolation of the songs, without being a musical comedy. It's funny, too, because we all have the Southern tang, but the only two real southerners among us are Miss Haswell and Randolph Scott . . . and Scott's southern accent isn't as good as Vernon Steele's, is it?"

"Oh, yes, I married," she was confessing presently. "But . . . well, never mind. Anyway, I'm not divorced. It's jolly to be back here. You know, I ones went to school at the top of Angel's Fight. And they've taken some tests of me in pictures . . ."

There it is . . . pictures. Every stage player one interviews has one and one-half eyes on pictures. "But I will admit the picture people have the edge on us stage people when it comes to photography. Whew . . . you should have seen how many of my stage friends rushed out here, and soon rushed back to New York. I felt that I had pretty good nerve to come out after so many of them were turned down. Still there's always the chance that some talkie will need a modern bossy daughter," laughs Dulcy.

VILLAIN GETS UP EARLY

"Man" of "Crime" Tells Life History Before Ten o'clock in Morning

BY A. W.

It's easy trick to make an arch theatrical villain get up before 10 o'clock, as I interviewed Jerome Sheldon in San Francisco, just before I came down in Los Angeles with "Crime," now showing at the Criterion. That's what I did to the poor fellow.

There were also four years of pictures, chiefly at the Fox Studio, in the silent days. "But I never set Hollywood on fire," grins the villain resignedly. "It was when I played with Holbrook Blinn in such plays as "The Bad Man" in San Francisco, that anyone really noticed me to the point where it increased my stipend. That led to the 'heavy' with Richard Bennett in 'The Fool' in New York . . . after which my career of crime was firmly established. One of the most successful of all was the Broadway production of 'Broadway,' which made a great hit . . . one of the very first of the backstage crime plays."

I explained Hollywood's shortage of nice bachelors to Jerome Sheldon and the surplus of ex-husbands.

"Oh, well, then it's our leading man, Kenneth Daigneau that you'll approve . . . handsome, likable, and a real bachelor," sighed Jerome, doubtless feeling that he had got up early all for nothing.

"No, it's all right." I comforted him. "You were worth putting off Mayor Rolph for an hour. It's only reasonable that a professional villain should find matrimony irksome."

Player Claims Los Angeles as Her Home Town

Dorothy Burgess, who has a principal role in Pathe's "Beyond Victory," now being filmed at that studio, is a native of Los Angeles, although she started her career on the New York stage.

Although her parents are non-professionals, Fay Bainter is her aunt, and Dave Montgomery of the team of Montgomery-Stone, is her cousin.

One stage characterization seems to have definitely placed Miss Burgess as a motion-picture type. Although she played heroine roles in New York, she came to Los Angeles as the feminine lead of "The Squall," in which she had a vampish part. Raoul Walsh saw her in the play and, needing an actress to enact Tonia in "In Old Arizona," offered her the part. Since then she remained in type.

SPECTACULAR PROJECT TOLD

Great Amusement Center to Rear Head

"Lady of Scandal" Much Ado About Nothing

George O'Brien Proved as Audible Actor

BY NORBERT LUSK

NEW YORK, June 21. (Exclusive)

The great amusement and mercantile center to undergo construction here is fabulous in its magnitude and has a direct bearing on the motion-picture world. Financed by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for the Radio Corporation of America, the entertainment in the four huge theaters will be under the supervision of S. L. Rothapfel, whose alignment with R.-K.-O. will begin at the termination of his contract with Fox, or sooner if he succeeds in cancelling his agreement to direct the Roxy Theater. The site of the proposed buildings will be extended from Forty-eighth to Fifty-first streets and will occupy the entire space from Fifth to Sixth avenues. It is the most spectacular plan ever made to change so large an area in this city, or indeed in any other city, and it is estimated that three years will be consumed in making it an actuality.

The best picture of the week in point of audience response is "The Social Lion," at the Paramount, where Jack Oakie comes through with stellar honors. It is lively entertainment, reminiscent of "Fast Company" and provides humor and a modicum of pathos in correct balance. Mr. Oakie's clowning is always good natured without being bumptious and his awkwardness is believable and curiously sympathetic. He is aided by Skeets Gallagher with complete success. The latter's dry wisecracks keep the audience in roars. It is a pleasure to accord Olive Borden her due, the quality of her voice being gratefully received by an overly sensitive ear made doubly acute by voices that do not fit some of the pretty young mouths from which they issue.

JUST A TIRED EFFORT

"The Lady of Scandal" at the Capitol impresses as a tired effort with Ruth Chatterton, that prime favorite, at odds with the cameraman except in the music hall scenes where she is photographed delectably. Otherwise there seems to have been a plot afoot to present her as plainly as possible, this even going so far as to include dresses which are far from becoming. It is hardly necessary to add that Miss Chatterton's skill surmounts these handicaps as far as possible, but the fact remains that "The High Road," on the stage one of the author's lesser efforts, shows the strain of transferring it to the screen and throws into high relief the uninspired dialogue and age-old plot, neither of which is the least disguised by the languid high comedy manner which pervades the whole.

All the characters have something to say and most of it is motivated by love, but there is not a gleam of warmth or even friendliness in these scenes which pass for love-making and it is surmised that Miss Chatterton and Basil Rathbone, perhaps, have private differences. Of course, every member of the cast speaks as one accustomed to the nuances of the language. That goes without saying when one considers the veterans involved but it is much ado about nothing and there isn't even the melodrama of "Mrs. Cheyney" to give the picture special appeal.

ACCURATELY TITLED

"The Bad One," at the Rivoli for a run of continuous showings, at least, is accurately titled. Unfortunately for Dolores Del Rio, she is miscast, though she is always a glamorous figure and her dancing is charming. Her voice too is clear though some of her inflections indicate that she acquired her English in the studios rather than in Miss Vere De Vere's finishing school for aristocratic young ladies. Edmund Lowe fares somewhat better in that he plays a congenial role, but he doesn't succeed in injecting reality or sincerity into the picture which is at all times a hit or miss thing, its violent change from comedy to melodrama serving no purpose except to evoke ill-timed mirth.

"Rough Romance" is at the Hippodrome. Magnificent backgrounds and good acting do not atone for lack of feminine interest and slow the action though it is evident that care and money are expended rather lavishly. But at least it gives George O'Brien a local showing, his first since "Salute."

GUILD LAMPOONS WHALEN

Former Police Commissioner Caricatured Ruthlessly in "Garrick Gaieties"

BY PERCY HAMMOND

NEW YORK, June 21. (Exclusive)—The Theater Guild has hurt the feelings of Mr. Whalen, the former police commissioner, and he has requested it to stop. In its summer picnic, "The Garrick Gaieties," the Guild makes sport of Mr. Whalen's abdication and pictures his return to Wanamaker's in a cruel cartoon. Therein he is represented as something of a stuffed shirt, applying the law's iron hand to the gentle ways of commerce.

Impersonated vaguely by Mr. Philip Loeb he becomes ridiculous as he strides majestically among the merchandise and sales persons, issuing ukases as he used to do in the City Hall. It is a brutal and amusing caricature, assisted in its ruthless joke by clever songs and dances.

Mr. Whalen's protest inspires the Theater Guild to put thumb to nose and bid him be silent. Now that he has been deposed from the police force he is no longer terrifying and it is safe to jostle him. Once powerful but now weak, he is an easy mark for the impious, and they humiliate him without fear of retaliation. There he has to sit in Wanamaker's a mere tradesman, helpless to stop the Theater Guild from humiliating him. A month or two ago he could have shut up the "Garrick Gaieties" as an infraction of the laws forbidding indelicacy.

The Guild must not be accused of cowardice in the matter for it is the drama's most gallant institution. But one suspects that in jumping upon Mr. Whalen it breaks the rules that protect ex-celebrities with oblivion. Mr. Whalen by his efforts to make New Yorkers secure and comfortable has earned the privilege of privacy, and any attempt to invade his seclusion is an affront. His indignation is righteous and the Guild, consecrated as it is to uplift, must apologize to him, remove the impudent desecration and bereave the show of its most laughable skit.

A revue sponsored by so dignified a patron as the Theater Guild should not waste itself upon subjects that are spilt milk. It should attack the fools and follies of the day and show them up as they are jovially exposed, for instance, by Will Rogers, the Oklahoma Aristophanes. Still, you may ask what existing imperfections deserve the criticism and correction of the stage? Certainly the conduct of Mayor Walker, the New York judiciary, the Board of Aldermen, our patriotic statesmen in Congress assembled, Coolidge, Coveland, Caraway, Longworth, Smoot, Brookhart, Heflin and other bulwarks of government are exempted by the purity of their ambitions and actions from assault in a revue. So I suspect the Theater Guild in its "Garrick Gaieties" is forced for lack of other targets to fire at Mr. Whalen as he walks the floors at Wanamaker's asking only to be let alone.

Film to Honor Hero Mothers

Mother of soldiers who died in France are soon to be immortalized on the screen. The vehicle will be a short subject entitled "A Gold Star Mother," and is to be produced by Columbia Pictures. Color photography will prevail throughout, Harriscolor being the method used.

Shooting will begin soon with Aubrey Scotto directing. Twenty bona-fide Gold Star Mothers appear in the play and several hundred American Legion men take part in the parade scene.

SULLIVAN IS SIGNED

Wallace Sullivan, New York newspaper man, has been added to the writing staff at the eastern Vitaphone studios. He is the author of two recently produced Vitaphone Varieties, "The Master Sweeper," starring Chester Conklin, and "Strong Arm," a drama of the death house.

THEATER MINUS OLD RULES

Youth Can Now "Take" Broadway; Ernest Glendinning Thinks Changes for Best

Youth has stepped into the theater, changing the old order of things, just as youth now rules the screen. There are directors in New York who prefer the awkwardness of the amateur with personality to the sure stage presence of the trained professional. Where the road to fame used of necessity to pass through long apprenticeship, stock struggles and minor parts, it is now possible to "take" Broadway over night and with scarcely any previous experience.

This, says Ernest Glendinning, is only one of the changes wrought in the theater. The stage used to be run by rules; actors, plays, direction, were all labeled. One was a hero, a villain, a heavy; whichever he was, his tactics were mapped out for him and they had to be followed. Plays were catalogued as high comedy, low comedy, farce or farce comedy—as examples—and none could stray beyond the bounds of their set formula.

IN O'NEILL DRAMA

But youth has changed all this. The only rule applying now is "break the rules." And it is a splendid thing, declares Glendinning; provided it is followed sanely. This actor, who is English by birth and theatrical by heritage and upbringing, is trying to shake off in the humor of "Nancy's Private Affair" at El Capitan, the illusion that he is still Charlie Marsden in "Strange Interlude." For so long had he nightly resigned himself to the patient futility of O'Neill's character.

"And this comedy, which is delightful, seems so very short. I feel I've scarcely made my entrance before it is time for the curtain to come down. Starting at 8 o'clock instead of 5 makes a big difference.

"I never tired of 'Strange Interlude,' however. I won't say it is one of the greatest plays ever written, although it is certainly one of the most unusual; but after playing it for a while I got a new slant on it. At first, it seemed to end with hopelessness, lives completely wasted. Then, with an understandnig of the sixth sense, I changed my mind. It seemed to me that then Marsden finally became resigned to his place in the scheme of things. It was his portion to wait a lifetime for Nina and when at last he got her that whole, long interlude was washed away and they felt a promise of peace."

"Nancy's Private Affair" seems almost like a personal possession to Ernest Glendinning. He was in the original cast when it was tried out on the road. Before he could take it into New York, however,he was scheduled to follow Leslie Howard in "Candlelight," which he did, and proceeded from that to O'Neill's drama. But Nancy continued to follow Glendinning and one Thursday night a telegram urged him to take the following Saturday's train to Hollywood to once again straighten out her affairs.

A SKEPTICAL AMATEUR

Glendinning is not one of the rare actors who have had no try at films. He has been in one silent and one "short." That ranks him, he says, as an amateur, an interested though a skeptical one.

"What would appeal to me most in the picture game is the director's angle. As far as I can see it, he is the only one who is able to get a vision of the whole. The actor does things piece-meal, whereas in the theater he has a full, continuous view of his part. And between acts there is always the thrill of coming back to that which one has started. Especially in a comedy like this, 'Nancy's Private Affair,' I can't see how an actor could possibly make a success of it on the screen, because comedy is planned in bits and one must immediately follow the other according to an audience's response."

All the things which most long-staying Angelenos do not attempt, Glendinning is enjoying. He thinks nothing of rising betimes for a swim and a run down the beach, thence to a long drive into the theater. But being, after all, a descendant of the drama he sees no point to arriving in town and saying, "Hollywood, here I am;" so when his play is finished he will, no doubt, be found headed home to New York.

New Burlesque Show to Open

The Follies' new attraction, "Step Along," opens today. Heading the cast is Evelyn Myers, who specializes in all types of terpsichore. Then there are Bumps Mack, principal comedian, and Ray Parsons, who has an eccentric old-man role. The other principals among the women include Tex Oliver, soubrette, and Melba Roy, ingenue, who do solo numbers as well as lead the chorus through intereludes. George Crump will sing. The chorus consists of forty girls.

CRITIC REVIEWS NEW TRENDS

the foreign title for the picture called "His Glorious Night," in which Jack Gilbert starred in this country. But it has been materially altered for the French, German and Spanish public for which it is now being made.

I MET an unusually interesting actor of the German group on the set. His name is Tio Shall. He learned to speak English in three weeks and, though he does it in a measured tempo, the freedom of his pronunciation from accent is remarkable.

I surmise that Mr. Shall's efforts will not long be confined to foreign versions. If he can learn to speak English so well in three weeks, a few months will see him cast in American talkies. I say this because he has distinctly engaging personality.

IT LOOKS, therefore, as if this foreign activity will be of benefit in more than one way. It will probably be an avenue to new discoveries of talent for the screen here. Not that we need any new discoveries of talent just now (for there are too many of a sort now) but then—sooner or later.

RICHARD WALLACE, the director, is my authority for the statement that there is one part of the world where musical films are getting along famously. This is in the Far East, where that sort of entertainment is seldom obtainable in quality on the stage. The musical films are consequently favored, and already Maurice Chevalier leads in the procession. He is as much of a hit there, Wallace declares, as he is in this country.

Wallace has just returned from a trip 'round the world, the major part of his time having been spent in oriental countries. He said that wherever "The Love Parade" had shown it had been a tremendously popular picture. In Cairo, Egypt, too, he said that the "Hollywood Revue of 1929," which had opened just about the time he had visited, was highly favored.

"I found also a preference for Ruth Chatterton, while Kay Francis is an exceptional favorite," he continued. "The actresses who have the tang of the English accent in their speech are particularly approved."

THE talking pictures are establishing themselves in the Far East, and movies, silent or talking, reign everywhere, Wallace says. He tells one colorful incident of picture exhibition, pertaining to a Chinese boatman, who goes far up the rivers of the interior in quest of his audiences.

This Chinese exhibitor carries a projection machine and a folding screen on his journeys, and when he finds a sufficiently large cluster of boats at a stopping place he starts giving his show on the bank of the river. He installs the projection machine on one bank, and the screen on the other (these being not exceptionally wide rivers) and his audience looks on from the boats. When the show is near over he sends his assistant about in his own craft to collect the donations for the evening's performance. It is one way of making a living in the Far East.

AS IS known the bigger theaters in Japan have their "banshi" or interpreters. These explain (lecture fashion) what goes on during the picture. Wallace tells me that some of them have a following that is comparable to those won by a motion picture or a radio star, in this country. They are idols on the their own, so to say.

In Cairo the titles of the pictures are often flashed on the screen in both French and English. This also happens in the case of talking pictures. On a smaller side screen they are often printed in Arabic.

Thus are the Babelian handicaps of ancient countries triumphed over by motion-picture enterprise.

HAROLD B. Franklin, president of the Fox West Coast Theaters, has an explanation for the limited run of "All Quiet on the Western Front" at the Carthay Circle Theater, that is interesting and doubtless also very significant.

In a letter he dwells on the consideration of the so-called general popular release of the great war feature, and the fact that this sort of release is necessarily delayed because of a "time-protection" clause when a picture is shown at such a theater as the Fox Carthay.

"After all, there is something owing to those theatergoers who cannot afford the tariff at the long-run houses, and at the same time the bookings of the second-run Los Angeles theaters and the first-run suburban theaters needs must be protected," writes Franklin.

"All Quiet" could very well be held for several more weeks at the Carthay, but if this were done the picture would be milked of its value in both second-run and out-of-town engagements, and incidentally, in the time thus wasted the attraction would lose the prestige given it by the reception of its premiere.

"Again—a short, highly successful run brings a new picture into the theater and it, too, is sent into the territory—keeping the program better balanced with good attractions rather than forcing—through the lack of these better grade attractions—the playing of ordinary and second-choice productions."

In a word, there are seemingly excellent business reasons for not holding a picture too long in a high-admission theater. The bulk of the profits in pictures results from their wide-spread distribution, and the filmgoers benefit, too, by the quality of their entertainment.

There is a marked tendency, generally speaking, now toward the rapid broadcasting of talkie productions.

NOTED PHOTOGRAPHER HERE

Mortimer Offner, New York photographer, is in Hollywood to photograph cinema celebrities in their native haunts—the studios, for Vanity Fair and several film magazines. Mr. Offner, whose work is well known in the salons of America and Europe, says that Hollywood is becoming the beauty center of the world—that the movies are assembling in one city the most physically attractive of almost every nation.

FINANCE PROBLEM FACES UP-TO-DATE CHORUS GIRL

Can an unmarried girl get along on a salary of $75 per week? It would seem so. But can she dress in the latest Paris fashions, spending $9 per week for shoes alone, and still save $7 per week? That is the financial problem facing the new screen chorus girls, although the sum saved is not taken into consideration by all of them.

Maxine Cantway, one of the ensemble in "Show Girl in Hollywood," First National Vitaphone picture now showing at Warner Brothers Theater in Hollywood, and chosen in a newspaper contest as "Hollywood's typical chorus girl," gives her budget. Like the majority of the dancers, she receives $75 per week.

Shoes, $9; room and board, $18; make-up, $2; dresses, hats, scarves, etc., $24; lingerie, $4; stockings, $4; incidentals, $7. These items total $68, which allows Miss Cantway to put $7 in the bank. She is 18 years of age and is considered averagely dressed by the girls in her company.

"Chorus girls," Miss Cantway explained, "must be well dressed at all times, as one of the best ways to win success in films is for them to attract attention to themselves. Some of the girls forget all about saving, staking their entire salary on the chance of getting a big role later on. But most of us handle our financial affairs just as a stengrapher or salesgirl does. If we didn't we would always be broke."

Miss Cantway appears in the Technicolor sequences of "Show Girl in Hollywood." It is a story of the cinema capital by J. P. McEvoy and is directed by Mervyn Le Roy. Alice White is the star, and Jack Mulhall, Blanche Sweet, Ford Sterling and John Miljan are in the cast.

DIRECTOR SAID TO SHOW MASTERY OF TECHNIQUE

"Old and New," the latest work of the Russian director, Sergei Eisenstein, which was given its western premiere Friday night at the Filmarte Theater, is said to again prove this artist a master of original screen technique—a technique at once sophisticated and simple.

The picture shows the line of march to knowledge from ignorance. It is an intensive work depicting the collectivist activities in rural economics and the industrialisation of the villages. The film is an example of Eisenstein's methods of setting forth ideas through masses of workers, rather than with a group of professional screen actors.

Russia's most vital problem today is the production of food and the picture shows the transition from ancient agricultural methods to efforts in establishing modern systems of tilling the soil. It is a dramatization of what is usually considered an abstract subject, yet due to the skill and vision of Eisenstein, it is declared to have that organic and elemental unity which the Russians know how to attain on the screen.

What many have termed the best of all the war plays, "Journey's End," is the feature film attraction today at the Tower Theater. R. C. Sherriff's world-famous drama comes to the screen as an all-dialogue production, directed by James Whale. George Pearson supervised and Joseph Moncure March has written a continuity absolutely faithful, it is said, to the original play.

Neither the rowdy nor the sensational side of war is featured in "Journey's End." Sherriff has merely set forth the human side, not only as he saw it, but as he himself felt it while at the front. There is the whisky-guzzling Capt. Stanhope, a great fellow and a brave leader of his men, who privately admits that he would be scared to death if he wasn't steeped in rum every time he faced the enemy. And the kindly, understanding, pipe-smoking Lieut. Osborne, a former schoolmaster, who reads "Alice in Wonderland" before going on a raid.

The cast consists chiefly of Colin Clive, David Manners, Anthony Bushnell, Ian Maclaren and Billy Bevan.

MECHANISM IN PICTURE IMPRESSES

Dramatization of Modern Machinery in "Spectacle" Brings Chaplin Comment

Among those who have been impressed by the presentation of the triumphs of modern mechanism in the Howard Hughes $4,000,000 aerial spectacle at Grauman's Chinese is Charlie Chaplin.

In a spectacular air raid over London details of the operation of a gigantic Zeppelin are accurately reproduced for the eyes and ears of the audience. Verbal orders are given, dial settings are made, the giant engines are seen and heard responding, winches whirr as cables are taken out or let in.

In other sequences bombing planes are seen hovering and throbbing over their targets, and the bombs released are heard whistling on their way down to create detonations of awe-inspiring magnitude. Even the debris set in motion by the titanic blasts is seen and heard hurtling through the air.

Thrilling "dog fights" between pursuit planes are faithfully reproduced in every auditory and visual detail from the screaming of strut wires as Fokkers and Sopwith Camels dive at each other to the ominous popping of high-explosive antiaircraft shells.

More than $3,000,000 was spent by Hughes and war-time aircraft to the value of more than $750,000 was restored to effectively bring to the eyes and ears of the masses these modern engines of destruction.

Thriller Cast Complete and in Rehearsals

The cast of "Subway Express," the mystery thriller which will be the next attraction at the Mason Operahouse—the 30th inst. is complete, and the forty-odd players are busy rehearsing. The chief character is that of a police inspector, and Leo Curley will play the role. Lillian Rich has the chief feminine lead, the wife of the Wall street broker who loses his life in a mysterious way while on his way home in a subway car. The man whose life is snuffed out five minutes after the beginning of the play will be depicted by Hugh Kidder. His is one of the difficult roles of the play, for he has to sit immovable for two hours at every performance.

William Humphrey, Fred H. Hargrave, Victor Rodman, C. Russell Sage, Rand Barker, Al Hallert, Edgar Reeves and Roy Watson all have important roles.

Charm Held as Film Feature

"The Florodora Girl," now showing at the Boulevard Theater, gets its greatest charm, perhaps, from the fact that it dares to be different. It is said to be charming and quaint without being old-fashioned, and it has none of the stereotyped scenes that have always predominated films portraying by-gone days.

Among its odd settings, said to be faithful to descriptions of Broadway's famous theaters and rendezvous of the gay nineties, the life story of one of the famous Florodora girls is unfolded by Director Harry Beaumont.

Having trained his mind to logic and facts, Ralph Bennett disclaims any pretense of inspiration.

WESTERNS MOVING UP THE SCALE

Old Outdoor Dramas Now in Four Hundred Class; Stars Ascend Also

Evidence of the way outdoor western films have ascended the social scale in moviedom is apparent in the screen careers of Richard Arlen and Fay Wray, featured with Jack Holt in Zane Grey's "The Border Legion," now at the Paramount Theater.

In the days when he was struggling to win recognition as a leading man, Arlen appeared in western pictures as part of his seasoning. Miss Wray was the heroine of a number of hard-riding cowboy films before the feminine lead in "The Wedding March" brought the first recognition of her histrionic ability. From then on her roles had been confined to more conventional portrayals, until she was considered to have proved herself so well adapted to outdoor virile drama with Gary Cooper in "The Texan," that she was selected for the feminine lead in "The Border Legion."

Now the cycle is back at the starting point with both of these players, who, nearing the top of the film ladder, are appearing in a "western." But this now furnishes no cause for surprise, as today outdoor dramas belong to the "400" of motion pictures. The screen's audibility, making possible the recording and reproduction of the sounds of the great outdoors, is responsible for the change. Arlen and his new romantic partner last appeared together in "Thunderbolt."

Costeatured with Arlen and Miss Wray in "The Border Legion" is Jack Holt, who returns to the Zane Grey characterizations which brought him his greatest fame.

Studio Reproduces Entire Business and Residential Section on Three Acres

Three acres of ground on the First National Studio lot at Burbank were devoted to the construction of the little town of Demopolis, Va., which forms one of the principal locales of Corinne Griffith's "Back Pay," the Fannie Hurst story, which is now playing at Warner Brothers Downtown Theater.

In addition to the quaint residential section comprising several full length city blocks of typical small town frame cottages, the entire village business section of Demopolis before the war had to be reproduced in detail. Finley's Department Store, a two-story edifice, was built, and in it Miss Griffith, as Hester Bevins, and her leading man, Grant Withers as Gerald Smith, are seen as employees.

FILM STAR HAS SHARE OF TROUBLE

Bebe Daniels Overcomes Many Handicaps During Course of Career

Bebe Daniels, star of "Alias French Gertie" at the R.-K.-O. Theater, began her troubles when she entered the films twelve years ago and they have continued to the present.

When Miss Daniels first went into pictures she was told that her nose wouldn't do! She went to a plastic surgeon and ordered a Greek profile. Today it is declared her most attractive feature.

There was a time when she found herself chained to comedies—cheap "quickie" slapsticks. So she attended dramatic schools and studied languages and singing.

Recently, when a group of film officials decided Bebe Daniels's screen career had spun itself to a dull gray finish, and that talkies had reserved no place for her, she refused to agree with them.

She went to William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of R.-K.-O. productions, and confided that she had a singing voice. Her performance in "Rio Rita" made that film one of the outstanding talkies of the season. Since then the star has appeared in two Radio pictures, "Love Comes Along" and "Smooth as Satin."

for "Caprice." He had gone there to help with the staging and to act in "Candlelight," the P. G. Wodehouse adaptation in which he had acted in New York earlier in the season with Gertrude Lawrence.

An English performer of prominence, he has been in America since 1924. His first part here, and in which he made a very good success, was that of Prince Albert in "The Swan" at the Blackstone Theater, Chicago. He was in "The Carolinian" at the Guild Theater, in "Little Eyolf," toured with Cyril Maude in "These Charming People," in "The Play's the Thing," was Cardinal Richelieu in "Three Musketeers" and went back to London for a short time last year.

"This is his first visit to the Pacific Coast. He likes California "very much" and is coming back next year, he promises. He is due in the East in the fall. That is, he has work to do back there unless an overture he has had from the pictures gains too much momentum to stop.

Mary Astor to Play Film Role

Mary Astor began to play leading roles when she was 14 years of age. Her first picture was "The Beggar Maid," which also served as the vehicle for Reginald Denny's screen debut.

and now Miss Howell may be seen and heard in "In Gay Madrid," Ramon Novarro's singing picture at Loew's State.

The actress is not disposed to go around shouting about her part. Story exigencies and whatnot, she realizes, are as much to blame as anything; but the fact remains that she has only half a song in the film—a bright, lilting Spanish song. If it had been let alone—and otherwise some lightweight vamping to do.

And so there you are; and there, indeed, is she. Miss Howell, having months to go on her contract, and being, in addition, "regular," still expresses enthusiasm for the talkies. Romantic leads like those in "Deep River" and "The New Moon," she knows, would be all to the good—her own, and the long suffering public's. Meanwhile, she will ask permission to make a six weeks' tour in vaudeville this summer, just to keep her name alive. After that, Kentucky, known for its beautiful women, may still have its inning on the screen. And Lottice hers.

COCKNEY ROLE PORTRAYED

For her first time on the talking screen Doris Lloyd is playing a Cockney character. This is in "Way for a Sailor," which stars John Gilbert for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Sam Wood directing. The actress played a similiar character on the Los Angeles stage in "Spring Cleaning."

RECITAL TO BE STAGED IN OCTOBER

Original Musical Comedy to be Offered by School at Annual Event

Elisa Ryan, head of the Elisa Ryan School of Dancing, announces the annual recital will be held in October at the Windsor Square Theater. The offering this year will be an original musical comedy in three acts, "Full Speed," by Peggy Clarken, which was written especially for Miss Ryan.

Miss Ryan states that tryouts for the cast of this production will be held tomorrow at 5 p.m.

Rolland Paul, assisted by Lorraine De Leval, will direct the spoken parts of the musical comedy and all dancing will be staged and directed by Miss Ryan.

In addition to the tryouts and rehearsals of this original musical comedy, Miss Ryan is now enrolling children for the special summer Saturday morning classes, which will be held this summer from the 26th inst. to August 30. The teachers' normal course will begin on July 28.

Ninth Normal Course Slated

Earle Wallace in announcing his ninth annual summer normal course states that there is an ever increasing demand from physical training teachers who wish to take up dancing, as high schools and universities are requiring dance training along with physical culture.

"This year finds many teachers from the far eastern States, Canada and other distant cities enrolled for the normal course which will be held from July 7 to August 2. The course will consist of three hours' intensive work daily under the direction of Wallace, who will give instruction in ballet and adagio, Sam Mintz in charge of the acrobatic and John L. Root in charge of tap dancing.

In addition to this normal course for teachers Wallace is also offering between July 7 and August 2 a special course for advanced children in professional dancing and also a professional course for artists and advanced students seeking new material.

Juvenile Star Takes Dancing

Leon Janney, Warner Brothers' new juvenile star, has enrolled as the first pupil in the children's classes at Mosconi Brothers' new school of dancing, just opened in Hollywood. Most of the prominent screen children attended the children's premiere of this school, and many have signed up for instruction in tap, soft shoe and broken rhythm.

All children's classes are under the personal supervision of Charles and Louis Mosconi, both of whom are now dancing in Sid Grauman's new prologue.

Anthony Nelle, former ballet master o the famous Roxy Theater, New York, has charge of the ballet classes. And Johnny Pierce, brilliant stager of George M. Cohan's "Merry Malones," directs the tap classes.

Modern Ballet Expert Signed

In order to keep the Bud Murray School for Stage and Screen up to a high standard Mr. Murray has just signed Miss Mary Francis Taylor to a long-term contract for the latest type of "modernised ballet." Miss Taylor is a tap dancer of repute, having lately appeared with "Student Prince," "Oh, Susanna," "Come Hollywood" and "Broadway Melody."

NEW REVIEW SCHEDULED FOR TONIGHT

Spring Event to be Given With Varied Program of Dance Numbers

The spring review of the Edith Jane School of Dancing, will be presented at the Hollywood Music Box Theater tonight.

A varied program of dance numbers, ranging from the Mother Goose frolic of Miss Jane's class of babies to the authentic Javanese and oriental numbers of the unique "line" of ten young women trained by Edith Jane and Michio Ito.

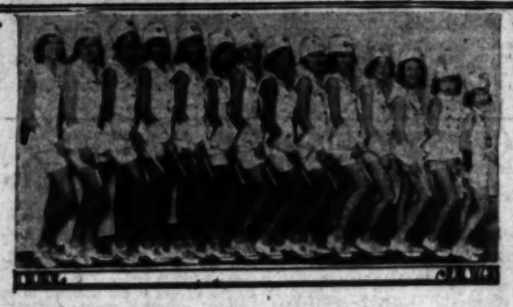
Specialty numbers will be offered by Gaby McLaughlin, who has just finished an important dancing part in Schwab's picture production, "Follow Through;" Collene and Patricia Carter, tiny Irish lassies, who recently finished their contract with Paramount; Emmerson Prohm and Doris Dagg, a team of youngsters who have been starring in club engagements; Mary Taylor, acrobat and junior diving champion, and a supporting cast of 100.

Course Plans Get Under Way

Preparation for the special summer courses in the Norma Gould School of the Dance, are now under way in the studio. No fundamental technique will be given, but special technique peculiar to each dance will be offered. Incidentally, there will be sets of rhythmical exercises for arms and for legs which will be interesting to teach classes and suitable for informal recitals.

SPECIAL COURSES TO BE CONDUCTED

The Danceograph Studios will conduct special courses this summer for professional dancers. The chosen dancers will be given opportunity to appear on the stage in solos and groups featured by Alexander's Danceograph Dancers.



Dancers in Public Appearances

Warren Leonard and Agnes George De Mille (left,) who will be seen in a dance program here Tuesday night; center, Virginia Solomon, young Glendale dancer, who will make her public appearance under direction of Arnold Tamon; right, Mme. Dot Duval and her partner, J. Sepilli, who will feature unique dances at the French celebration, July 14, commemorating the fall of the Bastile; below, Golden State Girls who will be seen in recital Tuesday evening at benefit for Highland Park Post No. 206, American Legion, under direction of Mrs. L. Fitzmaurice Kelly.

HOLLYWOOD TO BE 'SHOWN'

Director's Daughter Returns to Native World to Prove Artistry in Her Own Right

BY ISABEL MORSE JONES

Agnes George De Mille has tripped into town with her stage settings, her dancing partner, Warren Leonard; her pianist, Louis Horst, and her mind made up to prove to Hollywood, her native world, that she is an artist in her own right. Her distinguished father and uncle, William and Cecil De Mille, will be invited to see her in a professional performance for the first time, Tuesday night at the Windsor Square Theater. A future depends upon it.

Agnes De Mille is quite capable of standing on her own feet. It is not for nothing that she is the descendant of Henry George, the humanist and single-tax advocate. Nor is it an insignificant fact that she has red hair like her capable and popular mother. She has been building with determination toward a dancer's career for twenty-one years, to be statistical. For at the age of 3 when her mother played Edward German's dances on the orchestrelle, Agnes started improvising and declaring her intentions.

Miss De Mille is one of those quiet, refined, gentle persons who have far-reaching influence and get what they want. She has the subtly wistful personality of a Lillian Gish, only warmer. One can easily visualize her natural enthusiasm for the exquisite Adeline Genee, to whom she credits her first inspiration, for Genee was an artist whose passion was perfection.

LESSONS AT SEVEN

Upon seeing Genee at the age of 7, Agnes De Mille began practicing on her toes on the lawn and demanding dancing lessons. Her music lessons had been going on for some time before that and the two De Mille sisters played together when their mother entertained. Soon after the Genee performance Pavlowa appeared in Los Angeles with her Russian ballet and Agnes could be restrained no longer. She went to Theodore Kosloff and began working seriously.

Those who knew Hollywood in the days when it was a Los Angeles suburb, remember the children's plays that were prepared in the De Mille rathskeller. And the mothers and nurses of those fortunate Hollywood youngsters who gathered there in the afternoons will remember well the hours they were kept waiting, while the daughter of the house and the director of the productions looked up innumerable details of costuming and setting so that the plays would be authentically correct as far as lay in Agnes De Mille's power.

DETAILS EXACT

This flair for authenticity has never been rubbed off during the later years of study and progress. Last year she put on her own ballet for Morris Gest and Ballieff in New York. She introduced replicas of famous dancers of generations ago which were lauded by experts for the exact attention to historical detail. The ballet was produced in the same theater where years before, Genee had charmed a little girl into following her footsteps.

Perhaps it was natural for the daughter of William De Mille to have a flair for the stage but that she should also inherit a gift for leadership and battling for political rights is rather extraordinary. Miss De Mille is president of the Dancers' League, which is engaged in an effort to do away with New York's silly blue laws. She is a spirited and effective protagonist, too. The blue law enforcement officers closed Sunday dance recitals last year and let the dance performances in the motion-picture theaters and the night clubs go unmolested. Miss De Mille does not understand why a dancer who is good enough to give a dignified recital should be stopped on the eve of her show and all the mediocrities of the jazz world allowed to carry on. Doubtless the granddaughter of Henry George will win her point.

It is to be expected that she will be a success on Tuesday night also for she has the temperament, the equipment and the trained intelligence.

Vacation Time Class Offered

The tap and step dancing classes of the Ernest E. Ryan School of Dancing are being organized to take care of the school students during vacation time. A children's class will start on July 1 at 10 a.m. and a special high school and collegiate class Thursday, July 9, at 7 p.m. Both classes will feature a short, condensed course which will cover work in tap and step, buck, soft shoe, musical comedy and off-rhythm routines. The classes will continue through July and August.

DANCE AGREEMENT CITED

An agreement that has resulted in the successful presentation of more than 200 Ernest Belcher dancers in Fanchon and Marco "ideas" has been in existence, unknown to many, between the noted producers and the ballet master.

In addition to many dancers being featured in various "ideas" playing in William Fox and other theaters throughout the United States and Canada, one act, called "Peasant Idea," and now on tour, is made up entirely of these artists. Another set of Belcher dancers go on the road in a few weeks in a new "idea." They will probably appear in presentation at Loew's State prior to the tour.

Some of Belcher's best-known artists have appeared with the producers. Included among them are Lina Basquette of Follies fame; Beth Berk long featured with Eddie Cantor; Fay and Ted, now at Grauman's Chinese; John and Harriet Griffith, adagio team, featured in "ideas" for more than three years and last week at Hollywood Pantages; Ada Broadbent and Gae Foster, now chief aids of Fanchon and Marco; Evian, Harvey Karels, Sally Rand and Muriel Gardner.

Young Dancers Appearing at Benefit Recital

Mrs. L. Fitzmaurice Kelly's Golden State Girls will be seen in recital at the South Pasadena High School auditorium on Tuesday evening given as benefit for Highland Park Post, No. 206, American Legion. More than 100 of Mrs. Kelly's pupils will participate in this extravaganza of song and dance numbers. Included in this program of more than fifty numbers, will be group dances in which as many as seventy girls will participate at one time.

These young artists range in age from 2 to 20. Many of them are now filling professional engagements in this city. Three are under contract with motion-picture companies, and others are booked with Fanchon and Marco ideas.

New Director to Stage Dance

Lon Murray, dance director, has signed G. V. Rosi, former ballet and stage director at the Alhambra Theater in London, to stage the Ballet in the New York edition of "Hi There" and to head the newly installed ballet department of the Lon Murray School. The assignment reunites two old friends, who it will be recalled, wrote the comic opera "King of Mayo" for London.

DANCER MAKES DEBUT

Senorita Marcel Gavonia, interpreter of oriental dances, will make her Los Angeles debut at the Monday afternoon musicales at Barker Brothers Auditorium tomorrow at 2:30 p.m.

PURCHASE STIRS INTEREST

The recent purchase of the Western Academy of Dramatic Arts by Mrs. Riley Harrison and Edwin Wallack has created interest among the student and professional friends of these two directors.

MRS RILEY HARRISON

Both Mrs. Harrison and Mr. Wallack have interesting backgrounds of achievement. Mr. Wallack was a nationally known actor, having been trained under the great Shakespearean, Thomas W. Keene. He is a graduate of the Benedictine University in Atchison, Kan., and for twenty-seven years appeared in the companies of such artists as Frank Bacon, Emma Dunn, Jane Kennark, Richard Mansfield, Mrs. Fiske and Mrs. Leslie Carter and acted and directed for the Ince, Lasky, Selig, Universal and George D. Baker motion-picture producers. He was identified with the Morosco stock company and for five years was a director and instructor at the Egan Theater school.

Mrs. Harrison, who recently severed her connection as supervisor of the Major School of Acting, is a graduate of the Noyes School of Expression in Philadelphia and took her degree in psychology and philosophy under Prof. Bradley of Oxford, at the University of Louisville, Ky. She has marked literary ability, having written and produced many plays. Her peace play, "The Entente Cordiale," produced at the Twentieth Century Club Auditorium in Philadelphia, attracted extraordinary attention from the press and public. THREE HEADS ARE BETTER

Meeting Mama and Priscilla the Art Reviewer Takes Them Along on the Day's Rounds

BY ARTHUR MILLIER

Carefully adjusting my false whiskers this Monday morning I step back a bit from the mirror and try a sentence: "The exquisite tonality of Mr. Augustus V. Pipkin's paintings, shown this month at the Never-Sell Galleries, carry with them overtones"—"oh dash overtones," I decide as the beard comes unstuck. "I just can't go on like this. Something must be done!"

It is a little coffee shop on Vine, where I stop in a last effort to shake the art critic blues, and I find Mama and Priscilla. In quick succession I invite them to climb Mount Lowly and make the rounds with me. Mama thinks it a great idea and she has to read a paper on Art at the club, so off we sail.

Priscilla is exactly the age of a spring daffodil, and anyway she is coming out and I begin to feel quite happy minus the beard. We find ourselves in such a large territory to take things geographically—I to the Ebell Club, where Anthony Morse is showing bookplates and Mama to her tearoom. We all like the bookplates. Mama likes his fine trees and he brings in wherever possible, and Priscilla is especially delighted with the bookplate for a desert lover, where every plant is worked out so patiently and even a rattler introduced in the border.

I tell them I am quite sure Mr. Morse worked on these things for the pure joy of doing them, they are conscientious and complete. Mama is particularly pleased with the minor colors of trees.

"Don't you feel that he worships trees?" says she. "Makes you feel the magic of the deep forest and it takes you back to childhood when those little boys and girls used to be naughty."

I find that a number of these prints are done in Japan and we are all impressed by the scale of his subject of the great bronze Buddha at Kamakura.

FIESTO TO SPAIN

I also am the starter and in a few minutes in Spain via the Grafton Galleries. My word, the things about in Spain if one may judge by Mr. Carroll Bill of Boston. With his helpmeet, Sally Cross, he filled his water color brush in ancient land, bringing back a lot of picturesque papers on which he has battled, becaped Iberians and among old buildings, cluster with Roman arches, watch or ride in bull rings or merely assemble genially in the foreground of striking landscapes.

"He don't seem very enthusiastic," says Mama, who with Priscilla is thoroughly enjoying the show. "Well, between ourselves," I whisper, "I could have done with less red and more color-relations. But it is something we can all like. They are one of miniature paintings by Mrs. Bill has a more authentic blow. Here is the Boston water color tradition brought down to ivory scale. See that one in the top left corner showing a woman in a courtyard. Isn't that a little beauty? I hope Mr. Bill isn't too acutely aware of it, but—In this show at least—Mrs. B. wears the

"Yes, you're right, we must hurry on for the next stand if I am to get back for that pork roast with garlic. There's the spire of Bullock's-Wilshire, and under it we should meet an extraordinary man. Garcon, park Lizzie! What a cool, elegant place it is. But how small the palm court looks cluttered with a European bathing machine and lacking its beautiful Lureat tapestry."

DON'T GIVE A WHOOP

"Oh, look, Mama, what on earth does this mean? Here's a man in broad daylight stepping off a high cliff with his eyes wide open, and underneath it says 'Usual Procedure.' And look here, 'Radio Repairs' —a green sky, gray buildings sticking up and those funny little men fixing aerials on top! It's kind of childish, don't you think?"

"Sh-h, Priscilla, I believe that's the artist over there. Can we ask him to explain them, Mr. Critic?"

"Well," says Mr. Blanding Sloan, for he it is, "if you don't care a whoop how it's going to turn out you get some surprising results. These," waving a hand over the many monotypes, lithographs, etchings and block-prints both on the walls and stacked on a glass counter—"all express ideas or experiences. Any idea that comes to me is immediately turned into some kind of a picture."

"But how do you get so many, many ideas, Mr. Sloan?" coos Priscilla (how pretty she looks now) patting a stray hair back in place.

"Why my dear young lady," says Mr. Sloan, oblivious to all the rest of us, "if I just have a nice white sheet of paper in front of me I can't stop the ideas from coming. Pop, pop, pop, out they come, and so I look for the simplest way to turn them into prints. That has led me to try everything; etchings, engravings, aquatints, lithographs, drypoints, white-line etchings and now monotypes."

TELL ME MORE

"I think that's just won-derful," sighs Priscilla, mainly with her eyes, "Do tell us more about your work."

"Do you remember when you were a little tiny girl," says Mr. Sloan, "how your mother could never give you enough paper to draw dollies and sun-flowers and houses and people and everything? You could cover dozens of sheets in an hour. Well I think an artist should never lose that power of direct expression. Take that monotype "Moth on Window." You may not see much in it but to me it captures a momentary experience that might never come twice. The moth, the dusk of the curtains and the moon rising red. It's much or it's nothing. Of course, if you think art is all tollsome lines and seriousness you may not like it."

"Oh, but I do," hastens Priscilla, "and I specially like the Usual Procedure! I feel sure we do that very thing every day. I think I begin to understand you Mr. Sloan."

"Mr. Critic" says Mama in an undertone, "don't you think we should be going? That pork roast, you know."

So we leave this incorrigible experimenter — half child and half technical wizard and all imagination, and hasten toward the Italian grandeur of the Biltmore. Down the galleria we march, past the old, old men and young, young ladies who seem to sit there ad lib.

"I beg your pardon," says Mama as she bumps into a thin-faced little man carrying a black grip. The grip clinks, the man looks scared for a moment and we file into the small gallery adjoining the main Biltmore Salon.

Real Pictures at Last

"Ah," says Mama, with feeling, "at last you lead us to some real paintings. Now Priscilla dear, don't you honestly think these are much nicer than those funny things by Mr. Sloan?"

"Well, they are more finished-looking of course," admits Priscilla, "but you know there was a pep about his prints that sort of got me —especially after he talked to me. But some of these are nice. Now I like that one with the old brown New England farmhouse and the bright sky. It's . . . it's."

"Vital," I suggest.

"Exactly," said Priscilla with one of those glances that make a male feel so thoroughly understood.

"That's by George Breustle, A. N. A.," said Mr. Cowie, the director, coming to our aid. "All these pictures are by associates or members of the National Academy."

"I knew it," triumphed Mama, "they look regular and there's no puzzles in them. Now I like that nice placid stream with a bridge by Mr. Franklin De Haven, it looks so real."

"You would," snapped Priscilla. "I much prefer those beautiful rose-and-white houses with a white boat all reflected in the green river. That's decorative. I wonder who painted it. I'm sure he must be awfully nice inside to see such color."

"Walter Farndon painted it," said Mr. Cowie, "and I like it especially myself."

That netted a smile for Mr. Cowie so I comforted Mama by telling her how fine the color was in Frank Tenney Johnson's Arizona Canyon picture and together we enjoyed W. Granville Smith's fall landscape, Paul King's Dutch Harbor scene, George Elmer Browne's moonlit French canal and were getting along quite clubbily until we found ourselves before Julius Rolshoven's piquant model wearing the few clothes a Bacchante usually wears and, apparently exhausted by her dance, relaxing on a large bed.

"Oh, dear," says Mama, in a vexed tone, "that lowers the tone of the whole gallery!"

"Mama," called Priscilla in stern daughterly tones, "Don't Do a Comstock!" And then she whispers: "Didn't you see how that nice old gentleman enjoyed the picture? Why take all the joy out of his life? You frightened him away."

"Well, just the same," grumbles Mama, "I can't for the life of me see . . ."

Lunch and Portraits

By this time we are starved so we pause for nourishment and soon find ourselves ascending the elevator at the Friday Morning Club and entering the little gallery under the roof. Facing us are a group of portraits.

"Oh, what a wonderful ancestor," cries Priscilla, clapping her hands. "I mean that one in the middle looking down his long nose."

"Why do you know," said Mama with a touch of real excitement, "all these portraits are by Sarah Bixby Smith. She's not only president of this club but a poetess and the wife of Paul Jordan Smith who writes and lectures divinely. And I feel quite sure that that center ancestor is a Smith and not a Bixby. He has that ironical look!"

"Which one do you like, Mr. Critic?" says Priscilla in her subtly deferential way that makes one feel so manly.

So clearing my throat I tell her that I like several of them very much, especially the portrait of the long-headed Dickensian gentlemen in the wing collar. "There," I say "is a thorough bit of character painting and so is the much later portrait of the massive square-faced man with white hair."

"But," objects Mama, "isn't the

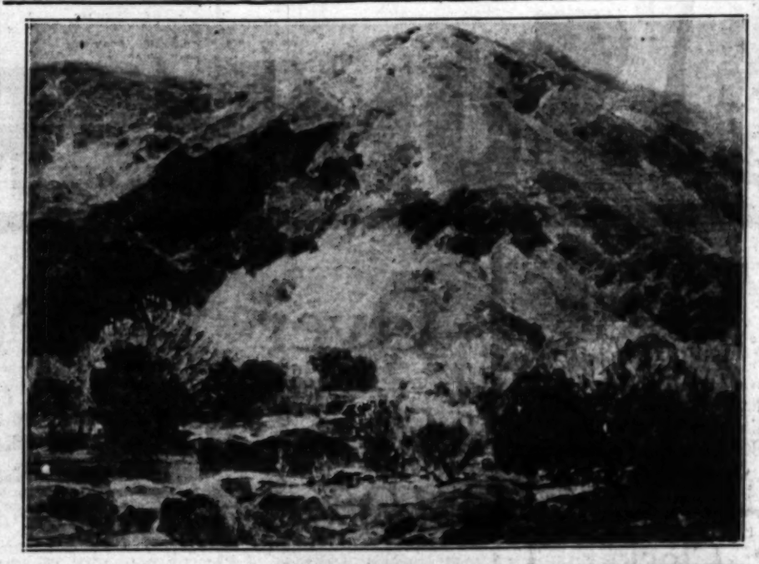
ART and Artists



Landscape, Portrait and Fantasy

News of the Art World

Club Makes Mural Protest

A formal protest against the awards of the jury in the recent Los Angeles Museum mural contest has been made by the Painters' and Sculptors' Club to the museum's board of directors. While no member of the club competed the club specifically disapproves the action of the museum in making the competition international, believing it the museum's duty to foster American art. Copies of the protest have been sent to the National Society of Mural Painters and the Allied Architects' Association. The club also asks a reconsideration of the awards by another jury.

L'Hote is Not Coming

Andre L'Hote, famous French modernist and critic, will not teach this summer at the California School of Fine Arts, San Francisco, as previously announced in this column. The secretary of the San Francisco Art Association writes that we are misinformed.

Paget-Fredericks Exhibits

An exhibition of paintings by Joseph Paget-Fredericks opened June 18 in the lounge at Bullock's Wilshire. The showing came here from the Sargent Foundation, New York, and will later go to the Berkeley Art Museum. Paget-Fredericks, well known as dancer, artist and poet, is the author and illustrator of "Green Pipes." He will lecture while here on "Fantasy of Art and Some Extraordinary Europeans." A forthcoming book by him will deal with these Europeans. Fredericks recently exhibited at the Grand Central Galleries, New York.

Simon Etchings Shown

The most widely known living color-etcher is T. F. Simon, Czecho-Slovak whose prints of Paris and Prague gained him international fame. An exhibition of his prints will be held opening tomorrow in the mezzanine picture shops, Barker Brothers. Besides being in innumerable private collections Simon's prints are in the Luxembourg, the Petit-Palais, the South Kensington Museum and in museums in Vienna, Budapest and Prague.

Clever Masks Shown

Miles Marchon has an exhibition of his papier-mache masks this month at the Hollywood Branch Library. These masks, made for dance and theatrical productions, stylize such famous characters as John the Baptist, Caesar, Lucretia Borgia and Mei Lan-Fang. Especially good are three conventionalized masks for Chinese dancers and a silver portrait mask of a man. Marchon's mask used by Lady Diana Manners in "The Miracle" is included and also portrait masks of Nila Asther and other screen folk. The artist has molded masks over a period of six years for many important stage productions. His first mask is also shown. Photos by Dapprich show the masks in use.

Prince's Painter Here

Leonard M. Davis, exhibiting paintings at the Hollywood Plaza this month, was a guest of the Prince of Wales on the latter's ranch in Alberta, Can., where he painted many of his landscapes, some of which the Prince purchased for his London collection at St. James Palace. Twenty-three others have been purchased by the Canadian government. Although Davies was born in New England and studied under Julian, Lefebvre and Constant in Paris, he found his subjects in the American northwest and Alaska, where he spent fifteen years. He works entirely with the palette knife.

New Feitelson Class

The Stickney Art School of Pasadena announces that Lorser Feitelson will conduct the Saturday morning class in life drawing, painting and composition. Mr. Feitelson is now holding a large exhibition of his paintings at the Brooklyn Museum, New York.

WHAT ABOUT THE ARTIST?

Three artists chanced to meet in a New York gallery—a landscape painter, a figure painter, a sculptor. In the midst of friendly conversation one was heard to remark: "There is no country in the world where artists count for as little as they do here." Strange talk this seemed to the chance bystander, but it passed unchallenged by the artists. "No country where artists count for so little"—what could this mean? Is not America today the greatest art market in the world? How numerous are our exhibitions; how flourishing our art museums; how much is written and published about art. But what about the artists?

When Josef Israels was an old man he chanced one evening to attend a performance of grand opera at The Hague. As he entered the house all in attendance instantly rose to their feet—homage such as is paid only to the very great or to royalty. In her recently published book, "Churches of France," Mrs. John Taylor Arms tells of how her husband, as an artist, received consideration from the village people generally, and special permissions from the municipal authorities in France when making his drawings, later to become etchings, then illustrated in his wife's book. There is scarcely an Italian child who does not know the names of Italy's great artists and is not brought up to revere the artists in his or her own community. During the great war no country in Europe knowingly risked the lives of its artists. To be an artist abroad is a patent of nobility.

ESTEEM SUCCESS

But is it here? Do we, or do we not, hold our artists in like esteem? Regretfully we must confess we do not. If an artist is successful—yes. But if unsuccessful—what then? He may dream dreams and see visions, but if he does not turn them into gold the more fool he. How often one hears of the artists' impracticability, of the vagaries of artistic temperament. Yet American artists are no more eccentric or impractical than other artists—artists abroad.

We have lately been reminded that the artist must have support or he will perish, and his art will perish with him. Very true, but he must have something more than this—our confidence and veneration, or his art will degenerate. What is so stimulating as esteem? If we do not feel ourselves noble, what obligation is laid on us to be noble? If our artists of today in America do not measure up to the highest standard, is it not our fault as much as theirs? To buy their works and to disregard their enabling gift is to belittle both them and ourselves.

And perhaps, after all, this is in part what ails our art today. We have commercialized it; we have subjected our artists to the crazy competitions of trade, and have let them forget that they are great people—keepers and purveyors of that which is most valuable, the lifeblood of civilization. And yet we know that it is by their works that we, as a people, shall eventually be judged by those who follow after us, judged from the standpoint of spiritual ideals, culture.

WISE OR CRAZY

Which has been more often right —the crazy artists or the wise financiers? Is a man's measure the amount he gets or what he gives? Are Titian, Rembrandt, Van Gogh greater today because their works are worth a king's ransom, than they were when alive, poor and working? Is Heifetz any better musician when he receives enormous pay for playing in public than when his music rings out in the soli-

DESIGN COPYRIGHT NEEDED

Vestal Bill, Now Out of Committee, Would Protect Artist's Right to His Creations

The benefits of a copyright law to protect the artist-designer effectively against imitators and plagiarists are obvious enough to the artist whose living depends upon the financial returns from his work. But it will take more than artists to secure the passage of the Vestal design copyright bill.

Help from the layman is urgently needed because there will undoubtedly be found interests opposed to legislation curbing their power to plagiarize decorative, industrial and other forms of design.

The bill (H. R. 11852) has been favorably reported out from the Committee on Patents of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. Groups and individuals must write to their Senators and Congressmen at Washington urging them to vote for the bill when it comes up.

DESIGN IS PERSONAL

The issues are much more important than the mere securing of payment to original designers and their individual protection. The very nature of design is such that it cannot be successfully copied. All design is personal. In other hands than its creator's it is weakened through misunderstanding. That is why the usual imitated designs we see used are so unconvincing.

At present an American designer of, let us say, furniture, does not dare to display his drawings before they have been put into production by a manufacturer because they will immediately be seized upon, badly digested, and reproduced in cheapened form by some sharper who respects only the money to be made from his piracy.

We do not, at present, respect the designer because our knowledge of his actual work is confused with the productions of his imitators. The power lessness of the designer before the pirate is not conducive to fine design. Too much of his energy is forced into the creation of mere novelties—designs that will keep him one jump ahead of the plagiarist.

RISE IN QUALITY

Afforded the protection that is now given musicians and writers—a protection that was not always theirs—the influence of the artist will act more beneficially upon industry and we may look for a rise in quality of American design.

Furthermore, the foreign designer will be in a position to protect his designs sent to this country, lessening the present tendency to imitate the latest importation regardless of its suitability to American needs and temperament.

The American Artists' Professional League has taken up the fight to make the Vestal bill law; so has Audac, an association of decorators, artists and craftsmen. The painter and sculptor certainly need this protection for the artist does not have to die to have his work forged.

The layman who is interested in seeing American art and design take the pre-eminence in world art that our economic state should command must realize that legal protection for creative work is essential to such a desirable development.

SCULPTOR JANELLI HERE FROM CHICAGO

Alfonso Janelli, sculptor, painter, architectural designer and real artist, came here from Chicago two weeks ago to rest. He gained his rest by getting sunburned and being forced to bed for two days.

Back in 1913 and '14 the posters in the old Orpheum lobby on Spring street attracted unusual attention among artists. They were among the finest works of art in town at the time. Janelli turned them out in his studio, now the Art Students' League.

In 1914 he went to Chicago, feeling the pull of the native architectural effort there, and did the Midway Gardens sculpture and paintings for Frank Lloyd Wright. Remaining there Janelli and his associates have done a vast amount of work in various arts, from designing churches to revamping the design of washing machines. In the process he has done some of the finest architectural sculpture in America. His most recent work was a series of zodiac panels on the Planetarium, Chicago.

Janelli is keenly interested in the progress of art in industry but he believes the process can only be hurried to the detriment of both art and business. "Only as business learns to value art and as the artist learns the dependence of good design on function can anything be gained by this association," he says.

THEME OF CULTURE WALL DECORATION

Hugo Gellert, painter, draftsman and lithographer, came to California from New York recently with Count Karolyi, for Bellert is president of the Hungarian Antifascist League. While here he executed a mural panel for Miss Aline Barnsdall's residence on Olive Hill, Los Angeles, which is reproduced on this page, and made plans for a series of sixteen wooden panels which he will carry out in New York.

The design of two figures, shown here, depicts man functioning in terms of space and time. The brute with the club can only think in space. If there is not room or food enough for a population, he will kill it off rather than learn how to provide these things. Civilized man, thinking in time rather than space, devises means to grow food and erect housing for all.

Gellert is best known to Americans for the series of black and white portraits of celebrated people that appeared for several years in the New York World. To many he is also known for his drawings in liberal and labor publications, including the Masses, the Liberator and the New Masses. To still others he is known for the brilliant series of portrait lithographs that he has produced, which, like all his works, have force, directness and style.

One of the secrets of Gellert's clear-cut style is that he is not interested in art for its own sake, but as a means to convey intelligible ideas. Like Boardman Robinson and Art Young, much of his finest drawing has taken the form of labor propaganda. The reduction of drawing to simple telling elements is essential in propaganda.

Gellert, now on his way back to New York, will return next summer to do another decoration for Miss Barnsdall.

A stylish visitor to San Francisco was Maj.-Gen. James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation. He indignantly denied that any official or employee of the corporation was responsible for that naughty S.O.S. which interrupted Senator Jim Reed's speech. Then he grinned, "Why, Jim Reed was giving us some first-class advertising when he was interrupted. We'd have paid him to do it." The radio chief was accompanied by his nice wife and they were crowding a little fun in between business.

It was quite an emotional event when U.C.L.A. held its first annual alumnae banquet at the Roosevelt last week. We hadn't quite realized before how much drama had gone into the procuring of the University of California at Los Angeles and how mighty the achievements in slightly over five years. Excepting Mayor Porter and a frivolous woman speaker, all the guests were either alumni of U.C. or had been ardent aides in its creation . . . Gov. Clement Calhoun Young (and how the young toastmaster, Paul Revere Hutchinson, loved spreading the Governor's name!) waxed sentimental and magnificently prophetic. Dr. E. C. Moore, usually a bit stolid in his speeches, told a moving story of the birth of a great university, and Prof. Frederick Woellner was witty, dashing and provided the lighter vein. Dean Reiber didn't speak, but his bow brought hearty popular cheers. Another bow that aroused applause was that of Edward A. Dickson. He and Dr. Moore have been so brilliant in coaxing millionaires to scatter their generosity Westwoodwards.

Judge May Laye and Helen Mathewson McLaughlin both received fond recognition, too. And little Mrs. Clark, who has been teaching third and second graders out at the Vermont-avenue school for two generations, was proudly accompanying her own boy, now a stylish graduate of U.C.L.A., and greeting numerous past pupils.

Numerous friends will remember Sydney Arundel's nephew, Dario Schindell, who took drama at the Martha Oatman school and later appeared here in a play called "Appearances." The play was a frost here and also lost money in New York. But national tastes differ and the youngster has made a huge success with the play in London and the critics have given him enough stylish notices to turn his young head. Uncle Sydney is showing them around with pride these days.

Three young men who were behaving rather badly were asked to leave a public restaurant . . . which they did, very crestfallen.

"The perfect omelet!" remarked a lady who had been annoyed. "Three eggs, well whipped and fried to a turn."

Which reminds us that on the same occasion a young French actor here was wearing a stylish monocle . . . and drinking his coffee with his spoon in his cup. Very interesting effect.

Clarence Brown Has Good Time Visiting Paris

Notables in all walks of life are lionizing Clarence Brown, director, while he is visiting in Paris. Word has been received from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Paris exchange representative that Brown has been dined and feted since he arrived recently in the French capital.

Brown is considered in Europe, as well as his home country, to be among the foremost film directors. Reviews of several of his pictures in France, England and Germany have stated them to be the best American films, notably "Flesh and the Devil," "Women of Affairs," and "The Trail of '98." The latter spectacle broke all existing attendance and long-run records in Paris and still holds it, according to report.

Brown some weeks ago flew his own airplane to New York with the first print of his latest completed film, "Romance." Instead of turning around and coming home the well-known director decided to spend a vacation of several weeks in Europe.

"White Cargo" Keeps Reality

"White Cargo," now current at Fred Miller's California Theater, is said to have been produced with all the vivid realism and dramatic force of the stage play of the same name. The various colorful characters are portrayed by Gypsy Rhouma as Tondeleyo, flower of Africa's Gold Coast; Leslie Faber as the cynical, drink-hardened Weston, and Maurice Evans as the high-minded young planter, Langford, who fights in vain against the charms of Tondeleyo and the enervating forces of the deadly tropics.

EMILY DICKINSON UNVEILED

Three Books Offer New Facts and Theories as to the Life and Character of Our First Imagist Poet

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

EMILY DICKINSON: The Human Background of Her Poetry. By Josephine Pollitt. Harper & Bros., New York.

THE LIFE AND MIND OF EMILY DICKINSON. By Genevieve Taggard. Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

EMILY DICKINSON: Friend and Neighbor. By MacGregor Jenkins. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Emily Dickinson by her shyness and her boldness and her independence mystified her family and neighbors during her life and in this, the centenary of her birth, continues to be an enigma. Her life as a recluse in the old house in Amherst, where for over a quarter of a century no caller got more than a fleeting glimpse of her as she flitted through a doorway, bids fair to become more discussed than her poetry. And this despite the fact that many think she will come to be recognized as our greatest poet.

The publication in 1924 of "The Life and Letters of Emily Dickinson" by Martha Dickinson Bianchi, her niece, brought out her strange story. Here the lover whom she renounced first appeared. It soon became apparent that this was only half a life, as was perhaps natural in a book written by a niece. Further researches into the life of Emily Dickinson were in order.

We have now three books about her, published in rapid succession. Josephine Pollitt in "Emily Dickinson, the Human Background of Her Poetry," and Genevieve Taggard in "The Life and Mind of Emily Dickinson," both try to reconstruct Emily's life, using every source available, and piecing facts out with surmise. It is the events that shaped her character and made her a poet and a recluse and a mystery that concern these writers. Both are determined to solve the mystery and discover who the lover was that Emily renounced. That there was a lover has become imbedded in tradition, like a pearl in an oyster. Her poems are full of love; perhaps that proves a lover. At any rate every one who writes of Emily thinks so. Her niece told the story of how Emily's sister Lavinia came breathless to her sister-in-law Sue, crying, "Sue, come! That man is here!—Father and Mother are away and I am afraid Emily will go away with him."

This was after her one essay into society, on a visit to Washington and Philadelphia in 1854, when Emily was 24. The identity of this lover has proved difficult. Miss Pollitt has delved into old papers, scrapbooks, college annuals and what not and has come to the conclusion that it was not, as has been said, the Rev. Charles Wadsworth, whom Emily met in Philadelphia, but Lieut. Edward Hunt, dashing husband of her intimate childhood friend, Helen Hunt, later the renowned Helen Hunt Jackson. She makes a very good case for the lieutenant, but one that has its gaps.

It is her satisfactorily continuous narrative, her sympathetic understanding of Emily's vagaries, and her illuminating presentation of the Dickinson family and background that give the book its charm. One gets a peculiarly intimate understanding of all the stress and strain of what seems on the surface to be merely a peculiarly bleak life. Dr. Dickinson comes to life in all his dignity of tail-coat, stock, high hat and gold-headed cane; Sister Lavinia, who became Emily's devoted guardian, flutters through the pages; and Emily herself becomes the self-willed small person she was who won her victory over her family and her unsatisfactory environment by withdrawing from all enforced activities.

GENEVIEVE TAGGARD'S BOOK

Miss Taggard in "The Life and Mind of Emily Dickinson" shows a poet's understanding of a poet. She, too, believes in Emily's lover and thinks she has run him down. She even produces a sworn statement from the nervous old lady who revealed his name.

She begins with Emily's sending four poems to Thomas Wentworth Higginson in April, 1862, asking him if she was a poet. This was Emily's crucial adventure. Leaving Emily palpitating over the verdict to come, Miss Taggard turns back to discover, by marshalling all the long-dead-and-gone Dickinsons before the bar, why Emily was Emily. Hath in line of the American Dickinsons was Emily's grandsire, the lawyer Samuel, who had a terror of wasting time. Father of nine children, he was foremost in the founding of Amherst Academy in 1814 and helped to turn it into a college in 1821. His son Edward grew up "in a cool, proud manner, correcting the paternal errors of impetuosity." Dignity was Edward's watchword.

To him and his meek, silent wife came Emily. Always she had a certain wildness in her, an extremity of temperament. She sometimes spoke impertinently and nimbly; she loved to play and to dance and to make merry. Of her it is said "she lived on elation from morning to night." Edward loved her and realised her rare quality, but was determined to control her. Miss Taggard represents him as the possessive parent who was jealous of everything. Of Santa Claus, whom he denounced as a myth; of Emily's playmates, schoolmates, teachers; of the men of affairs who took note of her. "As Emily neared young ladyhood," says Miss Taggard, "Edward, who had had an ordinary life without suffering or terror, began to live in a fever of anxiety lest she fall in love and marry."

At 16 Emily had dreams of being the belle of Amherst. Two youths began to take notice. Father at one packed her off to Mt. Holyoke Seminary, which Mary Lyon had started, founding it on the contention that the female young person had brains. That her students who were not professed Christians were "segregated, prayed over and constantly worried" must have been an annoyance to Emily, who had not joined the church. At any rate, her health failed and she left. Back at Amherst she was allowed to go to the academy, where a young instructor, Leonard Humphrey, has ideals, quotes poetry and is greatly concerned about heaven and hell. He is supposed to have first aroused in Emily the idea of being a poet.

Here is where Miss Taggard makes her big discovery in regard to the identity of that lover whom Emily was to renounce. He was George Gould, who later entered the ministry. Miss Taggard has a sworn statement made by Mrs. Aurelia Hinsdale Davis, an old lady who was a friend of the family, to the effect that Emily's sister Lavinia and the servant Maggie and a Mrs. Davis all told her this in confidence. Mr. Dickinson forbade the match and Emily bade good-by to George in the garden, promising to love him as long as she lived, to write to him, to always dress in white and never again to go out of the gate. That this for a romantic girl was the height of bliss is plain to those who know the species. When we add to this that Emily with all her shyness had an arrogance of the spirit, a self-sufficiency that made her prefer her own company, and a weariness with domesticity and stilted parties and doing one's duty, her sudden turning away from all this is not so astonishing. Higginson wisely wrote to her: "It isolates one anywhere to think beyond a certain point or have such flashes as you have." She made this isolation almost complete by retiring to her room and emerging only when the spirit moved her.

An Intimate View of Emily

In "Emily Dickinson, Friend and Neighbor" MacGregor Jenkins, son of the pastor of the Dickinson Church, gives us an intimate sketch of Emily. As a child he lived near the two Dickinson houses. The newer had been built by Edward Dickinson for his son Austin. Austin's children and the pastor's children made with the Greek profes-

BOOKS and Their Makers

Authors in Eye of Public

MacGregor Jenkins (left,) author of "Emily Dickinson, Friend and Neighbor;" center, Fred Rothermell, who writes of violent death, divorce, cops and robbers, drug addicts, love nests and clubmen in his book, "Fifth Avenue;" right, Emily Dickinson, poet, whose centenary brings forth three books that help to clarify her life.

A Group of Recent Books

THE LAST PARADISE. By Hickman Powell. Illustrations by Alexander King. Photographs by Andre Roosevelt. Cape & Smith, New York.

The author of this unusual book, an account of his life on the Island of Bali, in the Dutch East Indies, a night east of Java and just south of the equator, left New York in search of the primitive. His was not the nostalgia that yearns for that mythical land that lies "East of Suez," for he was not seeking a place where "the best is like the worst," nor apparently a land "where a man can raise a thirst."

He was tired of towns and men. He was seeking peace and quiet and beauty. From his account of what he found, we must conclude that he finally achieved his heart's desire on this island. Here he was suddenly confronted by a people living a life of freedom from the cares and worries of the world. The farmers of Bali are also makers of music; the field hands fashion gorgeous temples and the coolie girls perform weird and beautiful dances robed in cloth of gold. He found, in fact, a people still living the life that their forebears of centuries ago lived. Though the grandeur of the ancient civilization has all but vanished, its cultural effect is still vigorous. Here, according to Mr. Powell, is a people highly sophisticated in the leisure arts, who live a leisurely existence and scorn the rush and roar of the West.

Mr. Powell and his friend, Andre Roosevelt, find life in this almost forgotten corner of the world charming. His book is deeply expressive of his appreciation. He does, however, voice the fear that in the near future tourists, Fords, radios and movies will spoil what is, at least to him, earth's "last paradise."

Bizarre drawings by Alexander King and remarkable photographs by Andre Roosevelt embellish the volume.

GENERALS DIE IN BED. By Charles Yale Harrison. William Morrow & Co., New York.

This grim account of war is by a young Canadian who enlisted at the age of 18 and fought for two years in the mud amid the crash and roar of heavy artillery and rolling barrage. He was in the Canadian outfit that looted the town of Arras when it was deserted by the French civilians. When word of this reached headquarters the military police were sent to investigate, but were driven back by rifle and machine gun fire.

He was also at the battle of Amiens when his unit was given "unofficial" orders not to take any prisoners. His description of the slaughter of hundreds of Germans is graphic if horrible. Here we get the stark, frank truth about the front. Also a picture of the frightfulness that was practiced by the Allied troops under the spur of their officers' orations detailing the sinking of hospital ships by the Germans and other horrors, mostly either imaginary or deliberately concocted to develop in the men the spirit of hate, considered so essential to battle efficiency.

It is not a nice story in any sense of the word. It makes no pretense at literary excellence. But it has the bald, naked stamp of truth. The line, "Officers Die in Bed," from which the book takes its title, speaks volumes for the common soldier's attitude toward the brass hat brigade.

The author enlisted in the Two Hundred and Forty-fourth Battalion (Kitchner's Own) on November 24, 1916, and was on active service until wounded at Amiens, August 8, 1918. In the field his unit was the Fourteenth Battalion, Royal Montreal Regiment.

FIFTH AVENUE. By Fred Rothermell. Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.

A series of graphic if gloomy sketches, in which tragedy and comedy play about equal part. The sketches deal with floorwalkers and streetwalkers, policemen and hackdrivers, mistresses and charwomen, with here and there an ancient grande dame or silly social climber.

The author has mastered the technique of the flip at the end of the tale. There seems to be no aspect of the amazing avenue that has escaped this, its newest reporter.

If this is Fifth avenue, then Main street has little to envy this great highway of the metropolis. The illustrations by the author are in the same vein as the sketches, clever modern and realistic.

COLD FACTS ON DEATH VALLEY

BY JOHN L. VON BLON

DEATH VALLEY: THE FACTS. By Will Arthur Chalfant. Stanford University Press, Palto Alto, Cal.

Death Valley, sun-fired inferno or land of enchantment akin to paradise, according to season, circumstance and viewpoint, has been the theme of a few writers with a fair knowledge of this mysterious Eastern California sink; of more who were slightly informed, and of many who knew nothing about it. Finally comes one who is thoroughly familiar with all its varied phases through direct contact, experience and deep research, and gives us the cold—or shall we say hot?—facts. Mr. Chalfant does this most refreshingly in a splendid volume valuable not only for its authenticity but because of its completeness, embracing every aspect; and here the plain truth, simply but extremely well told, is more graphic, gripping and romantic than the wild imaginings of the fictionists. It is convincing.

It is eminently fitting that Mr. Chalfant, a conservative chronicler who is editor of the Inyo Register at Bishop and author of "The Story of Inyo" and "Outposts of Civilization," should have written this solid-fact book of comprehensive and concise information about Death Valley inasmuch as he has lived near it for many years. His work represents the gleanings of that long time from innumerable sources in addition to his own observant explorations and he would not release it for publication until satisfied as to the accuracy of every point regardless of others in the field. Knowing both him and his subject I can appreciate the full import of that determination. His readers will be the beneficiaries.

The man does not live with language at his command for the adequate portrayal of the tragic horrors of the stark vale at its worst or of its glamorous, unearthly beauty at its best, and the author essays neither; but his descriptions are vivid though reliable and convey sharp impressions. Exceptionally fine illustrations enhance the clarity of the text and bring out the more interesting features, including "Scotty's" castle. He deals with the valley's history, perils, climatology, water, plant and animal life, geology and mineralogy and man's astonishing endeavors, the whole painstakingly indexed. The volume merits a place in every library, public or private, and would serve admirably as a school textbook in view of the tremendous interest in and great development of Death Valley for the tourists of the world to marvel at.

KNOWLEDGE MADE INTERESTING

THE NEW HUMAN INTEREST LIBRARY. The Midland Press, Chicago.

Starting out with the purpose of setting forth the various interests and problems of childhood, "The New Human Interest Library" begins with character-building stories and advances to elementary projects to be carried to completion by the child, including drawing, basketry, woodworking, sewing, with suggestions for self-directed games. Incentives to better comradeship are built on the better-known organizations, such as Girl and Boy Scouts. All sorts of helpful suggestions to parents are worked into the first volume, along with helps in school work, suggestions on reading and on music appreciation.

The second volume falls more into the pattern of the accepted cyclopedia for young people, with separate divisions devoted to the earth and sky, to plants and animals, to the races, to physiology and to inventions. The industries of America are given a volume, with the making of glass, textiles, paper, automobiles, motion pictures and other manufactures, followed by a brief study of agriculture and mining. History next has its presentation, with interesting narrative set off by many illustrations.

The various nations of the world are described in a "Travel Around the World" volume that succeeds in making the people of other countries interesting. A sixth and last volume is devoted to leaders of all times, with a rather stereotyped account of famous artists, writers, conquerors and others, closing with brief sketches of great Americans in all fields.

A "Reader's Guide" is well planned to point out to parents, teachers and to the young readers themselves how to use the six volumes. Each volume has its own index and a brief bibliography that will prove invaluable to many a puzzled seeker after knowledge. A general index is found at the end of the sixth volume.

Gossip of the Book World

Youth Aspiring

The Belmont Miscellany, 1930, written and printed by the students of Belmont High School, reveals as Alfred L. Benshimol says in the preface, "youth at its best, thinking aspiring, accomplishing." Prose stories and sketches mingle with poetry in its pages. Not a cheap line nor a careless one appears, which proves good training somewhere. The contributors this year are Nancy King, Frank Rooney, Richard Lambert, Beulah Dimmitt, Alan Farman, Fred Ross, Jane Smalley, Margaret Ashmead, Leonard Calderon, Milton Herrick, Corwin Mocine, Consuelo Herrera, Minnie Ginsburg, Florence Miller, Constance Colby, Kathryn Gehring, Irene Lockhart, Adele Paronelli, Roslyn Hudson and Edward Lewis.

Humanising Knowledge

Simon & Schuster, publishers of "The Story of Philosophy" and "The Art of Thinking," have just issued two new books that carry on the conscious adventure of humanizing knowledge." They are "The Great Astronomers" by Dr. Henry Smith Williams and "Crucibles: the Lives and Achievements of the Great Chemists" by Bernard Jaffe. "Crucibles" is the winner of the Francis Bacon Award for the humanizing of knowledge sponsored by The Forum Magazine and Simon & Schuster. The prize consisted of a gold medal presented by Prof. John Dewey and a check for $7500, in addition to further cumulative royalties. The manuscript was read and enthusiastically praised by the late Edwin E. Slosson.

"Adios!" in the Talkies

The motion-picture rights of "Adios!" The Bartletts' novel of Southern California in the fighting '30's, (William Morrow, publisher,) have been purchased by Warner Brothers, who started production on May 20. The talking picture of "Adios!" will be one of the big productions of the autumn season, with many sequences in Technicolor. The cast is imposing, both from the standpoint of pay roll and popularity. Richard Barthelmess will play Pancho Delfino. Other actors selected are: Robert Edeson, James Rennie, Claude Gillingwater, Fred Kohler, Arthur Stone, Marian Nixon and Mathilda Comont.

$100,000 for Air Safety

Orville H. Keen, whose "Everyman's Book of Flying" is just published by Stokes, includes in the book aeronautical accident data for 1929 not yet given to the public when the book went to press. Also included are complete data on the Daniel Guggenheim Safe Aircraft Competition, with details of the $100,000 prize contest and details of the winner as well as of other contestants.

Fall Books Announced

Headliners on the Coward-McCann list for the fall are Knut Hamsun, Siegfried Sassoon, Karl A. Menninger, John Donald Wade, J. H. Bradley, Jr., Gorham Munson, and Fleta Campbell Springer.

Hamsun's new novel, "Vagabonds," has been proclaimed by European critics as his best since "Growth of the Soil." Siegfried Sassoon, winner of the James Tait Black Memorial and the Hawthornden prizes with his "Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man," has written "The Diary of an Infantry Officer," embodying many of his own experiences in the World War. In this connection Coward-McCann state that the continued sale of "Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man" will keep it out of the cheap reprint series for many months to come.

"New Yorker" Gutted

Doubleday, Doran & Co. will publish in the fall a collection of the best prose selections from The New Yorker during the past year. This will be a companion volume to "The New Yorker Album," an annual favorite containing the funniest pictures appearing during the current year in that publication.

Reading With a Purpose

To meet the demands on public libraries for courses of reading on foreign life and letters, the American Library Association has published "Scandinavian Literature," the third course in the "Reading With a Purpose" series dealing with foreign literature. The booklet, which has just appeared, was prepared for the association by Hanna Astrup Larsen, editor of the American Scandinavian Review.

Courses on French and English literature have already been published in the "Reading With a Purpose" series and one on Russian literature is now in preparation. The books recommended in all of these booklets may be obtained through the public libraries where the courses themselves are also available.

RELIGION AND CONDUCT

Sister Monica Tells of a Noble Endeavor; Dr. [illegible] Daringly Challenges Present Day Cant

BY M. F. CUMMINGS

THE CROSS IN THE WILDERNESS. By Sister [illegible] Green & Co., New York.

Readers of this page may recall a review last year which called their attention the very interesting volume by Sister [illegible], "Angela Merci and Her Teaching Idea." The present book by the same author is devoted to the description of the onerous task, performed by certain members of this noted teaching sisterhood in establishing their now well-known and justly celebrated School of Nursing, that of the Ursulines, at St. Martins, O., in the year 1845.

The little body of nuns who left the sheltering convent at Boulogne, crossed a stormy ocean and traveled an unknown land to set up a school in the wilderness, were led by an Englishwoman, Sister Julia, who became their first mother superior at Saint Martins. There was also a young Irishwoman, a Sister Hyacinth, and a Miss Dunn, an English postulant. The remaining members of their company of eleven, were Frenchwomen who learned the English language during their tedious and trying journey. Some of these were from Beaulieu, "but all were of one heart and one mind."

It goes without saying that Sister Julia, the leader of this devoted little band, was a woman of great strength of character and wonderful adaptability. Much of Sister Monica's material has been derived from Sister Julia's letters. They prove not alone her ability and devotion, but also her great patience. If she did not "suffer fools gladly" she at least bore with them submissively and cheerfully.

In addition to much matter of great interest there are many references to important historical events as these were seen through the eyes of contemporaries whose diaries and letters have been carefully preserved. Sister Monica has made capital of these unusual sources of information in an adequate and accurate manner, writing always with clearness, courtesy and kindly sincerity.

THE PRESENT AND FUTURE OF RELIGION. By C. E. M. Joad. The Macmillan Company, New York.

This somewhat daring work opens with a direct and incisive account of present religious conditions. We are told of the steady decline of religious influence upon society at large and are especially assured of its lack of power in any way to affect the conduct or opinion of the younger [illegible] modern communities. The statistics regarding this matter, which in the [illegible] rings of such authorities as Lindsay, Tyerman [illegible] grouped and generally [illegible] as natural expressions of the age," are [illegible] separated and analyzed.

First among the causes which have led the thinking [illegible] manifest a lack [illegible] religion is the mentality [illegible] the teaching of the [illegible] "he social creeds and [illegible] tices which went [illegible] the organized religious [illegible] ing the nineteenth and [illegible] centuries.

The second cause is [illegible] chology as taught by [illegible] and his followers, and also [illegible] cho-analytic [illegible] Freud. The manner [illegible] logical and witty [illegible] these "infallible" [illegible] by a dexterous but [illegible] of the "unpleasant" [illegible] highly diverting.

Third in number is [illegible] fact that in the last war [illegible] were drafted and made [illegible] the trenches, while [illegible] the nations into war, [illegible] active protest against [illegible] the background and [illegible] gious platitudes.

Dr. Joad valiantly [illegible] lieve that the natural [illegible] human being for a [illegible] ligion can be permanently [illegible] pressed. The world has [illegible] ligion which has not [illegible] infallible creeds, nor [illegible] viduals, a religion which [illegible] derful and constantly [illegible] discoveries of physical [illegible] in no way affect.

In this extremity the [illegible] to mysticism, the [illegible] veloped men like [illegible]

MOUNTAINS SEEM HILLOCKS

If you see the picture you will [illegible] —except on the far reaches of [illegible] polar flight—a lack of anything [illegible] that looks like sizable mountains. [illegible] nevertheless, real mountains, and [illegible] ones, are shown a number of [illegible] times, though on the screen they [illegible] appear to be merely hillocks or [illegible] low. The reason for the optical [illegible] discrepancy lies in the age in which [illegible] the whole of Antarctica still lies—[illegible] the ice age which once engulfed [illegible] more than half of North America [illegible] a mile-deep glaciers. The snow of [illegible] countless centuries has actually [illegible] filled the valleys full in Antarctica [illegible] and swept on such wind-swept ranges [illegible] as the Queen Maud, so that packed [illegible] ice—in some places more than a [illegible] mile deep—climbs toward the very [illegible] peaks and almost hides them. [illegible] Hence it is a matter of grave scien[illegible] tific interest to discover whether [illegible] the ice in Antarctica is advancing [illegible] or receding, or standing still—as it [illegible] seems to be—for were the snow [illegible] there to be melted it has been estimated that it would raise the level [illegible] of all the oceans more than fifty [illegible] feet, destroying practically all the [illegible] harbors in the world, and making [illegible] New York—and many other cities [illegible] habitable only after the building of [illegible] enormous dikes to protect the low[illegible] lands from the rising waters.

[illegible] was only on the great mountain[illegible] ranges that the interior that the [illegible] explorers were able to find actual [illegible] rock, as the snow of the valleys [illegible] and still cover the land of the val[illegible] leys from all human eyes for many [illegible] generations yet to come.

[illegible] is the utter lack of life which [illegible] is one of all distinguishes the Ant[illegible] arctic from the Arctic. There are [illegible] no bears—no permanent dwellers [illegible] of any kind. In the Antarctic [illegible] summer, visiting creatures come up [illegible] from the edge of the Barrier; seals, [illegible] the savage specimen of fighting [illegible] bird of the polar night to the in[illegible] tense heat of the tropic doldrums [illegible] on the homeward route.

[illegible] Twenty thousand feet—just the [illegible] distance to the trip—came up [illegible] years ago on a whaler, but the [illegible] rest of the film, 134,000 feet in all, [illegible] was developed undeveloped in New York [illegible] in April 9 and 10.

...Now with considerable trepida- ...ion we awaited its develop- ...ent. There is no record of so ...uch film, so long exposed and so ...ubject to heat and cold, coming ...ut in generally good shape. Nor ...as there any time—considering the ...ong process of selection, and the ...determining of some interesting and ...consecutive story—to have positive ...prints made. So, day after day, as ...this film was developed by two lab- ...oratories—one in Manhattan and ...one in Long Island—we unwound ...the negative itself on the screen of ...a little projection room. And found ...it good! The percentage of spoiled ...negative was almost negligible. The ...whole story was outlined from neg- ...ative, and then, after we had looked ...at the whole two years' work twice ...—more than 250,000 feet of black ...snow and snow-white men—Cohen ...gave the order to print about 30,000 ...feet of selected negative. And then ...came a strange sensation. We dis- ...covered all over again that snow ...is white! We had been seeing only ...black snow for so many days that ...the real thing, printed in our first ...facsimile of the genuine landscape, ...actually astonished us.

...We took, of course, only those ...dramatic details which would seem ...to make for a story of general pub- ...lic interest. But many thousands of ...feet of this film, of more purely ...scientific interest, remain in Par- ...amount's negative vaults, and will ...doubtless become interesting studies ...in the halls of many institutions, ...or perhaps may be shown and de- ...scribed by the admiral himself. (I'm ...told that he is already booked for ...a nation-wide lecture tour next ...winter.)

...We had one spectator, through ...every foot of all this unending neg- ...ative.

...In a plain kitchen chair in front ...of the editing desk sat a quiet lit- ...tle woman, demurely but smartly ...dressed, who was interested in every ...shot, no matter how trivial or how ...repetitious.

...And I often thought, as I looked ...down on the brim of her tight lit- ...tle Park-avenue hat, that she had ...one distinction that no other Amer- ...ican woman has or perhaps will ...have in our day—a great new land, ...as large as a quarter of the whole ...United States, bears her name and ...will continue to bear it through re- ...corded time.

...With all of the pressure exerted to ...produce pictures which will be finan- ...cial successes, the struggle of the ...artist to express himself in the film ...industry as in other endeavors will ...always bring forward now and then ...a picture commanding the admira- ...tion of fastidious critics, she de- ...clares.

..."It is true that most of the splen- ...did pictures that have measured up ...to the highest artistic standards ...have been behind when the gross ...receipts were counted," said Miss ...King, "and many people feel that ...sooner or later the impulse to make ...such productions will cease to exist. ...It would certainly be unfortunate ...if that were true, but it would be ...as reasonable to have expected ...Chopin to quit writing music be- ...cause he couldn't sell it.

CITY'S HISTORY IN GOLDEN BOOK

Store's Message Recounts Days of Pueblo

Fiftieth Anniversary Will be Celebrated

Sales Event Outlined for Golden Jubilee

BY OLIVE GRAY

If to your door by mail has been delivered that Golden Book, let your thought revert to the pueblo days of Los Angeles, when mail was yours only by paying a visit to the tiny postoffice, down by the Plaza. Recollection may have been aroused by the historic series, "La Reina de Los Angeles—1880," when, as recorded there our city was "A pueblo colorful, sunny, contented, awaiting its destiny." And now: in 1930, "A world city of homes and commerce—vivid—vigorous—dominant—with destiny fulfilled."

Thus runs the message of that great store whose history has been synchronous with that of our Los Angeles; for Barker Brothers, in celebrating the Golden Anniversary, is epitomizing the magic of this city.

When Los Angeles was a pueblo, Barker Brothers was a little store, filling the needs of those citizens; and now, one of the greatest institutions in our country—yes, doubtless singular of its kind in all the world, this establishment still is providing the homes of its day with the best that is required.

ANNIVERSARY SUMMER

Nourished and sustained by the citizenry, now as then, this store has during a year past been preparing to offer in appreciation of that sustenance which has afforded its growth a great fund of opportunity for this summer of its fiftieth anniversary. Factories, over a wide-spread area, have exerted utmost effort to provide merchandise of note for the occasion. Serving a double purpose in these stressful times, labor has benefited by the industry of those factories, and patrons desiring to practice economy, are assisted in so doing.

Especially helpful at the season when new homes are being set up Barker Brothers at this time, as in times of long ago, extends helping hands in the creation of new homes. How interesting it would be if we could see pictured the furniture of those pueblo days—could contrast those ancient settings with these of now! And probably, then as now, there was an uplift toward good taste and artistry, beyond the passing hour, as now this great store tends to educate the taste of patrons.

WEDDING GIFTS

The wedding gift, playing an important personal role in the making of homes, during this month of new-homing, sometimes forms a problem to those constrained to practice economy; and with this in mind, Barkers' basement, steps forward, providing an exchange service sincerely helpful. Homes become overcrowded, furniture outwears its welcome, sometimes; and how advantageous, then, to "swap" it for something novel, different! Thus this, seemingly humble department may do its share toward the new home-making, toward the wedding gifting. Every floor and section throughout this store which rightly has been named "A Los Angeles Institution," does its share in commencing a new era in the growth of our city—in projecting itself into a future of the metropolis which shall prove even more magical than has that past epoch, drawing to a close with this fiftieth year of Barkers. In one family, during all this time, Barkers are still at the helm; Mr. C. H. Barker is chairman of the board; Earl G. Barker, son of the founder, is president; Clarence A. Barker is vice-president. Reminiscent of the olden days, C. H. Barker said:

OLDEN DAYS

"The center of town was the old Baker Block near the Mexican Plaza and church. The one depot was the Southern Pacific on Fernando street near what is now considered East Los Angeles. There was not a foot of paved street anywhere and everyone went to the postoffice for their mail. From Main street to the river was covered with orange trees, vineyards and walnut groves. The principal hotels were the Pico House, the St. Charles and the St. Elmo, all of them above First street. Main street was what the name implies . . . the center of all activity. The population was 11,183.

THE POPULATION WAS 77,183

"There was not a single cafe or restaurant in town. We had street cars but they were the old single-track kind and one had to wait for the oncoming car. The Baptist Church had to move from Spring street between Fourth and Fifth to a hall on Main street near Temple because the former location was too far out to get an audience.

"In 1880, Mr. O. T. Barker, the father of C. H. Barker, in company with a Mr. Mueller bought a thirty-five-foot lot at 113-115 North Spring street and erected a two-story building. The firm was called Barker and Mueller and was the beginning of the Barker Brothers of today."

During the Golden Jubilee of 1930, Barker Brothers' present thrift prices in all departments of their great establishment, where a stock valued at over $2,000,000, now is offered.

The New in Stores & Homes

Novelties, Ideas, and Suggestions

By OLIVE GRAY

Oh, let's each constitute ourselves guardians of the forests! Each perform a part in straining those whose "love of nature" consists in viewing her beauties through the long end of a bottle, rather than through the short end of a microscope. In the wake of such, stalks destruction by fire and ravage by wanton hands. Dwellers in and lovers of the great open spaces, dread the week-end visits of those weak-minded marauders.

"Dowdy?"

It is told that, in a recent fashionable sports event in England, women wore ground-sweeping trains, displayed wasp waists and high-choking whale-boned collars. Declared to be quite mid-Victorian in all. Are we, then, to see couturial Paris transported by airplane to London? Or shall we revise interpretation of the long-scoffed term "mid-Victorian?" Or study anew the good old word "dowdy?"

Hats of Linen

Linen has broken into millinery and is endearing itself in many ways. Hats wholly of linen sometimes have bands of gingham; or perky bows in plaids. Either in a single color, the entire hat, or sectionalized cleverly in two or more colors, these linen hats are most summery.

Wide Taped

Bias tape, that accommodating commodity, now comes in broader numbers. For fashioning flowers and modernistic patterns upon pillows and other household accessories, this tape is largely used.

Monogram Cutouts

Monograms cut from a contrasting material form the sole ornament to many sports suits. Either posed upon the pocket of the blouse, set upon the topside of the sleeve, or otherwise ingeniously placed, a monogram of this character, is chiefly effective.

Salad Cuts

Among the fiat silver appropriate as wedding gifts are sets, silver forks and knives, for the salad course. Oh, yes! Knives, mind you! For hear ye! It is correct now to use a knife with the salad. You actually may cut the lettuce, instead of "wrastling" it with the fork.

Bouquet Trimmed

One of the most adorable frocks recently shown in exclusive collection, was of ciel blue chiffon, all-overed in hand-made bouquets of rosebuds and forget-me-nots.

Others Bouquet-Embroidered

Other chiffon gowns were all-overed in tiny bouquets hand-embroidered. A brown, in the tobac shade, had bright flowers in vivid contrast, for enlivenment. The bouquets, in either cases, were set at intervals throughout the entire garment.

Strings of Powder-Puffs

Strings of eider-down powder-puffs, in many differing colors are to suspend beside the dressing mirror. These form an enchanting bit of color which, properly placed, reflects in the looking-glass.

And on Felts

Piercing, also, is patterned upon summer hats of felt, also lending a refreshing coolness, as well as a so-different effect.

Silhouette Hankies

Gift handkerchiefs are given a quaint and effective ornamentation by means of tiny silhouettes in black embroidery. Godeyish figures, old-timey carriages, and other reminiscent "pictures" are used, thus lending personality to the 'kerchiefs.

Twins and Semi's

A revival of the fashion in dressing twin girls alike, affords many a pretty picture in the downtown district. Sisters, some in twos or threes, wearing frocks of the same material and cut, also, are interesting. Two girls, thus clad, recently proceeded along the broad aisles of a big store, using dance-steps instead of the prescribed sedate walk. Evidently, they were inspired by the brightness of the surroundings, their tiny feet keeping time to the tune of their high spirits. And, their happiness served to enliven the onlookers.

Glass Sets

Quite wedding-gifty are the new sets of cups and saucers in glass. Not only are the shapes graceful, but the colors are entrancing. Flower cups, in glass of the deeper tints, old blues, reds and amber—are set upon standards of broadly carven silver; most quaint in appearance, reminiscent of the days of our forebears.

Actress Plays Leading Roles in Two Years

Dorothy Christy, who plays the part of Lady Amy Duckworth in "So This is London" at the Carthay Circle, grew tired of Junior League dances and bridge only two years ago.

But then she did the unheard-of thing—refused a chance Florenz Ziegfeld offered her, because she had decided on her goal, the drama. However Schwab and Mandel made her an understudy in one of their companies. But soon she was out of the zero class and playing roles in such Broadway winners as "Follow Thru" and "New Moon."

Having made this citadel she went after the even more impregnable one of Hollywood; took it by exhibiting her talent in the shop window of a stage play.

Director's Ego Seen as Danger to Productions

Too much directing is as perilous to the success of a picture as too little. An overzealous director can do harm to a production. These are the opinions of Albert Rogell, who has been engaged in making celluloid drama for more than ten years.

"It is particularly true in these days, when so many first-rate artists have been brought to the industry, particularly actors," he declares. "The danger of directorial ego hampering the genius and cramping the technique of actors ought to be recognized in every studio, by every man who undertakes to direct," he points out.

Society of Cinemaland

by Myra Nye

BY MYRA NYE

Ever beloved of Cinemaland fans, Irene Rich was the central figure in the gala premiere at Carthay Circle Theater Thursday night. In the absence of Will Rogers, who is still in New England and who is the chief actor in "So This is London" Miss Rich attracted much attention.

Gowned in royal blue chiffon she wore a corsage of curiously shaded orchids appearing as though red wine had been spilled upon them. The exotic flowers were mingled with maidenhair fern and lilies of the valley to form a corsage reaching from shoulder to waist and setting off Miss Rich's titian hair (yes it is titian now) and her dainty charm.

David Blankenhorn escorted his wife, who in private life is known as Mrs. David Blankenhorn. With her also were her two young daughters just returned from fashionable schools in the East. Eighteen guests were in their party, the greater number of whom were friends from San Francisco.

Important figures at the premiere, which was a typically Hollywoodian first night with perhaps fewer star gazers in the soap-box loges, were Mrs. Rogers and Will Rogers, Jr., the latter serving as one of the master of ceremonies at the microphone. There were present also Maureen O'Sullivan, that charmingly natural new figure on the horizon, in the beginning of star ascendency; Frank Albertson, Mary Forbes, Dorothy Christie and others of the cast perhaps who were not called to my attention.

Dinner Party Given

Leonard Silliman, New York dancer who recently established a studio in Hollywood, entertained in his new residence on Sweetzer avenue with a brilliant dinner party. The party was in honor of Mortimer Offner, a visitor from the eastern metropolis. Mr. Offner is in Hollywood to photograph local celebrities for Vanity Fair and other magazines. Among the guests were Mrs. Maxwell Anderson, Viola Brothers Shore, Helen Johnson, Edward Eliscu, the Sisters "G," Eugene O'Brien, Patsy Ruth Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Blum (Carmel Myers,) George Cukor, Warburton Guilbert, Lent Stengel, Edith Huntsman, Roy Radabaugh, Mrs. Paul Sloane, Dick Hunt, David Lewis, Jean Green and Robert Gilkie.

Dinner parties at the Sea Breeze Beach Club have been given recently with Mrs. Ernest Westmore (Ethlyne Clair) and Lita Chevret as honor guests.

Russell Mack Again Selects Frances Upton

When Russell Mack, directing Bodie Quillan in "Night Work" for Pathe, selected Frances Upton for an important comedy role in the picture, giving this talented comedienne of "Whoopee" her first opportunity in talking pictures, it was the second time that he figured prominently in the girl's theatrical career.

Mack selected Miss Upton for her first comedy and singing role on the stage when he produced "Just About Girls," a Broadway musical comedy. She first came to his attention as a chorus girl in "Sky Girl," a show in which Mack was featured. Since then she has been featured in several Broadway hits including "Ziegfeld Follies," "Twinkle-Twinkle" and "Whoopee."

Sunday School Lesson

The International Sunday School Lesson for June 29 is a Review of Matthew's Life of Christ—Matt. xvi, 16.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

What makes public opinion, and shapes national character? Many forces; but chiefly the thoughts that people think and the company they keep. Just now we are recalling the possible influence upon the United States and Canada of the simple, unheralded, unexploited fact that for the past six months most of the Sunday schools, numbering in all some 20,000,000 persons, have been giving thought to the life and teachings of Jesus, especially in their kingdom aspect, as narrated by Matthew.

"Run with wolves and you will learn to howl," says the old proverb. Walk with heroes and you will catch the contagion of heroism. Keep company with the holy and holiness will become real and possible to you. Make Christ a companion, and Christ-likeness will naturally grow in your life. Because the Sunday schools have been companying with Jesus for this half-year, thinking His thoughts, contemplating His life, acquiring His viewpoint, it must inevitably ensue that nobler, broader, diviner standards of character and conduct will be produced, to exercise their influence upon the nation and its problems.

TAKING HOLD BY THE HANDLE

That is what our troubled time needs. We shall never get hold of life's great problems by the handle until we realize that the one essential factor is the sort of people we produce. Only the right kind of men and women can create the right kind of society. Pacts and treaties and covenants and courts and leagues are only of secondary importance in national and international affairs: the real thing is the state of mind of the people who use them, or disregard them.

So it is the most practicable kind of statecraft and of patriotism to bend our major energies toward developing citizens of good will, of integrity, of Christlikeness. Thus, what is learned in Sunday school may be of more importance than what is enacted in legislative halls. Disraeli once said that he was "on the side of the angels;" and the angels' prescription for world peace, as announced in song above the little hills of Bethlehem, was "Peace on earth, Among Men of Good Will."

Some folk are so crazily keen on being "modern" that they want a quicker, shorter route to a better world than this old-fashioned way which heralded the coming of the Christ. Since the war, we have been witnessing an amazing vogue of brand-new philosophies, as well as the creation of prodigious new international political machinery, in our panicky "Get-good-quick" efforts.

SCRAP-HEAP FOR NEW CULTS

Consider the host of professors—and, ominously, it seems no longer an evidence of wisdom or sound sense to be a college professor—who acclaimed "behaviorism" as the new and master philosophy for our era. Behaviorism, which reduced life to a mere matter of muscular reactions, had its noisy day; but now already it is being ostentatiously chucked onto the scrap-heap by the professors themselves. (Its discoverer, and chief apostle, has a job, significantly, in an advertising agency!) The faces of professional philosophers who indorsed it are blackened. And sane thinkers are pointing anew to the tested and simple teachings of Jesus as the really workable philosophy of life. The Book our fathers counted a sufficient guide is coming freshly into its own.

Akin to the farce of behaviorism is the cult of "humanism," already split up into half a dozen interpretations. A New York City preacher, who got too broad for even a "liberal" pulpit, is attempting to found a church of humanism and I noticed that his last Sunday's topic, as advertised, was "Mencken on God." Thus does folly peter out to absurdity.

Gandhi confesses the power of the teachings of Jesus in his life, and pays tribute to Him as a new Leader of India. Sun Yat Sen, who, though dead, is still the most vital personality in China, was a Christian; and his "three principles" are his interpretation of the Gospel for his nation. Russia is attempting brotherhood without fatherhood, democracy without theocracy; but close observers of that realm of chaos and fear say that they see signs that the real transformation of once-called "Holy Russia" is to come when that naturally religious people turn in truth, as they will, to Christ and His teachings.

WAVES AND THE TIDE

Often we cannot see the tide for the waves; and so do not realize how widespread and effective is the power of Christ in our time. What means the amazing popularity of sacred music and religious messages on the radio? Or the vogue of religious articles in newspapers and magazines? Or of religious books? Or of motion pictures dealing with religious themes? Something of Matthew's wide vision and deep perception to the significance of Jesus is needed to enable us to understand our own day.

All that the seers and leaders of our day seek and serve; all that lovers of men and prophets of a new social order desire; all that true statesmen strain to bring to pass, is comprehended within the Gospel of the Kingdom which the Sunday-schools have been studying in the pages of Matthew. The enthronement of Christ and His beneficent law in the hearts of men creates the kind of world that all forward-looking people covet.

Perhaps if this faith which we learn from Matthew's Gospel were not so simple—if it were cluttered up with the jargon of a new and modern philosophy—we should accept it more readily as the master word for contemporary needs. Nevertheless, it is the plain and revealed will of God, made clear by and in Christ. God does not want to make it hard for His children to know and to trust Him.

CANDIDATES TO SPEAK

Candidates for the office of County Tax Assessor will be presented to the Woman's City Club at the regular 1 p.m. meeting tomorrow when Mrs. Robert D. Shields, newly elected president, will preside. In addition to these brief speeches, candidates for Superior Court, Offices Nos. 5, 6 and 9, will speak.

PRISON LIFE PLAY GIVEN PRAISE HERE

"The Last Mile" Said to be Indorsed by People in All Walks of Life

Seldom before has a play caused such widespread discussion as "The Last Mile," drama now at the Majestic Theater under the direction of Lillian Albertson. High State, county and city officials have indorsed the play with unusual enthusiasm and people in all walks of life have recommended the drama as most powerful, it is said.

The most recent dignitary to praise John Wexley's dramatic efforts is Capt. Clem Peoples, chief jailer of Los Angeles county, and a principal figure in law enforcement in this community. In a written indorsement of "The Last Mile," Capt. Peoples said in part: "I think the play very well acted and very well written. It is also my belief that this play will do more to do away with capital punishment than any I have ever seen. Personally, I am not in sympathy with capital punishment nor do I think anyone has the right to take the life of another except in self-defense."

"The Last Mile" is called one of the few plays of recent years to so expertly embody entertainment, moral crusade and gripping story. Its reception at the Majestic is indicative of the public favor it has won.

Producer Will Make Bow in Comedy Drama

"Molly Magdalene," new comedy in three acts by Crane Wilbur, opens at the Mayan Monday evening, the 30th inst., under the direction of Al Rosen. This will mark Rosen's debut as a producer.

The story of "Molly Magdalene" reveals the adventures of a burlesque troupe which lands on a middle-western farm as the result of a train accident. The contrast of the yokels with the Broadway show troupers develops the plot.

Pantages Shows O. Henry Tale

O. Henry's story, "A Double-Dyed Deceiver," is on the screen under the title of "The Texan," featuring Gary Cooper, heads this week's bill at the new Pantages Hollywood.

Fay Wray, seen opposite Cooper in "The First Kiss" and "Legion of the Condemned," has the leading feminine role.

The accompanying stage presentation is Fanchon and Marco's "Seeing Double" idea, presenting ten sets of twins and greatly elaborated with additional dancing girls and a vocal chorus. Slim Martin and the Greater Pantages Orchestra plays "A Hodge-Podge of Old-Fashioned Hits."

This program will close Wednesday.

Four Thousand Costumes Used for Film Revue

According to production figures, 4000 costumes were created by Herman Rosse, the theatrical designer, for "The King of Jazz," now showing at the Palace Theater, and are seen in Technicolor photography.

Approximately half of the total number of costumes were required for the "Melting Pot" sequence, one of the eight spectacular numbers of this Universal superfeature. Among the ensembles included were typical regalias of Spain, Italy, Germany, England, France, Scotland and Ireland.

"Hokum Fiesta" Slated Tonight

A "hokum fiesta," introducing prominent show comedians, film stars, song writers and visiting celebrities, will be staged at George Olsen's new club, Culver City, this evening as the fourth of the series of hokum nights.

Tonight's fiesta will feature George Olsen and his music; George Murphy and Juliette Johnson, offering their "Harlem Blues;" Murphy and Jack Shutta, in their new skit, "Ambassadors of Hokum;" Babe Kane, doing her "sugar-foot rhythm;" Jack Lester, the "Malibu" stepper; Dave Franklin and his educated piano; McCune Sisters, popular entertainers from the Rainbow Gardens, Chicago, and Olsen's ensemble of sixteen show girls.

ART MEMORIAL TO BE UNVEILED

"Fountain of Honor" Fete Planned by Ebell

Story of Sculpture Told by Retiring President

Other Details of Program Also Set Forth

BY MYRA NYE

Every capable president of every large and truly influential club makes her own specific contribution to the club life of the State. Occasionally such a president is a donor not only in organized women's circles, but to the whole society. Such is the case with Mrs. Alfred Bennett Cooke, retiring president of the Los Angeles Ebell. Her contribution is as a patron of the fine art of painting and her promotion, here in the Southland, of that art.

MRS. A. BENNET COOKE

From the beginning, shortly after the World War, Mrs. Cooke has been the chairman of the committee to choose a memorial for those service men of that war, a memorial that should be a thing of beauty to adorn the clubhouse, first intended for the club home on Figueroa street and latterly for the magnificent new structure of Ebell on Wilshire Boulevard. Then during her regime as president, Mrs. Cooke instituted regular salons for art and promoted better exhibits in the clubhouse than ever before.

MRS. GRANTLAND S. LONG

FOUNTAIN FETE PLANNED

Now as a climax a Fountain-of-Honor fete with Mrs. Grantland Seton Long as chairman of the day is to be given Monday, the 30th inst., the closing program of the season. Once called a memorial, the fountain has been renamed by Mrs. Long as the "Fountain of Honor," to pay tribute to the living as well as the dead; to be a happy expression, art of high order and an everlasting loveliness for all who throng the portals of Ebell—"something happy to live with" as Mrs. Long expresses it.

So important is this "Fountain of Honor" considered that Mrs. Cooke in her annual president's message gave most of her time to it. She told how originally Julia Bracken Wendt, sculptor, began the designs of a fountain and statue for the old clubhouse, how subsequently with the new structure these plans, according to Mrs. Wendt, did not coincide, how Mrs. Wendt on account of the illness of Mr. Wendt and her own ill health was compelled—much to the regret of the committee—to give up the work even after she had been paid for the name plates and the wall model first submitted; how the committee then chose a younger man, Henry Lyon, whose finished work is to be unveiled in appropriate and delightful ceremony a week from tomorrow. Now the figure is in plaster and later will be cast in bronze.

Others on the early committee in addition to Mrs. Cooke and Mrs. Long were Mrs. W. S. Bartlett, Mrs. W. E. Bullis and Mrs. Randall Hutchinson.

FIGURE EXPLAINED

Mrs. Sydney Temple describes the "Fountain of Art" and tells of its creator. "The figure of a woman, the embodiment of determination, strength and beauty, is the symbol which the sculptor, Henry Lyon, has conceived to express his ideal. In her left hand she holds the flag unfurled, the folds of which float back of her in a protective suggestion. The right hand is holding aloft the lamp of learning. It is a majestic figure of hope alive with tenderness."

Henry Lyon was born in Fresno in the lovely valley of San Joaquin, August 11, 1900, and he was born a sculptor, according to Mrs. Temple, possessing, she says, the innate knowledge of creation, which only genius possesses. He received the greater part of his technical instruction in the Otis Art Institute under the guidance of Mrs. Wendt and H. McDonald Wright, later going to New York for a period of study of sculpture.

Mr. Lyon has done the two fountain figures at the Carthay Circle Theater: "The Spirit of '49," and a portrait statue of Mr. Carthay's father, a historical figure of early California. He is depicted panning gold. Both of these works have attracted wide and favorable comment. These are only two of many notable works of the young sculptor.

In addition to the unveiling, other details of the program, which, conducted after the manner of Mrs. Long with her unfailing good taste, promise beauty and inspiration, are: "A Parade of Nations," directed by Francesco Lupo; "The Americans Come," sung by Otto Ploets; the presentation to Ebell of the work of art and the acceptance by the new president, Mrs. Charles E. Crail; address, "The Spirit of Ebell," by Mrs. Bartlett, whose charmingly literary value in writing and whose devotion to Ebell are sure to give inspiration.

Little James French, charming son of a member, will unveil the figure and ex-service men as guard of honor will be in attendance. Jose Arias Band will give the martial numbers. The unveiling will take place in the patio, and in the auditorium will be given the address.

After the program, which begins in the patio at 2:30 p.m., bridge may be enjoyed in the solarium and refreshments will be served on the Roof Garden deck.

FRATERNITY CONVENTION SCHEDULED

International Organization Opens First Sessions on Coast Tomorrow

For the first time since 1916 the biennial convention of Alpha Phi International Fraternity is to be held on the Pacific Coast, beginning tomorrow and ending Friday at Mount Baker Lodge, Washington.

Of the ten founders at Syracuse University in 1872, four are now living. Of the latter Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, one of the most brilliant and efficient women of the country is one; and she will as usual attend the conclave.

MRS. ROBERT J. BURDETTE

Alpha Phi has been a leader in the world of Greek women. It was the first woman's fraternity to own its own chapter house at Syracuse in 1886. Also it was the first sorority, as these societies were then called, to have a visiting delegate system, the first to establish a $50,000 endowment fund, the first to publish a history, and it called together through its representatives the first International Sorority Conference in 1902, which later changed its name to National Panhellenic Congress.

Especially worthy of note among the earlier members in addition to Mrs. Burdette is Miss Frances E. Willard of W. C. T. U. fame and the only woman in the Hall of Fame in Washington. Miss Willard was dean of women at Northwestern University where there is a woman's building named in her honor. She was national president of Alpha Phi in 1890-91. Mrs. Martha Foote Crow, another distinguished founder, is an author, poet, was former head of the English department at Wellesley and dean of women at Syracuse University.

Among Southern California Alpha Phis who have gained distinction are Mrs. George O. Robinson of Pasadena, a philanthropist of note; and Florence Ryerson of Hollywood, author.

Plans for the convention beginning tomorrow are alluring and undoubtedly will attract a large number of Alpha Phis from all over the country. Mrs. William E. Hooper will be the delegate from the Southern California alumnae chapter and Miss Betty Franz, daughter of Dr. Shepherd Ivory Franz, head of the psychology department at U.C.L.A., will represent Beta Delta Chapter.

Convention at Beach Slated

Delta Phi Upsilon, national honorary fraternity of professional kindergartners will conduct its seventh annual convention at Hermosa Beach Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The founders of the society are: Miss Adamae Brooks, Miss Cloyde Duvall Daselle, Miss Helen Knudson, Miss Lulu Pickett, Miss Phoebe Anne Mathewson, Mrs. Winona Bassett-Stevens and Mrs. Marjorie Tuet-Loomis, who met for the purpose of organization at Broadoaks, Pasadena, January 8, 1923.

Alumnae associations which may be formed with five or more members and chartered by the grand council have been organized in Pasadena, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago and Illinois. Each one of these will be represented at the convention.

The aim of Delta Phi Upsilon is "to promote professional attainments and to set a high goal of achievement before the undergraduate students." The fraternity is at the present time engaged in raising a national scholarship fund to be used by some member for further study and training in kindergarten-primary education.

Catholic Group Names Officers

Mrs. Charles T. O'Reilly last week resigned as first vice-president of the Catholic Woman's Club to be made chief executive. Those elected to serve with her are: Mrs. James F. Breen, first vice-president, appointed to serve one year; Mrs. J. Selby Spurck, second vice-president; Mrs. Herbert Quinn, recording secretary, and Mrs. Edward M. Breen, corresponding secretary.

At a joint meeting of the new and old boards, Mrs. James G. Donavan was presented with a past president's emblem. A week from tomorrow Mrs. Donavan will entertain the members of her board at her home, 160 South Beachwood Drive, at luncheon.

Club Officers to be Installed

Installing its new officers Tuesday of this week the Tuesday Afternoon Club of Glendale will close the season for regular meetings the last Tuesday of the month. Those who are to be installed are: Mrs. H. C. Vandewater, president; Mrs. Harry Levey, first vice-president; Mrs. J. Humboldt Emens, second vice-president; Mrs. Walter G. Wells, secretary; Mrs. W. B. Davis, Mrs. Homer Lockwood, Mrs. William W. Pierce, directors. Mrs. Howard Y. Sherwood, president of the district, will be the installing officer.

Mrs. Vandewater succeeds Mrs. Robert C. White, Jr., whose regime has been marked with signal success.

FESTIVITIES CLOSED BY BREAKFAST

California Women Give Final Entertainment of Season

Gladioli and larkspur which adorned the banquet hall of the Elks' Temple provided a typical California setting for the bridge breakfast given as the final entertainment of the season by the California Women of the Golden West on Friday, the 13th, inst.

Mrs. Betty Gilmore, the president of the club, presided and introduced the guests of honor and the members of the committee who were in charge of the program. Mrs. Harry Waldron Michael was the chairman of a brilliant fashion show in which members of the club, under the direction of Miss Selma Paley, served as models. A pleasing whistling solo was contributed by Katherine Spangler with Verna Alvey at the piano, and Miss Kyo Inouye, who was sponsored by the California Women of the Golden West in the recent contest for young singers conducted by the Los Angeles District of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, presented two vocal solo numbers. She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Pauline Suski.

The Spanish fiesta pageant, which is to be held under the auspices of the California Women at the Ambassador Hotel and grounds on September 4, was the keynote of the table speeches. Mrs. Joseph Bonhaus, general chairman of the pageant, which is to be an annual affair in celebration of the founding and birthday anniversary of Los Angeles, told of plans, and support was pledged by representatives of various civic and club organizations who were present.

Another feature of the luncheon was the installation of three new members of the executive board, Mrs. C. Leroy Pitts, Mrs. Mox Dehner and Mrs. John Wesley Buckles, by Mrs. Oda Faulconer, the legal adviser of the club.

Special guests of honor were Mayor and Mrs. John C. Porter and Mrs. Howard U. Sherwood, president of the Los Angeles district of the California Federation of Women's Clubs.

RESIGNATION ACTED ON AT REGULAR MEETING

The resignation of Mrs. Maynard Force Thayer from the D.A.R. was not presented nor acted upon at a secret and special meeting of the board as previously stated incorrectly, according to Mrs. Frank P. Phelps Thoms, state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution. It was acted on by the board at a regular monthly board meeting at which a large number of other matters were disposed of as well as this resignation, Mrs. Thoms states.

CLUB PLANS JINKS

At the Deauville Beach Club the annual jinks of the Republican Study Club will be enjoyed Tuesday beginning with a breakfast at 11:30 a.m. There will be contests, games of chance, fortunes, card games with prizes presented. Mrs. Harry Chamberlain is president of the club.

GRADUATION CONDUCTED

Seniors from Widely Separated Sections Receive Diplomas from Foothill Girls' School

Seventeen seniors from widely separated sections of the United States were graduated by the Girls' Collegiate School Friday evening a week ago in the beautiful outdoor Garden Theater at the foothill school near Glendora.

Those receiving diplomas were Miss Charlotte Martin, Sheffield, Ala.; Miss Rose Coolidge, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Miss Petrea Conselman, St. Louis, Mo.; Miss Betty Hart, Bronxville, N. Y.; Miss Royse Shirk, Peru, Ind.; Miss Dorothy West, Denver, Colo.; and from California: Miss Marguerite Tickle, Carmel; Miss Hasel Heinecke, San Clemente; Miss Jane Wall, Riverside; Miss Alice Ayars, Glendale; Miss Frances Gorman, Miss Margaret Hull, Miss June Bradford and Miss Joyce Sloane and Miss Betty Zane Grey, Pasadena; Miss Marjorie Faust and Miss Dorothy Stevenson, Los Angeles.

Miss Betty Zane Grey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zane Grey, brought to a brilliant close her five-year course at Girls' Collegiate by presenting her prize senior essay and, also, by having a poem set to music and played by Miss Lois Mills for the occasion. She expects to follow her father's footsteps in writing and will enter U.S.C. in the fall.

Miss Alice Ayars, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Ayars of Glendale, vice-president of the Student Body Government Association, and prominent in athletics and dramatics, is being graduated with honors and will continue her education at U.S.C., as will also Miss Joyce Sloane, daughter of Mrs. Gwendolyn Sloane of Altadena, and a leader in school activities.

Miss Dorothy Stevenson will accompany her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Stevenson, to Toronto, Can., for the summer.

Miss June Bradford, daughter of Ruth Meixner Bradford, also a graduate and president of the alumnae association, is another U.S.C. entrant. She is the champion horsewoman of the school, and active in dramatics.

Miss Carol Mills, principal, gave the commencement address and recalled the love and service which Miss Parsons and Miss Dennen poured out for the school during their thirty-eight years as principals.

Edna St. Vincent Millay's play, "The Lamp and the Bell," was presented Thursday night in the outdoor theater. Those in the cast were as follows:

Jane Wall, Joyce Sloane, Alice Ayars, Marjorie Faust, Marguerite Tickle, Meta Boone, Priscilla Metcalf, Frances Leinau, Augusta Tilden, Hasel Heinecke, Dorothy West, Petrea Conselman, Betty Zane Grey, Rose Coolidge, June Bradford, Dorothy Stevenson, Charlotte Martin, Frances Gorman, Rosalind Metcalf, Phyllis Vosburg, Betty Wold, Phyllis Pinney, Jane Rice, Eleanor Jacoby, Nancy Reid, Mary Olive Todd, Lillian Jackson, Beryl Elfendahl, Gretchen Hauschild, Janet Vosburg, Abbie De Forest, Elaine St. Johns, Louise Evans, Eloise Lott, Doris Leinau, Nancynell Swaffield, Valerie Laurie and Betty Coen.

Benefit Party Given at Beach

Members and their friends of the Las Damas Angelenas will attend a beach party to be given this afternoon and evening at the Hollywood Riviera on the Pacific near Santa Monica.

Mrs. David Ayre, president of this Spanish-speaking organization, is supervising plans for the outing, being given in the interest of charity. There will be special music for dancing at the Riviera pavilion, swimming and other sports. A real Mexican dinner will be served at 5 p.m.

Assisting Mrs. Ayre are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Francesco Lupo, Mmes. Hortencia de Gillespi, Manuel L. Ayulo, Maria Luisa Milby, Maria de Morgan, Defina C. De Munos, Joseph Brown, Anna Spoider, E. Peres Gil, Nelle Elescondo, Luisa Wickersham, M. Egas, Ursula de la Vega, Josephina Almada, Natalia Campos, N. Zubieta; Misses Rayela Vasquez, Sara Gonzales, Maria Luisa Leahy, Beatriz Ruiz, Beatriz Tarriba, Celia Carrillo, Adelita Pina (of San Diego,) Beatriz Guzman, Defina C. De Munoz, Esther de la Vega, Laura de la Puente, Maria Newman, Maria Crispo and Cristina Tona.

CALIFORNIA DAUGHTERS CELEBRATE

Luncheon Affair Held on Second Anniversary of Parlor's Founding

At a delightful luncheon affair in the Studio Club of Hollywood the California Parlor, No. 247, Native Daughters of the Golden West, celebrated the second anniversary of its organization Thursday a week ago.

The large salon of the clubhouse was bright with rare water lilies in the pastel shades. The appointments of the luncheon were in accord with the decorations. Mrs. Isabella Granz was chairman of the committee in charge and she was assisted by Mrs. Ralph Tuttle, Mrs. A. O. Evans, president of the parlor; Mrs. Arthur Wright, Mrs. Edward H. Anthony and Mrs. Charles C. Jacobsen.

Presiding at an impromptu program, Mrs. Evans presented after the lunch hour; Mrs. Marian De Boulileau, who has just returned to Los Angeles after six years of study in Paris and New York and who interpreted two lovely eurythmic dances; Miss Anita Wright, accompanist; Miss Kitty Travis, pianist; Mrs. W. K. Chambers, dramatic reader; Mrs. George Steinike in a solo dance number from Mexico, and Mrs. Marybelle Chapman appearing in Spanish singing numbers.

Miss Anita Wright is one of the younger native daughters who adds luster to the organization of women descended from early Californians. She is the daughter of the junior past president, Mrs. Arthur Wright, and won a scholarship at Mills College which gave her an opportunity for a trip abroad where she studied piano.

An honor guest of the day was Miss Grace S. Stoermer, past grand president, and deputy district grand president for the parlor during its two years of activities, and who instituted the parlor in the Roosevelt Hotel.

The parlor now has a membership of 190, and sent four delegates to Grand Parlor which convened in Oakland last week, the conclave ending yesterday. They are Mrs. A. O. Evans, Mrs. C. E. Noerenberg, Mrs. Ralph Tuttle and Mrs. T. O. Duffy.

Mrs. Herman Edward Hertz of Hollywood was the charter president of the local parlor, Mrs. Wright following with two terms preceding Mrs. Evans's incumbency. Mrs. C. E. Noerenberg is the president-elect to be installed the first meeting in July.

Another event of July sponsored by the parlor is the international breakfast in the Hollywood Bowl, July 18. Mrs. Wright is chairman of the affair.

JUNIOR GUILD TO PRESENT PROGRAM

The Junior Artists' Theater Guild will entertain members and friends at a matinee program at Barker Brothers' Auditorium next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. Several well-known juveniles will appear. Including Mary Alice Ross, Dorothy Perry, Louise Kaufman, Ellen Roth and Leah Madison. Several numbers will be given by a group of Maglin Kiddies, according to Mrs. S. M. Muller, chairman of the program.

BANQUET BRILLIANT FUNCTION

Trojan Semicentennial Celebrated in Town and Gown Club Affair

Among all the delightful affairs celebrating the semicentennial of the founding of the University of Southern California, none of them surpassed in interest the banquet given in the Sala d' Oro of the Biltmore Hotel by the Town and Gown Club, the women's organization, whose chief executive is the wife of the president of the university, Mrs. Rufus B. Von KleinSmid.

Mrs. R.B. von KleinSmid.

The Co-ed Sweetheart Revue, showing college girls from the days of the forties, the gay nineties, earlier and later, was refreshingly novel. Beautiful U.S.C. sorority girls appeared in hooped skirts, in bustles, in tall hats, plumed hats, shirt waists, bicycle skirts, charming party frocks of long ago, as well as in the modern garb of today, which suffered badly in contrast with the quaint beauty of other days, especially as regards evening party frocks.

It was the evening before the distinguished Chinese actor, Mei Lan Fang, left Los Angeles and he made one of those courtly and courteous speeches characteristic of the polite Chinese. In it he complimented the university and its president on the great achievements of the institution of learning.

Greetings were brought to the large assemblage around the banquet tables by youthful Mrs. Warren Bradley Bovard, charming in a gown of delft blue. The Trojan Band enlivened the occasion with selections at intervals throughout the evening, and the singing of both the boys' and girls' glee clubs was delightful.

Phi Mu Epsilon quintette presented the feature music of the occasion. The members were: John Chickaneff, first violin; Alvin Lieschen, second violin; Evan Whillock, viola; Kenneth Winstead, bass, and Sumner Prindle, piano.

Mrs. Sloan-Orcutt, regal in bearing and magnificent evening dress, presented the friendship cups of Town and Gown to Mrs. Von KleinSmid for gown and to Mrs. George O. Robinson for town, the latter, president of the board of women councilors of the club. Each of the trio made a graceful speech.

Dr. Frederick Warde was at his best in his lecture "Fifty Years of Make Believe."

The outstanding musical feature of the whole evening was the group of songs by Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, contralto, recently from the Metropolitan Opera, New York.

A long list of the first social leaders of the community and those of the higher professions represented the patrons and patronesses of the brilliant affair.

TEA OPENS NEW YEAR OF LEAGUE

State Leader of Women Voters Among Honored Guests Tuesday

The Los Angeles League of Women Voters celebrates the beginning of their new official year with a tea Tuesday afternoon, at 4 p.m., at the home of Mrs. Henry H. Lissner, 2156 South Hobart Boulevard. Among the honor guests will be State President Mrs. J. C. Whitman of San Francisco. It will mark the beginning of Mrs. O. Sheppard Barnum's term as president and her renewal of activity in club work after a two years' absence abroad.

Special honor guests will be the Los Angeles women memorialised on the honor roll of the National League of Women Voters. These are Mrs. Frank A. Gibson, Mrs. D. O. Stephens and Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz. With them will be Mrs. J. O. Macpherson of Pasadena, who was memorialized by the Michigan league.

The women members of the California Commission for the Study of Education Problems will also be honor guests. These are Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, chairman, Mrs. J. C. Whitman and Mrs. Maynard Force Thayer.

Mrs. Whitman, Mrs. Dorsey and Mrs. Macpherson will discuss the progress of the League to Prevent War, is made clear at the recent convention.

The tea is in charge of the hospitality committee, Mrs. Olivero C. Bryant, chairman, Mrs. Arthur Wier, Mrs. J. L. Criswell, and Mrs. Seward Simons.

MISS STOERMER BACK FROM SAN FRANCISCO

Last week Miss Grace S. Stoermer, assistant vice-president of the Bank of Italy National Trust and Savings Association, and also western regional vice-president of the Association of Bank Women, was in San Francisco attending the meeting of the California commission, representing National Statuary Hall, of which she is a member, having been appointed by the Governor. The commission's duty is to complete the details in connection with the placing of the statues of Junipero Serra and Thomas Starr King in Statuary Hall in Washington, D. C.

GARDEN TEA PLANNED

With Mrs. Fletcher Ford as chairman of the art section of the Friday Morning Club, the department is giving a garden tea the 26th inst. from 2 to 5 o'clock. The affair will be given in the beautiful gardens of Mrs. J. E. Argus, 1905 Hill Drive, Eagle Rock, and promises to be one of the smart affairs of summer.

RESORT AND HOTEL NOTES

The Tioga Pass road between Yosemite Valley and Mono Lake is now open and in good condition, according to reports received from Tioga Lodge at the eastern terminus of the route. The report states that a scouting party from the Stockton branch of the California State Auto Association made the trip from Stockton to the lodge during the past week and experienced no difficulties of any kind. Despite the fact that the region experienced a snowfall within the last few weeks no chains were necessary.

The "Travellarians," and organization of San Francisco and Oakland Travel Office employees were entertained at Lake Tahoe the week-end of the 7th inst., being guests of Chambers's Lodge, formerly McKinney's.

Sixteen young women left San Francisco on the California Transportation Company's steamer "Delta King," on the evening of the 6th inst. for Sacramento where they were met by A. Richardson, Jr., Pierce-Arrow Stage Line manager; Albert Bettens, chairman of the Sacramento Tourist and Convention Bureau, and hotel men of Sacramento. Later the party took the stage line for Lake Tahoe where they spent Saturday afternoon and evening.

Jake Obexer, agent for the Garwood motorboat line, gave the "Travellarians" a sensational thrill, using two of his new boats to cut capers on the calm surface of the lake.

During the evening dancing to the enlarged Chambers's Lodge Orchestra was enjoyed until the wee small hours.

Sunday morning the party was taken for horseback rides through mountain trails covered with snow drifts.

Those who made the trip were: Maebelle B. Hood, Helen Carter, Donna Williamson, LaMoine Wright, Penelope MacGinnis, Mary F. Gifford, Muriel Fisher, Margaret K. Whitmore, Eva Freeman, E. M. Kirker, Gloria M. Avila, Ruth Blanchard, Bernuta Griffing, Ruth Fetzer, Grace F. Pew and Helen L. Garrett.

The first of the weekly Saturday night entertainment programs and dances for the summer season at Tamarack Lodge is announced for the prelent week-end. Miss Leota Claire Wood recently graduated from the school of music at the University of Southern California, is director of programs for the season. Music for dancing will be furnished by a three-piece orchestra consisting of Miss Myrtia Gardner, pianist, also of the University of Southern California, Miss Wood and Miss Barbara Baird, violinists.

Guests at Tamarack Lodge during the last week, include Maj. and Mrs. Max C. Fliesehman, Santa Barbara; Jack Milligan, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Revolon, Mr. and Mrs. Diffenduffer, Oxnard; Mr. and Mrs. Mark Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Belcher, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Price, Hollywood; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Courtney, H. M. Woodard, Los Angeles; Herbert Ross and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Noyes of Beverly Hills; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Deeble and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lee, Long Beach; Dr. Chester O. Tanner, San Diego; Mr. and Mrs. E. Mackin, Redondo; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Shoemaker, Glendale, and McKenzie Gordon, Jr., of San Francisco.

Miss Ada Sweenet, formerly in charge of one of the leading country clubs near Dallas, Tex., has taken over the Hotel Palomar in Hemet. The hotel has recently been thoroughly renovated and modernized.

Mrs. Sweenet is making a specialty of the dining-room and announces that southern chicken dinners, including all the traditional trimmings, are to be a regular feature.

The following were among the guests from Los Angeles sojourning at the Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, last week: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Friesberg, Mrs. M. W. Lowenstein, O. R. Larwill, Lelah W. McGrew, Mrs. B. F. Perkins and maid and O. F. Boyer.

Thirty miles east of Los Angeles, at the foot of the mountains, the Glendora foothills school maintains its girls' summer camp.

Here for the months of July and August a limited number of girls, 6 to 12 years of age, will find restful hours under the old oak trees on the lawns and playgrounds. Two swimming pools will be in active service all day. Beginners will be taught by Miss Elisabeth Hiatt. Miss Hiatt, a trained athletic teacher, takes charge of hikes to the mountains, a trained athletic teacher, takes charge of hikes to the mountains, and all swimming, athletics, and exercises. Many picnics are taken during the summer, and trips are arranged to exhibitions and near-by parks.

Miss Percival, who has charge of the camp, has been the nurse and supervisor for four years at the school. She will teach handcraft, hygiene and also take personal care of all the children.

WHAT ABOUT THE ARTISTS?

tude of his own studio. Do we really honor our artists as we should, even when we applaud their achievement? Prize fighters, movie stars, multimillionaires receive homage today in large measure; they are the great. But where does the artist come in? Can we expect great art under these conditions?

And the remedy. A new point of view; beginning with the children in the public schools, a reconstruction of attitude all along the line. Let every school in the country honor one artist each year on some special day, and thus implant in the young the seeds of veneration. Let us prate no more of impracticability when we ourselves are wasting and belittling thereby one of our greatest national assets.—[The American Magazine of Art.

THREE HEADS HELD BETTER

treatment in this one cruder than these two studies of young women? Look how soft the lighting is and how you can almost feel the hair of the young lady, and the silk in that dear little Japanese girl's kimono."

"It is not cruder," I say, "but more rugged, as fits the sitter. That's what artists call fitting the treatment to the theme. Why even the drift of the white-haired man's coat tells much about his character. I think the best of these are real portraiture. I don't care much for the other ancestors, though, and only the one little girl with the pink ribbon in her hair suits me. The others are sort of . . . -er."

"Mushy?" says Priscilla. I suggest "vague" as a better word.

We admire a few other things in the gallery but our zest for art seems to have waned so we go down to the street still talking about the Dickens' man. But as we are saying farewell on the sidewalk Priscilla suddenly asks: "Mr. Critic, don't you think Mr. Sloan is a wonderful artist? He seems so sort of . . . understanding."

RELIGION AND CONDUCT TOPIC

during the nineteenth century, and of many others before them. It is from "these precocious children of life on the spiritual plane" that we derive our knowledge of a real realm of being, a world of value; "for they alone have had first-hand evidence that it exists." They tell us that this will one day "be the vision of all that lives." Meantime we gain glimpses of it through great art, great music, and clearest and most permanently, through the poetry of great mystics.

Lumber Major Need of Studio

Four million six hundred thousand feet of lumber played an important part in creating the motion-picture entertainment brought to the world by Paramount's Hollywood studios during the past year.

Lumber, it was emphasized in a report, ranks with human emotions, skilled energy, film and textiles, as a major commodity without which motion pictures hardly could be produced.

OLDSTERS REAP RIPER HARVEST

as time flies on, is fetched to Hollywood every so often, both for stage and screen, and is now to make two of her most famous plays for the talkies. May sells her years, not her youth, in an eager market.

Louise Dresser is another actress upon whom fortune has smiled. She too, has made three successful careers. When she came from the stage to the silents, she astonished audiences with her "Goose Woman" and numerous other pictures, and now wins triumph in the talkies, beginning with "Mother Knows Best" . . . one of the first of them. Louise has no occasion to sigh for her past youth.

Another sensation is Beryl Mercer . . . a plump little lady whose fame shone, first on the stage in "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals," later in the same story as a picture, "Seven Days Leave," and as the greedy old cockney mother in "Three Live Ghosts." Beryl can afford to snub an ex-husband, buy vast real estate, own homes in New York, Hollywood and Santa Monica, and confess to as many birthdays as she jolly well likes.

Everyone remembers dear old Margaret Mann's astonishing success in "Four Sons" . . . It was her first real success . . . at 60 years of age. Since then she has appeared in but a very few pictures. But she had a contract for quite a time. "And how I loved drawing a fat salary, even when I wasn't working" beamed Margaret radiantly. You couldn't persuade Margaret that youth is the triumphant period of life.

Claire McDowell is another marvel. She has two grown sons and is a perfect housekeeper besides. Yet she was on the stage all her youth, in pictures for years . . . invariably in mother or spinster roles, as in "Ben Hur" with Ramon Novarro and "Black Oxen" with Corinne Griffith, and now starts a new successful career in the talkies, one of her latest being as Joan Crawford's mother in "Our Blushing Brides." So far Claire can crow over all the rest of her family as the most prominent success.

SUCCESS IN TALKIES

Hedda Hopper, formerly on the stage and in silents, wins more success in the talkies . . . invariably as a sophisticated, fashionable mamma or aunt. Bodil Rosing is an old darling in great demand in mother roles. Polly Moran isn't exactly either youthful or beautiful, but her salary would make many a young charmer green with envy.

And now comes Emma Dunn, with many years' stage experience. She played the role of Gary Cooper's mother in "The Texan" so successfully that Paramount has decided she's a great find. Emma looks round, dimpled, extremely well groomed in real life, but is quite willing to add ten or twenty years to her age in a picture role . . . far and away more profitable than trying to prolong one's fleeting youth.

Once, when I asked a dozen of our leading picture actresses what they expected to be doing ten years hence, they all noticeably shuddered. Being ten years older seemed like a nightmare to them. They couldn't even bear to play with the idea. To have mentioned twenty years would have made most of them faint with dread.

Yet here are women who are making glittering new careers for themselves twenty years after and marveling that aging could be so thrillingly triumphant. Golden, golden years.

DEVELOPMENTS INDICATE NEW REALTY ERA

WHAT IS THE OUTLOOK FOR REAL ESTATE HERE?

Careful Analysis of All the Factors and Records of Past Similar Periods Tell Plain Story

BY CHARLES C. COHAN

What is the real estate outlook?

The whole country wants to know, for realty values form a ...stone in national welfare.

In general, conservative observers regard the indications in ...-based localities as favorable and cite the following as ...s for their belief.

(1) Stabilized and higher prices customarily follow quiet or ...ant periods, making this a good buyer's market.

(2) The increase of land-absorptive power through popula- ... increase.

Scarcity of public neighborhood play areas, which have been shown to increase realty values in their vicinity, is causing an increasing use of play provisions made by the county, officials assert.

APARTMENT STORE UNIT ANNOUNCED

Project to be Erected Near Site of Los Angeles Garden

The Lincoln Leasehold Corporation has taken a ninety-nine-year lease on the property at the southwest corner of Eighth and Stewart streets at a rental for the term in excess of $800,000 and will erect on the property a six-story Class A bachelor apartment building with small shops on the ground floor, according to Jim Hool, manager of the brokerage department for the corporation.

The property fronts 113 feet on Eighth street, with a depth of 50 feet, and is one of the many projects to be built around the Los Angeles Garden project recently announced.

HOSTELRY LEASED BY CHAIN

Contract Awarded for Conversion of Structure Into Modern Apartment-Hotel Unit

Involving an estimated aggregate rental of more than $400,000, the Hotel Darby, 234 West Adams street, was leased yesterday for fifteen years by Consolidated Hotels, Inc., from the Wesley Clark Investment Company, according to announcement by officials of the N. N. Sugarman Investment Company and Metcalf & Ryan, who handled the negotiations.

At the same time it was reported that the hostelry, a six-story Class A building representing an investment of $250,000, is to be converted into a modern apartment-hotel at a cost of $40,000. The Angelus Holding Company, general contractors, has been awarded the contract for the improvements, which will include installation of kitchens, electric refrigeration, two-tone tile baths and new furnishings. Remodeling is expected to be complete in sixty days.

The lot adjoining the Darby on the east is being landscaped and will be added to the present grounds of the establishment, giving frontage of 150 feet on West Adams street and a depth of 220 feet, it was stated. The billiard room, library and other public rooms will be operated in the same manner as heretofore, and, in addition, automobile storage space has been provided.

Consolidated Hotels, Inc., operates what is said to be the largest chain of hotels and apartment-houses under a single management in the West.

Broker Lists Sale of Home, Apartments

Two sales totaling $150,000 are reported by Harry Epstein, Sr., realty broker, as concluded last week.

The Commander Apartments, a four-story Class C apartment-house at 1247 Ingraham street, owned by D. C. Goldware, was sold to C. C. Schalwitz at a consideration totaling $135,000.

A seven-room bungalow at 229 South Oakhurst Drive in Beverly Hills was sold for Ogden Crane to M. Yaegger at a consideration of $15,000.

Corner Leased for Oil Station

Lease of the northeast corner of Pico and Flower streets to the Union Oil Company for an oil station site and to Guasti-Giulii, Inc., for a superservice station site, has been made by the Italian Vineyard Company. The lease is for ten years.

PURCHASE OF CORNER REPORTED BY BROKER

B. N. Schneider, realty broker, reports that he has purchased the northeast corner of Fletcher Drive and San Fernando Road, the property fronting 290 feet on San Fernando Road and being 140 feet deep. Schneider was formerly a realty operator in Minneapolis, coming to Los Angeles five years ago. The property acquired is opposite the new plant of the Van De Kamp bakeries.

Property Sale Breaks Record

Sale of the Fred H. M. Davis property at 124 South Pacific avenue last week set a new high mark for business property in that vicinity at a price of $25,000 for a twenty-five-foot frontage. A frame building on the property, the last to remain standing in the block, will be removed.

P. C. Ridgley, owner of the P. C. Ridgley Company Department Store, which has been operating for more than twenty-three years, is the purchaser. A two-story brick store and apartment building is planned.

REALTY VALUES GOVERNED BY RECREATIONAL AREAS

County-Wide Survey Will Establish That Play Spaces Pay Economic Dividends, Officials Declare

BY JOHN B. WOOLFENDEN

Realty values increase in direct proportion to the proximity of the property to recreation areas. This statement, credited to L. H. Weir, field secretary of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, is reiterated by Fred E. Wadsworth, superintendent of the Los Angeles County Department of Recreation, Camps and Playgrounds, which department now is launching, in co-operation with the County Regional Planning Commission, a survey of all park and playground areas in the county. The findings of this survey, it is predicted, will establish indisputably the fact that the policy of creating adequate play spaces pays economic dividends.

While no actual county figures on valuation increase near play areas will be available until the survey is completed, Supt. Wadsworth cites Manhattan Beach and Redondo Beach as instances of really revitalization occasioned by the establishment of county recreation spot. At these two beaches, a total ocean frontage of 13,670 feet recently was acquired by the county in joint purchase with the State. The county funds were provided by an additional 2-cent allowance from the 1929-30 tax rate.

BEACH REALTY SPURT

"Since these beach areas have come under county operation, have been cleaned and play facilities provided, there has been a tremendous increase in attendance," Wadsworth declares. "The public now is flocking to a beach previously deserted because uncared for. As a result, both Manhattan and Redondo are experiencing a jump in realty values, and daily radio programs are being broadcast by these cities, announcing that the reason for the increased interest in property is due to county operation of the beaches and proper provisions for play."

Virgil D. Dahl, recreational director of the department, further cites the fact that as a result of the county's taking over Alondra Park on the Riverside-Redondo Boulevard, Centinella Valley realty has seen a sudden increase in activity.

Supt. Wadsworth again quotes L. H. Weir as supporting the original contention. According to Weir, "a park of 20 or 30 acres exerts a definite influence on any real estate within an area of a half-mile, values being greatest close to the park and receding gradually. The blighted districts in the large cities are those without open spaces. There the property values are the lowest. An adequate area should be provided in every neighborhood for a school building site, playground and neighborhood park, made as beautiful as an artist can make them. The amazing growth of suburban cities and the much slower rate of the metropolis itself in recent years has been due to the lack of breathing places in the city, leading people to move from the city to the suburb."

IDEAL PROPOSED

Wadsworth himself makes the following statement with respect to the Los Angeles county recreation areas: "To be fully effective, the areas of the county which are and which could be devoted to recreation should be distributed and developed systematically. Recreational needs are dependent upon the size and general characteristics of the county and city and can be expressed in specific terms.

"In the first place, it may be said that one-fifth of the county's area, aside from streets, should serve public needs. There should be approximately one acre of parks for

LARGE SUM TO BE SPENT IN BUILDING

Thirty Structures Will be Erected by Company in Present Year

Approximately thirty buildings valued at more than $225,000 are reported under construction or ready to start by the Tri-Guaranty Building Company in an announcement made by B. E. Werminghaus, president of the concern.

"Most of these are single-family residences in scattered locations over Los Angeles and its suburban communities," Werminghaus stated. Five homes were completed during the past week, to be occupied immediately by owners for whom they were built.

"We are preparing plans at this time for a $23,000 two-story frame stucco hotel to be built at University City, where we now have contracts for five single-family dwellings. In the harbor district four homes are under construction. Nearly every suburban section adjacent to the city is represented in our job list.

"Increased building activity the last thirty days has compelled us to increase the number of job workmen 40 per cent. From inquiries and proposed projects on hand now it appears that the summer season will be unusually active."

INDUSTRIAL AREA DEALS ANNOUNCED

Four Leases, One Sale Included in Transactions of Past Week

Four leases and one sale in the industrial district were reported closed last week by R. L. McCourt, vice-president of W. Ross Campbell Company, business and industrial property brokers.

Property at the northeast corner of Mateo and Atlantic streets, in size 35 by 140 feet, was purchased by Morgan Lupher for a reported price of $10,000. The purchaser expects to erect a one-story industrial building within the next few months. All negotiations were handled by A. L. Hayes of the industrial division.

A five-year lease was closed on the one-story brick warehouse at 2153 Sacramento street for Lillard-Squires Company, who will use the building for the storage and sale of lumber products. Total area is more than 6000 square feet, rented at $7800. All negotiations were handled by William M. Nuttall.

In the wholesale district the Barco Manufacturing Company leased the entire sixth floor of the building at 1024 Santee street for a period of three years at a reported rental of more than $10,000. The lessee is a manufacturer of ladies' ready-to-wear and is a newcomer in the Los Angeles district. The entire fifth floor of the same building was leased to August Brothers for a period of five years at a rental of more than $15,000. All negotiations were handled by T. S. Steel of the industrial division.

A one-year lease in the McComas Building was taken by the Continental Undergarment Company for the wholesaling of dry goods.

Los Angeles Builders Launch Effort to Stimulate Home Modernization

EXCHANGE BUREAU SEEKS ALLIANCE OF INDUSTRIES

Campaign Expected to Encourage Remodeling and Aid Building in Needed Classification

Educational work of the Building and Modernization Bureau being organized under auspices of the Los Angeles Builders' Exchange will add at least 25 per cent to the city's building volume in the next twelve months, it was estimated yesterday by D. H. McDonald, secretary-manager.

By bringing under one banner the entire construction industry and allied interests, the bureau expects to stimulate not only the remodeling of out-moded structures but also to encourage new building in the classifications now needed in this section, the official explained.

More than 1500 concerns in Los Angeles will be approached by the sponsors of the Building and Modernization Bureau within the next few weeks with a view to raising the $50,000 fund set as the minimum requirement to carry on the extensive educational and promotion activities mapped out for the coming twelve months.

This group of potential members of the bureau includes more than ninety separate classifications, ranging from structural steel and cement plants to retail hardware merchants, and including also the banks, building-and-loan companies, mortgage concerns, title companies, retail house furnishing firms and many others.

"An aggressive modernization campaign carried on in the Middle West last year increased building activity between 25 and 50 per cent in at least six cities," McDonald said yesterday. "A similar program, such as the executive committee of the local bureau plans when the $50,000 fund is raised, should increase Los Angeles' building by at least 25 per cent the first year, and undoubtedly more thereafter."

The plan is to establish a permanent information bureau for prospective builders and owners of residential and commercial structures wishing modernization costs and other data. Co-operation with architects and financing institutions will enable the bureau to offer a valuable service to the public without charge or obligation of any kind, McDonald explained. Information gathered from reliable sources will be kept on hand and answers will be given to all questions relative to construction projects or modernization plans, no matter how small or large in proportion.

Opening of Theater Gives District Substantial Five-Year Gain

With the opening of the $1,250,000 Pantages Theater, major construction at the Hollywood Boulevard-Vine street intersection and immediately adjacent thereto, during the last five and a half years, has exceeded that of any similar area in Los Angeles and has surpassed the limit-height building of any sectional district of its size in the United States, according to available data assembled by Gilbert H. Beesemyer, secretary of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association, who built Hollywood's pioneer skyscraper.

Seven limit-height structures, the Bank of Hollywood, Guaranty, Taft, Dyas, Plaza Hotel, Knickerbocker Hotel and Mountain States Life Building, have been constructed in the Hollywood-Vine area since the fall of 1924, establishing an all-time record for communities located outside of downtown metropolitan areas, Beesemyer said. More than $50,000,000 will be spent in building construction in the Hollywood area during the next two years and approximately $8,000,000 in street improvements, he stated.

New Policy Inaugurated Following Opening After Redecoration

A new membership plan for the Santa Monica Breakers Club was announced yesterday by Harry M. Sugarman, managing director.

HARRY M. SUGARMAN

The plan is one by which members receive all privileges of the club without having to meet the expense required if an interest in the real-estate holdings of the club were involved. The properties of the club are owned outright by A. L. Gore, C. L. Langley and M. Gore, and consist of the club building, the land upon which it stands, and 50,000 square feet of beach.

The Santa Monica Breakers Club opened for the season in May following a period during which the interior was redecorated and refurnished at an expenditure of $150,000. The exterior of the club building was also redecorated, and additions and improvements were made in the private beach, such as the erection of a canopy over the esplanade, the installation of a grill on the beach, and installation of beach furniture, a life guards' tower, and floats in the surf.

EXECUTIVE MAKES NEW AFFILIATION

Northern Broker Heads Finance Department of Local Concern

George T. Crompton, San Francisco and Oakland real-estate broker, has resigned from the vice-presidency of the Real Estate Corporation of California, Oakland subdividers, to become affiliated with the C. C. C. Tatum Realtors here, it was reported yesterday by Cecil B. Barker, general manager of the local concern.

Crompton, member of the San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate Boards, has been active in the realty field in the Bay District for the last twenty-one years. He retains a one-quarter interest in the Real Estate Corporation, developers of Durant Park Highlands and Oak Springs, residential suburbs of Oakland.

In his new affiliation with the Tatum organization, Crompton will be in charge of the financial department, supervising that phase of the $6,000,000 C. C. C. Tatum Real Estate Investment Trust. During the last week, he sold $75,000 worth of beneficial interests in the trust to a group of his former clients in the northern territory.

CHAIN STORES (Continued)

Most owners of city lots are very desirous to secure chain stores as tenants. They are, as a class, excellent risks; will take long leases and will pay good rentals for locations which they consider suited to their needs. It is a mistake, however, to assume that they will permit themselves to be imposed upon, as they will not pay more than a certain percentage of their gross sales for any location. This does not mean that they require percentage leases, but the rentals must bear a certain ratio to their gross sales, carefully estimated from the pedestrian count and analysis of the site under consideration. One chain store official stated that about one location out of every 500 was accepted. Eighty per cent to 90 per cent of the offerings were thrown out to start with; most of them for lack of adequate information concerning the sites submitted, but a good many of them because the rentals asked were obviously too high.

KEEN JUDGES

Chain stores are keen judges of the possibilities and limitations of retail store sites. They will carefully estimate the number and quality of the foot traffic passing the site they are considering. Certain chain stores will not enter a city where the pedestrian traffic in a ten-hour day is less than 15,000. One such organization found that 13 per cent of the traffic passing his store entered, 6 per cent bought, of which 90 per cent were women. This will give an indication of how the volume of the trade may be calculated from a count and an analysis of the foot traffic passing any particular point on a street.

If it is furthermore considered that the average family in this part of the country consists of approximately 3.6 persons, it will be seen that by making a count of the houses in any district it is possible to get a fairly good idea of the trade possibilities of any section of the city, as tabulations are available showing expenditures per family for food, clothing, furniture, fuel, personal services, amusements, etc.; the families being in turn classified according to their purchasing power. It is a well-known fact that such purchasing power will vary with the occupancy of the different districts.

FURNITURE AND AUTOMOBILES

Automobile display rooms and furniture stores require considerable space and will, therefore, seek locations which are not too expensive. (We have reference to furniture stores supplying moderately priced homes.) Automobiles and furniture, moreover, are not as a rule selected on the spur of the moment. Careful comparison is usually made before a purchase. To facilitate such comparison by the customer, such display rooms and stores will congregate in districts. Thus we have the furniture district and the automobile district occupying considerable areas, often at some distance from the downtown retail center. Land values have a tendency to stabilize on a more or less uniform level in such districts.

There is a justifiable tendency recently to put theaters in the same category as retail stores, as in the final analysis offerings of theaters are sold to the public in very much the same way as is merchandise.

The so-called "legitimate" theaters are almost invariably found in or near the heart of the city, while motion-picture theaters, which are now practically all talking picture theaters, have a tendency to spread about the city, locating in prominent subcenters, as well as near or in the center of the city. The old neighborhood locations have all but been abandoned. The tendency is decidedly toward larger and more pretentious structures, as well as better and more elaborate programs. This type of entertainment has practically supplanted vaudeville, such theaters having been transformed for the most part into talking-picture theaters.

CENTER OF BLOCK USED

Through the "movies" a use has been found for the center part of downtown blocks or space well away from the street frontage. Usually a very colorful, but comparatively small entrance space is located right on the street while the auditorium is reached through a more or less lengthy passageway, the valuable space on the street on either side of the entrance being leased to stores carrying goods which appeal to the passing crowds and theatergoers, such as candy shops, drug stores, cigar stores, etc.

It is seldom nowadays that a theater building is erected which is devoted exclusively to theater use. A theater building is regarded as a "one-purpose building" and as such would be difficult to finance unless 50 per cent or more of its revenue is derived from other uses, such as from stores and offices.

Our next article will deal with locations devoted to financial and office uses.

Developments Announced by Company Head

Moderately Priced Hillside Houses to Be Built

If Found Success, Further Residences Follow

Approximately $350,000 in home building and another $100,000 in road work will be expended between now and January 1 by Peter Nolan & Co., realty developers and builders, in Los Feliz Glen in the erection of ten large homes and an equal number of smaller ones, according to an announcement yesterday of Peter Nolan, head of the concern.

PETER NOLAN

The tract is located in the Hollywood hills north of Franklin avenue and is a part of the Los Feliz Terrace acreage, extending back to Griffith Park. Three of the larger-type homes already are under construction and the smaller ones are to begin soon. Work will be under the supervision of A. E. Norstrom of Norstrom & Anderson, architects. Willits and Benson are the contractors.

"The company plans an innovation in hillside home building," declared Nolan. "Heretofore hillside homes have been beyond the reach of the man of moderate means. We plan to erect these ten homes to sell within the reach of people of average income, as we believe there are large numbers of them seeking such sites for residences. If our beliefs are correct we will proceed immediately with the erection of others of like character."

The larger homes under construction will contain three bedrooms, two baths, four rooms on the first floor with guest plumbing and maid's quarters on the third floor, according to Architect Norstrom.

"We plan to begin construction of these homes now so as to be ready for the revival in real estate which we confidently expect to be here in 1931," Nolan declared. "While we do not anticipate a boom in Southern California real estate, and in fact do not want one, we feel that there will be a steady uptrend apparent from now on and that business will be of a substantial nature."

"It is a rather unusual situation but the site for the small homes we plan to build is comparatively level, yet in close proximity to steep hills," Charles B. McCann, sales manager, said. "The ground is rolling in character and offers us an excellent opportunity to experiment in this class of dwelling. The close proximity to the Hollywood-Vine intersection, but five minutes by automobile, brings residents close to the shopping district of Hollywood."

LARGE SUM EXPENDED ON VILLAS

Dinettes, Kitchenettes Installed in Units of Project

Bringing the total investment in the Garden of Allah group of villas to more than $900,000, a total of $155,000 has been expended on installation of dinettes and kitchenettes in the thirty-eight units comprising the project, at Sunset and Crescent Heights boulevards and Havenhurst Road, according to announcement yesterday by officials of the Central Holding Corporation, new owners of the property.

Excavation operations have been started preparatory to the erection of the height-limit Garden of Allah Apartment Hotel to represent an investment of $782,000 when completed, and the Garden of Allah Villa House, fronting on Sunset Boulevard, which will cost $200,000. Construction work is being handled by the H. W. Baum Company, and plans and specifications by Gilbert Stanley Underwood & Co., architects.

With more than 1000 feet of frontage on the three thoroughfares and with extensive landscaped grounds, the present group of villas and their occupants will not be disturbed by the building operations, it was explained. The structures in the present group range in size from single units to five-room houses, each completely equipped as a separate residence. The main building, devoted to dining-room and other public rooms, is set in a semitropical atmosphere, which predominates throughout the grounds.

HOME OUTLAY INCREASES

Year-to-Year Figures Indicate Living Standards of City Becoming Steadily Higher

That Los Angeles is steadily attaining higher living standards is indicated by the increase in its outlay for individual homes, the average expenditure having advanced from $2601 each for 9400 homes in 1921 to an average of $4330 for 6412 dwellings in 1929. Since 1921 building permits calling for the construction of 126,914 homes costing $430,920,328 have been issued.

Based on permits issued, Los Angeles has built a home for every five of the 655,057 residents who have moved here since 1920. Dwelling accommodations for these new citizens have involved an expenditure of $700 per capita.

An analysis of Los Angeles home construction made by Gilbert H. Beesemyer, secretary-manager of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association, shows that the average cost of Los Angeles homes since 1921, based on permit values, is $3216 each, as compared with $4330 in 1929. Since 1921 the cost of individual homes has steadily advanced. Permits for 2209 dwellings costing $8,997,229 have been issued during 1930 to date.

Comparative figures giving the number of dwelling permits issued since 1921 and the average valuation follow:

	Number	Av. value
1921	14,954	$2,601
1922	18,197	2,829
1923	24,361	3,087
1924	18,186	3,241
1925	14,189	3,719
1926	11,104	4,020
1927	9,289	4,176
1928	7,852	4,165
1929	6,412	4,330

The Guaranty survey shows that 7,188 apartment-house permits of a valuation of $182,954,657 have been issued since 1921. From an average cost of $14,237 in 1921, the average permit valuation increased to $25,740 in 1929. A total of 216 apartment-house permits of a valuation of $4,628,780 have been issued during the first five months of 1930.

Title Officers Will Gather in Santa Barbara

California Land Title Association will hold its annual convention at the Biltmore in Santa Barbara the 26th, 27th and 28th inst., according to statement by Porter Bruck, assistant secretary, Title Insurance and Trust Company, and second vice-president of the Land Title Association. Delegates from companies located in every county in the State will be present.

Representing the Title Insurance and Trust Company will be a party consisting of Stuart O'Melveny, first vice-president; Senator N. W. Thompson, vice-president; E. L. Farmer, vice-president; P. W. Clark, vice-president; and Porter Bruck, assistant secretary.

PIPE NEEDS TO EXPAND

Brass pipe, like all metals, expands when heated and contracts when cooled. The coefficient of expansion of brass is about twice that of iron and steel. This fact should be taken into consideration and properly provided for when brass pipe is embedded in concrete or any unyielding material, builders report.

every 100 persons. By following two formulas, the county must acquire some 128 acres of park and playground lands for each square mile of its area. Approximately another fifth of the square mile would be used for streets and roads, leaving a tenth for commercial purposes, etc., leaving half or less for purely residential development. On each net acre of residential area, when fully developed carried an average of eight families, a typical square mile would be populated by 12,800 persons, a density of twenty per gross acre. This 12,800 population is practically the minimum which may be expected when any given square mile is fully built up, with only single-family dwellings are considered in allowing four families per net acre. With a number more likely to be found upon a typical square mile, it is not at all unreasonable to provide the reservation of 128 acres of recreation grounds.

"It must be noted, however, that 128 acreage is not enough. Every county or city might have well over 10 per cent of its gross area lying in one tract in the outskirts, but the interior might be wholly without recreation facilities needed in such sections. varying size, dispersed according to a studied plan and developed with strict regard for recreational needs. All public recreation facilities should form a harmonious co-ordinated system properly related to the extent and character of the county's development. It is impossible to over-emphasize the importance of the proper distribution, use and location of various recreational areas."

PURPOSES OF SURVEY

Before a complete diagnosis can be made of the county needs, Wadsworth points out, the projected survey must be completed. This is the first year for a county-wide recreation program, and the county's service will be to help the communities to help themselves, and to correlate their playground work with the county's. In Los Angeles city, the city playground department already has a thoroughly organized program.

"It is the intention of the County Board of Supervisors," Wadsworth states, "to provide all of the playground facilities, park and beach, that are possible. In this work, the support of the realty brokers, as well as the P.-T.A.'s, service clubs and civic bodies, is essential. Each community wants to know what the other community is doing in this respect; how play areas are being set aside, how funds are obtained, how the public is educated to the need, whether the areas are privately owned or owned by city or county, how the schools are cooperating. This it will be the purpose of our survey to discover, as well as park acreage, equipment, cost of maintenance, average daily attendance, radius and valuation.

"The first playground area is, of course, the home back yard. Then come park squares in concentrated areas, as for example, the Los Angeles Plaza. Thirdly come neighborhood play parks, such as that maintained by Los Angeles city on Vermont avenue. These parallel the grammar school playground. Next are the district playground areas, offering full play facilities, as do Union high school grounds. The regional recreation parks, such as Brookside Park, Pasadena, follow, and lastly, there are the extra-urban or outlying parks, such as the beaches and mountain areas, which call for the care of a larger group, such as the county."

PRESENT COUNTY PROPERTY

According to figures supplied by Merrill D. Davis, director of public relations of the county recreation department, the county now owns the following playground areas: Alamitos Bay, 5875 front feet; Redondo Beach, 3562 front feet; Manhattan Beach, 10,108 feet; Santa Monica Canyon, 1160 feet; a total of 20,779 feet or approximately 3.93 miles of beach frontage. At Alondra Park, on the Riverside-Redondo Boulevard at Cypress avenue, the county has 315 acres now undergoing development. At Big Pines camp in the San Bernardino mountains, are 4200 acres, and at Crystal Lake, 1310 acres.

Municipalities in the county now own parks valued at $9,672,777.24. During the 1929-30 fiscal year, the total appropriation throughout these municipalities for recreation was $4,463,586.60, while the appropriation for the maintenance and operation of county-owned parks, including Exposition Park and Stadium, Hancock Park, the mountain and beach areas, and the operation of the recreation department itself, was $1,558,091.

The policy of the county is to acquire all available beach frontage and other recreational property as rapidly as funds become available and while prices are fairly reasonable, Wadsworth declares. "And we need the support of the realty developers," he adds. "As the county regional planning commission has pointed out, each successive wave of subdivision activity has made itself felt by placing on the subdivision market privately owned areas which had been commonly used by the public for park or recreational purposes, usually by toleration or as a commercial enterprise. The creation of parks to care for the recreation needs of the prospective home buyers has been consistently advocated to subdividers, but most land merchants have maintained the view that all land marketable must be sold. The buyer then must assume the responsibility of providing space for schools, parks and playgrounds at the increased price of the land. The need which is most essential to the greatest number of people and which has been most neglected is the neighborhood parks and playgrounds within every day walking distance of the masses. The financial interest of the subdivider and the civic interests of his community are identical. The subdivider benefits markedly from the higher prices and quicker sales which result in new communities supplied with adequate playgrounds, parks, athletic fields, tennis courts or golf courses.

AREAS NOW SET ASIDE

"A chart prepared by the Playground and Recreation Association of America answers the contention that while large subdividers can afford to set aside space for parks, etc., the small subdivider cannot do so. This chart shows that ninety-six, or more than half of the subdivisions throughout the United States with areas so set apart, total 100 acres or less. Of subdividers developing fifty-one to 100 acres, twenty-four donated from 1 to 4 per cent, eight from 5 to 9 per cent, and sixteen from 10 to 31 per cent. Of the sixty-two set aside from 25 to 100 acres, twenty-two, from 100 to 250 acres, and seven, 250 acres or more.

"The only Los Angeles county subdivisions listed in this chart are as follows: Palos Verdes estates, 3200 acres, 800 set aside; Rainbow Crest, forty acres, four set aside; Leimert Park, 236 acres, Leimert Plaza set aside, and Terrace Park, 1400 acres, amount set aside not complicated. Other such Southern California subdivisions are listed as in Fontana, Laguna Beach, Riverside, Santa Ana and Santa Barbara. Of the States containing such subdivisions, New York and North Carolina lead the nation.

"Most local realty operators soon will have impressed upon them the fact that values increase as realty approaches recreational areas, if they do not realize it already," Wadsworth concludes. "The industries locating here will teach them that lesson, for industries generally are very much alive to the bearing of recreational opportunities on the location of factories. During the past two years, five out of every six industries inquiring about locations here have asked: 'What park and public recreation facilities have you for our workmen, both near to a plant location and in the near-by home districts where they probably would wish to live?' That tells the story of one of the foremost conditions governing our future growth."

ARCHITECTS OF THIS CITY PAID HONOR

Los Angeles Men Selected to Prepare Sketches for Portland Hostelry

Los Angeles architects have been assigned to prepare sketches for a $3,500,000 hotel project in Portland, Or., it became known yesterday when Ralph B. Lloyd, Bank of Italy Building, millionaire oil man and large property owner in the northern city, announced that one of two plans presented by local architectural firms would be selected for the hostelry.

Drawings of the project have been prepared by the architectural firms of Walker & Eisen, and Morgan, Walls & Clements, both of this city. The hotel, declared to be a great need in Portland, will contain 400 rooms, and rise to a height of twenty stories in the Holladay Park district of Portland.

Construction work is scheduled to begin this year with completion set for 1931. Details as to type of construction are yet to be determined. The exterior will be either of terra cotta or decorative concrete with art stone trim.

Lloyd, who is heavily interested in Ventura oil fields, is erecting a home for himself in the Beverly Hills area.

LEASE OF PROPERTY REPORTED

Structure Being Erected to Be Ready for Lessee Next Month

A $50,000 lease to the Fager Hydraulic Hoist and Body Company, Inc., is reported by C. R. Wyman of R. C. Mason & Co., Ltd., industrial realtors.

Ground has been broken at 2160 East Twenty-fifth street, for a building of approximately 30,000 square feet, which is being constructed by Lawton & Rivers, Inc., for Walter Van E. Thompson, owner of the property. R. C. Mason Company states that the building will be ready for occupancy by July 15, and will be one of the largest and most up-to-date automotive factory buildings in the West.

The Fager Hydraulic Hoist and Body Company, Inc., was organized June, 1926, to take over the Fager & Curler Company, builder of hoists and six-wheel attachments, located on South San Pedro street, with a factory area of about 10,000 square feet. Later, the Fager Company moved into its present plant, occupying approximately 20,000 square feet, at which time the company was manufacturing trailers, steel bodies, six-wheel attachments and hydraulic hoists. In its new home, the company is leasing 50,000 square feet of ground, with building area of approximately 30,000 square feet.

Hotel Company Plans Erection of Double Unit

PHOENIX, June 21. (Exclusive)—Plans have been prepared by Fitzhugh & Byron of this city, for a fourteen-story hotel and apartment building, to be erected at Central avenue and Fillmore street, opposite the Hotel Westward Ho. Construction is to be by the Amerizona Ambassador Hotel Company, with expectation that $1,000,000 will be required. The incorporators are Mark B. Thompson and George W. Lindholm of the Westward Ho organization, with them associated Dean Stanley, owner of the realty to be improved, and W. C. Bannerman of Chicago. It is proposed to break ground in about a month.

REALTY FUTURE OUTLINED

Optimistic Viewpoint Seen for Los Angeles Property In Period Following Stabilization

$70,000 for 1907 but remained practically the same in the 1907-1908 period. However, by 1909, it had advanced to $346,843,590.

Los Angeles, in which assessments are based on 50 per cent of conservative actual values, had a realty assessed valuation of $171,598,245 in 1906, which increased by $32,230,275 for the ensuing year. The advance was some $3,000,000 less for the 1907-1908 period but in 1909 the net increase was $96,767,886.

EFFECTS OF GROWTH

Realty values are likewise favorably affected by marked growths in population by reason of the increase in land-absorptive power. While many other factors prevent anything like an exact parallel, it is a general rule that those areas showing the most rapid and consistent growth in population likewise show the largest and most nearly continuous increases in realty values.

On this basis the exceptionally favorable outlook for Los Angeles and Southern California generally is readily apparent from an inspection of the 1930 census figures. With an increase in population of 113.61 per cent in the last ten years and of 10,915.2 per cent in the last fifty, this city has established and has consistently maintained a rate of growth not even approached by any other metropolitan city in the world.

While figures for comparative purposes are not yet available from other centers, the same is almost certainly true of Los Angeles county, which has shown a population increase since 1920, including the city, of 134.9 per cent and, excluding the city, of 169 per cent.

By decades the rate of increase in population of Los Angeles city for the past fifty years has been: 1880-1890, 350.6 per cent; 1890-1900, 103.3 per cent; 1900-1910, 211.4 per cent; 1910-1920, 80.66 per cent; 1920-1930, 113.61 per cent. The increase rate of Los Angeles county, not including the city, for the same five intervals, has been, in the same order: 130 per cent, 32.8 per cent, 172.7 per cent, 94.5 per cent and 169 per cent.

Growth rates almost equally phenomenal are shown by other Southern California cities and counties and, to a less marked extent, by California as a whole, which has grown 65.8 per cent in ten years and has gone from eighth to sixth position in the list of States by population.

REALTY RISE HERE

Real estate here was rising rapidly in value in 1884 when Los Angeles was on its way to 50,000 in population. It halted and dropped sharply after the boom of 1885-1886 but in 1896 began another rise. The upward swing continued up through the population increase to 102,479 in 1900, but leveled off in 1907, the year of national depression. It resumed the upgrade in 1910, the population then being 319,198. In 1913-1914 began a leveling process that lasted during the war and immediate post-war days. By 1920, Los Angeles had 576,673 residents and that year saw another decided upturn in realty values and real estate activity that leveled off again after the boom of 1923. Now, with this city's population just announced as 1,231,930, the resumption of realty uptrend is indicated. It is to be noted that realty prices where this has been kept within reasonable bounds the increase in absorptive power has justified the expansion. The Los Angeles County Regional Planning Commission's recently completed land study shows 12,224 additional lots placed on the market in this county last year, but a decrease of 30 per cent in the number of new subdivisions as compared with the preceding year. This has taken up the slack materially and it is estimated that on a basis of logical lot occupancy, 50 per cent of the added population in the county last year may be regarded as the number sufficient to absorb these new lots, leaving the other 50 per cent as additional absorptive power for the lots already on the market.

OVER THE COUNTRY

Large population gains, and their consequent good effects on the realty market are of course not confined to this region. While not comparable to our own extraordinary increase, such gains are fairly general. Five representative cities in each of eight areas that practically cover the country show the following ten-year gains, in their order of increase, here published in this arrangement for the first time:

Pacific Coast—Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Oakland and Los Angeles; aggregate population, 2,803,565; gain of 930,355.

Eastern area (most densely populated section)—New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Newark; total, 9,817,371; gain, 787,623.

Eastern Middle West area—Chicago, Kansas City, Mo.; Des Moines, Omaha and Milwaukee; total, 4,692,008; gain, 890,677.

Eastern-central and eastern upper tier—Buffalo, Indianapolis, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Grand Rapids; total, 3,312,866; gain, 771,522.

South—St. Louis, New Orleans, Louisville, Atlanta and Birmingham; total, 2,123,506; gain, 349,077.

Eastern-central—Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Akron and Toledo; total, 2,196,774; gain, 310,056.

Western and western-northern—Minneapolis, St. Paul, Spokane, Denver and Salt Lake; total, 1,283,266; gain, 188,948.

New England—Boston, Providence, Worcester, Bridgeport and Springfield; total, 1,519,257; gain, 80,679.

FINANCIAL FACTOR

The significance of realty in the national financial structure is authoritatively emphasized. "Mortgages on real estate in large cities are becoming more and more a favorite form of investment," says Walter Edwards Lagerquist, professor of finance in Northwestern University, in his book on "Investment Analysis." "This may be accounted for by the rapid growth of metropolitan land values as well as the high yield of the securities. By reason of age and basis of security, this class of investments should long since have held first place among investment offerings."

In the decade prior to 1927, says a Chicago mortgage authority, the total number of trust deeds and mortgages filed for record in Chicago numbered 716,359, representing a valuation of $5,422,039,168; the number of judicial sales in that period numbered 9050, a value of $61,237,677 and less than one-third of these were foreclosures, an insignificant sum compared to the enormous aggregate of all the instruments involved.

According to figures from the Title Guarantee and Trust Company of Los Angeles, a compilation, here published for the first time, shows that in the ten years ending last December 31, there were 1,040,830 trust deeds and mortgages recorded in this county and County Recorder Logan's calculation shows one-fifth fewer foreclosures here than in Chicago. In the six months ending May 30, last, there were 637 foreclosures of mortgages and trust deeds in this county, according to the Mortgage Maturity Company of this city. These deal essentially with instruments made three years ago, or a total for a similar period of time of 65,141. A considerable proportion of foreclosures are redeemed.

Back of sound realty paper are the increased real estate valuations disclosed by the mounting aggregate assessed valuations in the progressing centers. The four largest centers in the country had these assessed valuations as of 1928: New York, $18,362,061,510; Philadelphia, $3,406,574,017; Chicago, $3,247,000,000; Detroit, $3,681,781,130. Los Angeles county had for 1929, an assessed realty valuation of $1,949,618,540, an increase of $100,713,855, compared with the preceding year, and the improvements last year were assessed at $914,803,185, an increase of $79,074,560, compared with the preceding year. Life insurance companies' holdings of real estate mortgages, according to a 1924 study, aggregated $3,500,000,000.

WHAT IT MEANS

A survey of realty records over many years discloses that the market in land runs in cycles, not of time so much as of economic conditions, and that there is a very definite relation between the business curve and that of real estate values. Periods of depression in business generally, expressed by a drop in the prices of stocks and other securities, have almost invariably been followed by an improvement in the real estate market—an improvement which often, but not always, is somewhat ahead of the restoration of general business to normal conditions.

Various explanations have been advanced by economists to account for this phenomenon, the one most favored being that, when other forms of investment appear shaky, idle money goes into good real estate as offering a safe and solid place for it to grow. Realty values, where the location is well chosen, are apt to be fairly stable and subject in a much smaller degree to the influence of temporary economic conditions which send stocks bobbing up and down like so many corks.

For several months past the country's business has suffered a depression resulting from the period of inflation and speculation which ended in the stock market crash of last fall. Unlike some past occasions of the kind, this depression has not been accompanied by an acute money stringency—in fact, money for permanent investment has been more plentiful and has commanded a lower rate as a result of the drop in stocks than before.

While it is too early yet for the cumulative effect of the several factors to be felt in the realty market, it is conservative to say that conditions are unusually favorable for investors in real estate, not only for appreciation in the value of their present holdings but for well-considered additions thereto.

Ground Lease in Boulevard Block Resold

Grant B. Culley, vice-president of the Harold G. Ferguson Corporation, announces a resale of a fifty-year ground lease on Santa Monica Boulevard near Western avenue. This lease was recently negotiated for R. H. and G. C. Jones to B. E. Green and was resold this week for B. E. Green to the Dragon Trading Company, which will improve the property, beginning in July, with a modern building for occupancy by three local merchants. The total consideration involved in the leasehold, including bonus paid, is $153,000.

All negotiations were handled by William E. Welborne of the business properties department. This transaction is the fifth consummated in this one block by Welborne during the past two months, with a total consideration of $919,000 involved, Culley states.

Citrus Acreage Being Cleared for Marketing

PHOENIX, June 2. (Exclusive)—A citrus development is being offered in what has been named "Hidden Valley," five miles south of Maricopa and thirty-four miles south of Phoenix. It is connected with this city by a pioneer road through which the railroad once was reached from this point. The operating Hidden Valley Development Company is headed by A. A. Devoto, former president of the American Iron Works, San Francisco, with him associated Louis E. Goodman, A. D. Coutts, Jr., J. G. Williams, E. J. Schneider and M. L. Snapp, all of San Francisco, with the last named managing the enterprise. Within a ten-section holding, 1200 acres are being cleared. Water is declared to have been developed in ample quantity and is to be pumped by a Diesel engine installation. A considerable acreage already has been planted to grapefruit and melons, as well as to seedling citrus stock, for later budding.

CITY WORKERS TURN TO FARM

Trend Evident in Foothill City Development

Educational Help Offered Poultry Raisers

Co-operative Marketing and Buying Also Aid

The turning of city workers to the farm has been felt to a marked degree in recent months at Fontana, according to H. S. Barbee, sales manager of the Fontana Farms Company, which conducts an 18,000-acre development on the Foothill Boulevard fifty miles east of Los Angeles.

"More and more are city folk taking up their residence on small farms and here at Fontana is the trend particularly evident," Barbee declares. "The reason for the latter fact is that many of those who have spent all their lives in the city know little of farm work or of poultry raising and find that the education aid offered by the Fontana Farms Company is just what they need to insure their success on a ranch."

During the past four years the increase in the Fontana development is illustrated by the growth of the poultry activity. In 1925 there were 90,000 hens at the development and last year the number had increased to 600,000.

CIVIC DEVELOPMENT

"Civic development of the community has resulted in the erection of modern schools, churches, stores of all kinds, as well as such community projects as a bath house and swimming pool. Social life of the community centers at the Fontana Farms Inn under the direction of Mrs. Harry E. Bonnell, manager and hostess. Card parties and dances for residents of the community and near-by cities are daily events there.

The Fontana Farms Company has been in existence for twenty years under the direction of A. B. Miller, president. During the past eight years only has the development been pushed through sales effort. Today approximately 1200 acres of the property remain unsold.

"Our educational service to poultry raisers creates a direct appeal to those city people who long for ranch life," Sales Mahager Barbee asserts. "Here our residents have all the comforts of city life for they have a city of their own and can benefit by the co-operative associations maintained.

BENEFITS OF SERVICE

"This service consists of assistance offered new residents in planning the development of their property, the benefit of co-operative organizations from which to purchase feed for poultry at a saving of approximately 20 per cent, and aid from these associations in marketing eggs. Poultrymen have a market at Fontana for their cull hens and cockerels and do not need to carry them to the city to sell. In addition, Fontana Farms offers expert advice of University of California men on the operation of poultry plants. Expert advice also is offered rabbit breeders and citrus growers. A citrus-packing plant on the property handles the orange and grapefruit crop.

"The Fontana Farms Company itself is engaged in developing high-grade hens. It maintains seven hatcheries with a total capacity of 400,000 chicks. These eggs are shipped to poultry fanciers throughout Arizona and California and other western States.

"Approximately 6000 persons now reside in the Fontana development. The growth of the community is shown by deposits of the First National Bank, which was organized four years ago with deposits of $272,000, which now have increased to $856,000. In the next few years we expect the growth of our city to increase rapidly due to the many inquiries being received from eastern people seeking ranch homes in California."

RESIDENCE SCARCITY DISCLOSED

Single Family Dwellings Declared Insufficient for Newcomers

The scarcity of single-family dwellings in Los Angeles has reached such proportions that newcomers cannot find suitable homes to rent and are forced to buy in order to have a place in which to live, according to L. A. Hardie, sales manager of the Huntington Palisades division of the Santa Monica Land and Water Company, who cites figures to substantiate his statement.

"The statistics on home building in metropolitan Los Angeles disclosed a decrease of new single-family residences in 1929 of 25 per cent under 1928," says Hardie. "So far this year the total is 30 per cent under the corresponding period of 1929.

"It is obvious that such a falling off in the building of this type of dwelling should cause an acute shortage of such homes and result in an active market at this time.

"We have experienced more interest for homes in Huntington Palisades in the last three months than in any period within the last two years. The demand is so great that two homes being built here by individuals were purchased prior to their completion, and are now occupied, even though the landscaping is not yet in."

COMPLETION OF CUT-OFF SCHEDULED

Bottle-Neck Elimination, Reduction in Travel Time Anticipated

SAN FERNANDO, June 21.—Elimination of what is declared to be one of the worst "bottle-necks" still remaining in Southern California looms with the scheduled early completion of the eight-and-a-half-mile Newhall tunnel cut-off on the route from Los Angeles to Bakersfield.

This job, which has been under way for several months, is expected to reduce materially motoring time between Los Angeles and San Francisco and to relieve traffic congestion through the Newhall tunnel.

The Jahn & Bressie Construction Company is completing construction of the new grade and will lay a total of 1,346,400 square feet of concrete paving, seven to nine inches thick. Consolidated Rock Products Company within ten days will complete delivery of more than 50,000 tons of rock, sand and gravel to the job. All of this material, graded to State specifications and tests, is hauled sixteen miles by truck and trailer from one of the rock company's plants in San Fernando Valley.

REPRESENTATION PLANNED

Company to Send Delegates From All Offices to California Land Title Convention

A strong delegation from the Security Title Insurance and Guarantee Company, representing the head offices and the eighteen branch and affiliated offices of the company, will attend the twenty-fourth annual convention of the California Land Title Association, to be held at Santa Barbara the 26th to 28th inst., inclusive, Security officials report.

At the convention, Waverly P. Waggoner, president of Security Title Insurance and Guarantee Company, will complete his term as president of the association. A number of Security officials will be represented on the program. E. M. McCardle, president of the association last year and vice-president and superintendent of the company's offices in the San Joaquin Valley district, will give an address on the mutual interests of the title man and the realtor. William S. Porter, executive vice-president, will appear on the program, as will also Harvey Humphrey, assistant secretary.

Representatives of the company at the convention will include Glenn A. Schaefer, chairman of the board and general manager of the company; T. W. Haymond, vice-president, secretary and general counsel for the company; William H. B. Haymond, assistant secretary; James R. Ford, vice-president and manager of the Los Angeles office; R. S. Padget, vice-president and treasurer; L. J. Rice, title officer; Edessa L. Hartley, interoffice secretary; Glen W. Chapman, vice-president and manager of the Riverside office; Clyde C. Whitney, vice-president and manager, and A. L. Sloan, vice-president and director of the San Bernardino office; Fred P. Nuttall, vice-president of the El Centro office; R. Carson Smith, assistant secretary and manager of the Santa Ana office; J. H. Hinsdale, vice-president and manager, and D. J. Bradbury, title officer, Ventura office; Edmund Rogers, title officer, San Luis Obispo office; M. J. Davis, manager, Bakersfield office; J. Pierce Gannon, assistant secretary and treasurer, Visalia office; John L. Prince, vice-president and manager, Fresno office, and all employees and executives of the Santa Barbara office.

FILINGS OF LAST WEEK ANALYZED

Total for Year Expected to Exceed That of Last "Boom" Period

Real estate filings in Los Angeles county reached a total of 6580 instruments for last week, as compared with 6711 for the previous period and 7493 for the corresponding week in 1929. This brings the total number of instruments filed during 1930 to date up to 218,184, which is twice as many as were filed during the entire year of 1908, and is almost equal to the total filings for 1920 or 1921, which were 255,000 and 253,186, respectively.

Last week deeds recorded aggregated 2727, as compared with 2769 the previous week; trust deeds, 1638, as against 1670; mortgages, 176, as compared with 180; reconveyances, 1102, as against 1106; releases of mortgages, 650, as compared with 679; notices of completion, 200, as against 219, and leases, 87, as compared with 108, according to the regular weekly report of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company.

The total of 218,184 instruments filed during the current year indicates that the 1930 total will exceed that of 1923, Los Angeles boom year, when 486,000 instruments were recorded, the survey states.

Comparative figures follow:

LAST WEEK

Deeds	2727
Trust deeds	1638
Mortgages	176
Reconveyances	1102

CITY PLANS PURCHASE OF DEEP WELL PUMPS

DINUBA, June 21. (Exclusive)—Owing to lowering of the water level the city of Dinuba plans to purchase two deep well pumps, one for the well in the City Park on Tulare street, and the other for the park on the north side.

The contract for the pumps and their installation will probably be let at an early meeting of the City Trustees.

Screen Couple Purchase Isle Site for Home

Louise Dresser, motion-picture actress, and her husband, John E. Gardner, director for the Fox Film Corporation, have purchased a site on the south slope of Lido Isle facing the Balboa Peninsula. The transaction was handled by Guy Price, former theatrical newspaper critic and now district-manager for Lido Isles sales, according to David S. Duncan, general sales manager for the Hugh Evans & Co., project.

"Lido Isle is essentially a year-around residential community and is so utilized by present residents," Duncan declared. "It provides what we are terming double opportunities for enjoying the beach, meaning by that both the near-by ocean and the body of still water which surrounds the island."

ICE CREAM COMPANY IN NEW PLANT

Makers of Good Humor Formally to Inaugurate Development

Keeping pace with Los Angeles' doubled population, as shown by the 1930 census, Good Humor Ice Cream Company will more than double its production capacity through the opening of its new plant at 6801 Santa Monica Boulevard, which will be thrown open for public preview Friday at 2 p.m.

"The building of our new plant," said President Hawkins of Good Humor Ice Cream Company yesterday, "is our company's latest investment in prosperity, made necessary by Los Angeles' steadily increasing growth, with which our business is keeping pace. This plant will serve as administration headquarters for operations throughout the State, which we will open sectionally.

"Ice cream experts have pronounced the new Good Humor plant the most scientifically planned and equipped ice-cream factory in the United States. The growth of the company since its organization four years ago has made the quarters which it is leaving, at 7205 Santa Monica Boulevard, inadequate. The company operates a fleet of more than fifty refrigerated sales cars in Los Angeles selling direct to the consumer.

Good Humor's new home, in the vertical manner, is modernistic in exterior design. Architectural and engineering plans were prepared by Hamm, Grant & Bruner, Inc. C. M. Williams was the general contractor and O. J. Weber supplied the equipment.

At Friday's formal opening of the plant, to which the public is invited, service clubs, civic organizations and prominent Hollywood personalities will appear in an elaborate program. Visitors will be escorted through the plant, music will be heard, radio stars will entertain and Good Humor ice cream will be served.

Boulevard Site Lease Closed by Corporation

John G. and Margaret M. MacLean have leased their property on the south side of Beverly Boulevard, 100 feet east of Union avenue, for fifteen years at a rental for the term of $22,500, to Howard J. Latimer, president of the Lincoln Leasehold Corporation. The property is sixty feet with a depth of 145 feet and plans are now being prepared by Architect Harry E. Werner for a three-story store and apartment building to cost approximately $55,000. There will be four small shops on the ground floor and twenty-two single and double apartments on the upper floors. Jim Hool, manager of the brokerage department of the Lincoln Leasehold Corporation, represented Latimer while the lessors were represented by Elbert Howard of the Otto G. Wildey Company.

Public Invited to Inspect Modern Industrial Unit

Factory of the Good Humor Ice Cream Company

Service clubs, prominent Hollywood citizens and others will be present Friday when the Good Humor Ice Cream Company holds a "housewarming," at its new factory at 6801 Santa Monica Boulevard.

CHAIN TAKES NEW LEASES ON STORES

Seven Deals Announced Closed in Los Angeles and Near-by Cities

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company has closed seven more leases, not previously announced, in Los Angeles and surrounding cities, according to announcement of Coldwell, Cornwall & Banker, realty brokers.

Stores are located at the northwest corner of Sunset and Sierra Bonita in Los Angeles; at 1005 Main street, Riverside; at 2180 Atlantic Boulevard in Long Beach; on the southwest corner of Pacific avenue and Eleventh street in San Pedro; on Hollister street near Mission, Santa Barbara; at 1319 Sartori avenue in Torrance, and on the south side of Fourth street east of Cherry in Long Beach.

With the exception of the stores at the northwest corner of Sunset and Sierra Bonita and at 1319 Sartori avenue in Torrance, each of the new leases requires the erection of a new building to house the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company. The Sunset location and the Torrance store require extensive alterations of existing buildings, it is stated.

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, which has contracted to pay approximately $2,000,000 in aggregate rentals to Southern California property owners, has agreed to pay an additional rental for these seven new leases of approximately $235,000, and the owners of the seven properties involved will spend approximately $70,000 for new buildings and alterations.

SALES GAINS ANTICIPATED BY COMPANY

Summer Volume Increase Seen in Tourist Travel Figures

With sales for the past week totaling $156,240 in the J. B. Ransom Corporation East Side developments, indications are that East Side realty sales will experience an unusually heavy summer volume for 1930, according to J. B. Ransom, president of the corporation bearing his name.

"Tourists are taking advantage increasingly of the prevailing realty prices," Ransom states. "Figures just released by the All-Year Club show an increase of 27 per cent in the number of out-of-State motorists arriving in California last month over May, 1929. These figures do not include the increased number which arrived in Southern California by other means of transportation. There lies one reason for our anticipation of heavier summer sales, for which we are now laying plans."

VALUATION GAIN IN DECADE CITED

Hollywood Exceeded Only By Los Angeles City

Average Daily Assessment Increases Listed

Pasadena First Per Capita of New Population

Hollywood with a total of $365,088,990 for 1930, as compared with $70,069,945 in 1930, leads all areas in Los Angeles county except the city of Los Angeles in average daily increase in assessed valuation of real and personal property during the ten-year period.

With Los Angeles city registering an average daily gain in assessed valuation of $893,512 for the decade, Hollywood follows next in line with a daily increase of $30,826.

According to a survey made by G. R. Dexter, president of the Bank of Hollywood, based on an analysis made by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, the average daily gains in assessed valuation of the eleven ranking population centers of Los Angeles county for the ten-year period were:

	Daily gain for 10 years
Los Angeles city	$893,512
Hollywood	30,826
Long Beach	15,174
Pasadena	11,779
Glendale	10,778
Beverly Hills	10,000
Santa Monica	10,043
Alhambra	7,000
Huntington Park	6,500
Inglewood	4,413
Pomona	3,150

Each of the 30,521 new citizens who have been added to Pasadena's population since 1930 has increased that city's assessed valuation $5953, giving Pasadena first rank in per-capita increase in assessed valuation as applied to new population. Figures for the eleven cities follow:

	Inc. per New citizen	Population Increase
Pasadena	$5953	30,521
Beverly Hills	4807	18,704
Los Angeles	2307	387,687
Long Beach	2307	33,943
Santa Monica	2307	19,341
Hollywood	2418	151,041
Glendale	1878	40,971
Pomona	1259	7,500
Alhambra	1239	20,435
Huntington Park	1129	20,688
Inglewood	1057	18,519

In assessed valuation of stock, bonds and solvent credits Pasadena with a total of $102,292,455 and Hollywood, $102,000,100 rank next to Los Angeles which has reached the figure of $698,648,255. These totals indicate a tremendous per capita purchasing power, the Dexter survey states.

Soap Company Places Order for Machinery

Frank R. Beaver, vice-president and manager of the Doheny Stone Drill Company, announced yesterday that the Torrance plant had received an order from Procter & Gamble of Cincinnati for high-grade precision machinery for use in the latter company's soap making plants.

The machinery ordered consists of special transmissions to be used in the Procter & Gamble plants in Hamilton, Ont., Baltimore, O., and Cincinnati, O.

The Doheny Stone Drill Company manufactures Hidrill machinery for the drilling of straight holes for oil wells.

ASSESSORS COMPLETE ARIZONA'S TAX ROLLS

PHOENIX, June 21. (Exclusive)—With collapse in the courts of a legislative act that would have raised realty valuations all over the State, assessors are completing the Arizona tax rolls on last year's valuations.

REALTY BOARD PLANS ACTIVITIES

Work Not to Be Curtailed During Summer

Property Owner Education Will Be Opened

Intensive Tax Adjustment Effort Expected

That activities of the Los Angeles Realty Board will not be curtailed during the summer months, vacation season is evidenced by the extensive program announced by board officials. With the exception of discontinuing the weekly luncheon meetings, committees will function, and matters started during the year and starting on many new ones.

Immediately upon the return of delegates from the recent annual convention of the National Association of Real Boards held in Toronto in July, the plans for newly created property membership in the board will be thrown open. All property owners in Los Angeles who are not brokers' or salesmen's members will be invited to join. Campaigns for the organization of property membership classifications will be made, and the work of committee members will be begun early in the month of July.

The educational advertising campaign which has been under way for the past six months will be continued, according to Maurice E. Harris, past president of the board and chairman of the convention committee. One of the events of the annual convention, held in Los Angeles board hopes to win an award for the second time.

Especially intensive work is expected from the taxation and assessment committees, which will make recommendations for changes in bills to be submitted to the next session of the State legislature. This is in line with the efforts of the board to effect a revision of the taxation burden which real estate is bearing, and to end the present tendency to unjust and unnecessary assessments by officials report.

Sales Involve Ocean and Bay Front Holdings

NEWPORT BEACH, June 21. (Exclusive)—Ocean and bay front property valued at more than $500,000 has been sold here in the past two weeks, W. L. Jones and L. W. Briggs, brokers, announced yesterday.

The greater part of the transactions with a few deals closed by the owners.

One residential site brought a price of $800 per front foot.

The Industrial Properties Corporation of Los Angeles, purchased the property of the ocean-front property and some of the land on the bay front, through the Jones-Briggs office, it was announced. One of the largest deals handled by the Briggs office was the purchase by Fred Lewis, Spadra miner, of 148 feet of bay frontage from S. Shepard and R. E. Berry.

REALTY BOARD PLANS ACTIVITY

Work Not to Be Curtailed During Summer

Property Owner Division Will Be Opened

Intensive Tax Adjustment Effort Expected

That activities of the Los Angeles Realty Board will not be curtailed during the summer months as vacation season is evidenced in the extensive program mapped out by board officials. With the exception of discontinuing the regular weekly luncheon meetings, all committees will function, completing matters started during the year and starting on much new work.

Immediately upon the return of delegates from the sessions of the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in Toronto in July, the rolls of the newly created property owner membership in the board will be thrown open. All property owners in Los Angeles who do not have brokers' or salesmen's licenses will be invited to join. Complete plans for the organization of this new membership classification have been made, and the work of enrolling members will be begun during the month of July.

The educational advertising campaign which has been under way for the past six months will be continued, according to Mason Cass, past president of the board, who has been appointed chairman of this committee. The committee has compiled statistics for use in the campaign. Copies of the advertisements that have appeared in local papers will be taken to Toronto and entered in an advertising contest open to all boards in cities of more than 100,000. The contest is one of the features of the annual convention, and the Los Angeles board hopes to win the award for the second consecutive time.

Especially intensive work is expected from the taxation and appraisal committees, which will make recommendations for new bills to be submitted to the coming session of the State Legislature. This is in line with the policy of the board to effect a readjustment of the taxation burden which now rests on real estate is bearing, and to curb the present tendency to unwarranted and unnecessary assessment, board officials report.

Sales Involve Ocean and Bay Front Holdings

NEWPORT BEACH, June 21. (Exclusive)—Ocean and bay front property valued at more than $[illegible],000 has been sold here during the past two weeks, W. L. Jordan and L. W. Briggs, brokers, made the greater part of the transactions with a few deals closed by property owners.

One residential site brought a price of $500 per front foot.

The Industrial Properties, Inc., Los Angeles, purchased the majority of the ocean-front property and some of the land on the bay front, through the Jordan sale. One of the largest deals handled by the Briggs office was the purchase by Fred Lewis, Spadra rancher, of 144 feet of bay frontage from W. S. Shepard and R. E. Bering.

SEA INSPIRES DECORATION

For inspiration in renovating the bathroom the advice is given, "Go down to the sea." The newest bathroom decoration is the ocean scheme. Green would predominate in such a room. A mural scene around the wall would be supplemented by green curtains, towels, bath mats and lotion containers.

DAY VALUATION EXCEEDS APRIL

[illegible] District Leads in Most Divisions

Hollywood Takes First in Value of Permits

Eagle Mesa Section Also Near Forefront

[illegible] construction during May showed an increase of more than $[illegible],000 in valuation, compared with the preceding month, according to the California Title Insurance Company. The Southwest claimed first honors in largest number of building permits issued with a total of [illegible], valued at $[illegible],486. The Angeles Mesa, or Del Rey, district, was second in this respect with 100 permits valued at $662,230. Hollywood was first in highest valuation of building operations commenced during May with an expenditure of more than $1,362,000 for the eighty-one permits started in that district. The Southwest was second, and the Eagle Mesa district third.

The Southwest also played an important part in the construction of the month's residences last month, the forty-six, costing, in all, $345,-[illegible], being the point of greatest cost of the districts, however, several districts had larger totals than this. The Los Angeles ranked first with [illegible] permits aggregating $507,-[illegible], while the Angeles Mesa area [illegible] in both number and cost [illegible] of this type with sixty-six, [illegible] $[illegible],823.

In another first place was taken by the Southwest last month, in the [illegible] of permits for duplexes. [illegible] two-family dwellings [illegible] under construction in [illegible], to cost more than [illegible]. As far as cost of these permits is concerned, the Southwest remained first place to the Angeles district, the latter area having [illegible] for twenty homes of this [illegible] at $113,580. This district [illegible] number of permits for two-family homes issued [illegible]. The Highland Park-[illegible] area and the Wilshire district also figured prominently in the [illegible] of these buildings, [illegible] taking third place in number [illegible] eleven, totaling $43,809, [illegible] the Wilshire district coming in [illegible] with eight, aggregating [illegible].

[illegible] flats and apartments [illegible] were commenced last month [illegible] the Southwest, fifteen in Hollywood and thirteen in the Wilshire [illegible], giving these areas first, [illegible] and third places respectively [illegible] number of permits for multiple-[illegible] house permits issued during [illegible] in east of these homes, Hollywood led with a total of $645,000, [illegible] district was next with [illegible], and the Southwest third [illegible].

[illegible] totaling forty-five, and valued at $[illegible],580, were placed under construction last month in the city. In this number, the Southwest had [illegible] total, totaling $108,000, while Hollywood was second in number with [illegible] totaling $119,300. This valuation was higher than that for any other month of the city, though [illegible] followed by the total for the Eagle Rock district, which was $119,-[illegible]. The San Fernando Valley was [illegible] active in the issuing of permits for business and industrial [illegible] last month, eleven buildings of this type having been started in that territory, involving an [illegible] of more than $16,175. The section of Hollywood's new [illegible] to home business and industry, however, reached a total of [illegible], while the Southwest [illegible] second place in both number [illegible] and with nine permits, aggregating $29,650.

Ground Broken for Boulevard Project

Spanish Idea Prevails

Construction of a seventy-room hotel for the Laguna Beach Hotel Company has been started by H. W. Baum & Co., contractors. The design, of Southern California Spanish type, is by Architect Gilbert Stanley Underwood, who will supervise construction. The site, which has been leased to the hotel company for a period of ninety-nine years, fronts on Coast Boulevard and runs through to the Board Walk.

FACT AND COMMENT

Angeles Builders' Exchange in the formation of the building and modernization branch of that body for the purpose of encouraging home and business property owners to remodel their holdings.

While this is a comparatively new city there are countless numbers of homes and store buildings in need of modernization and enlargement. Such work has been neglected often through procrastination, and concerted effort along educational lines should greatly stimulate building activity in this respect.

Many home owners whose families have increased during the years, often have expressed the desire for an additional sleeping room, a more modern bath, or for garage alterations to permit the storage of two cars instead of one. Business property owners have let store fronts become obsolete and need to be shown the possibilities for greater revenue by modernization.

Greater results can be accomplished in the building line today for less money than in many years, and the movement on the part of the Builders' Exchange Bureau to stimulate this activity is timely. A two-fold good can be accomplished; the unemployment situation relieved and property owners benefited by maximum results from expenditures on improvements.

It is to be hoped that builders and material houses of this city will follow the lead of those in the East and show their indorsement of the project in a material way by backing financially the plan of the exchange to conduct this educational effort.

Civic Economy

The recent abandonment of a large number of city improvements by the City Council is indicative of the increasing effect the voice of the property owner is beginning to have in the expenditure of tax money. The projects abandoned were opposed in the first place by the majority of the property owners affected but at the time of their inauguration these protests were unavailing.

Much has been said in recent months regarding special assessments and such protests evidently have not been in vain, as is indicated by these recent abandonment proceedings.

But that such improvements should have been carried as far as they have over the opposition of property owners and then abandoned at this late day after considerable of the taxpayers' funds have been expended is a condition which should not be permitted to exist.

Prosperity Ahead

The coming of the Olympic Games to Los Angeles in 1932 already is beginning to have its effect upon business conditions here. The games undoubtedly will bring thousands to this city whose expenditures will run well into the millions, but the beneficial effects two years prior to the date of the games may be regarded as an indication of the real benefits to come.

The recent announcement of the construction of five large buildings in this city, including a hotel and apartment-house, carried the information that the projects were initiated now for a two-fold reason. First, building materials are at their lowest cost in years, and second, the backers of these projects desire to have the structures completed and in operation before the time set for the games.

Last week a realty developer announced the start of construction work on a large number of homes. He declared that it was his intention to have these homes built now so as to be prepared for the increased realty activity he felt certain to be due next year. This activity he believes will come in advance of the Olympic Games and largely because of them.

Los Angeles business men and property owners may look forward to the coming years with confidence.

HOTEL ERECTION STARTED

Formal Opening of Structure Replacing Former Beach Hostelry Scheduled for August

LAGUNA BEACH, June 21.—Ground was broken last week for a seventy-room hotel to be erected on the site of the old Laguna Beach Hotel. The new hotel, which will bear the same name, is being built by the Laguna Beach Hotel Company, of which William R. Cochrane of Los Angeles is president. It is of the Southern California Spanish type of architecture and was designed by Architect Gilbert Stanley Underwood of Los Angeles, who will supervise construction.

The site of the building has a frontage of 225 feet on Coast Boulevard, 204 feet on Laguna avenue and 227 feet on the Board Walk. The ground has been leased to the hotel company for a period of ninety-nine years. It is valued at $125,-000 and owned by a syndicate composed of W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., Richard Lacey, Joel R. Page, Edna R. Pomeroy, the estate of the late Abram A. Post and L. H. Roseberry. The contract has been awarded to H. W. Baum & Co. Work is to be completed in time for the formal opening August 15.

William B. Hanner, formerly manager of the Oasis Hotel at Palm Springs, has leased the hotel. The deal represents an entire cash transaction. The building will cost $175,-000 and the furnishings $50,000. The deal was consummated by B. O. Miller, vice-president of the Hollingsworth company, and Joseph I. Sullivan, representing the hotel company.

Plans call for a main dining-room on the ocean front, 57.6 by 38 feet. Off that will be a olunge, 30 by 45 feet. The lobby will be on the Coast Boulevard front and will connect with the lounge through a galleria which will carry exhibitions of Southland paintings.

Six stores will be built on the Coast Boulevard front, including a coffee shop. The building will have three stories on the boulevard side and two stories on the Board Walk. A tunnel under the Board Walk will lead from the beach to a specially equipped basement. Although the present building program calls for seventy rooms, provision has been made in the plans for an extra wing to contain 100 rooms.

The decorations of the building and the furnishings of the rooms will carry out the Spanish idea. The lobby and dining-room will have beamed ceilings. The dining-room, on the ocean side, is to open on a tiled patio, which will be provided with awning-covered tables. Another feature will be an interior patio with a fountain in the center.

The original Laguna Beach Hotel was built by the late Joseph Yoch. Following his death in 1925 the property was sold to the present holding syndicate for $[illegible],000. It was purchased by Yoch for $600. At the time it was purchased by the syndicate it represented the largest land deal ever made in Laguna Beach. The ninety-nine-year lease is the second ever made in Orange county, the first also having been made in the Artist Colony.

Pontoon Decks Completed at Oil Tank Farm

Further expansions to the tank farm of the Rio Grande Oil Company at Vinvale, near Los Angeles, were recorded last week with completion of four more Gallagher deck contracts by Consolidated Steel Corporation, Ltd.

These floating pontoon decks, each fabricated of steel to protect the contents of the 134,000-barrel tanks against fire and evaporation, were part of a contract for ten let by the Rio Grande Company to the steel organization this spring. The ten decks, blanket a total of 1,340,-000 barrels of oil and gasoline, tankage for which has been erected by the oil concern this year. The Vinvale tank farm is one of the largest in Southern California.

CHURCH PLANS ADDITION

HUNTINGTON PARK, June 21. (Exclusive)—A frame building is to be erected by St. Luke's Lutheran Church congregation to adjoin the present church building. The addition will be used for Sunday-school classrooms.

TEN FIRMS MOVING TO NEW AREA

University Section Lists Leases for Quarters by Local Concerns

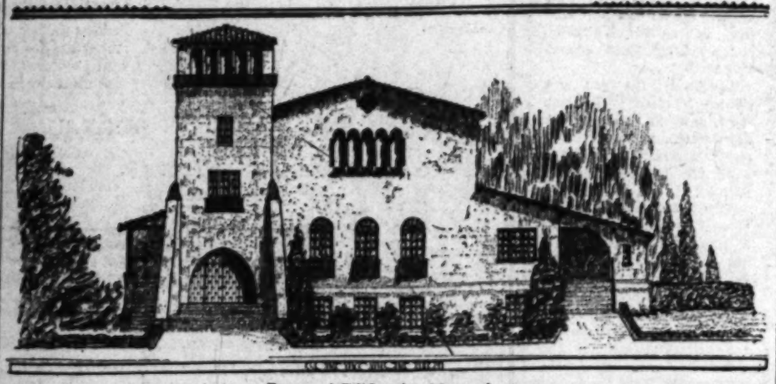
Ten business firms have contracted for quarters in Westwood in recent weeks, according to an announcement during the week by A. H. Wilkins, executive vice-president of the Janss Investment Corporation. Two of them, Lippen's Pharmacy and the Life Trust and Bond Corporation, have taken quarters in the Janss Investment Corporation Building at Santa Monica and Westwood boulevards.

In the apartment section immediately surrounding the village, there is marked activity in construction, Wilkins declared. The foundation was laid last week for the Drake apartments, consisting of eight double units and costing $25,000. This building is located on Tiverton avenue and embraces the new central patio feature. A large open fireplace, pool and typical old-world stairway are featured in the patio. The building is of early California design and closely adheres to the Monterey type. P. P. Lewis is the architect and the Westwood Mortgage and Investment Company, a subsidiary of the Janss Corporation, the contractors.

THEATER REMODELED

SAN FERNANDO, June 21. (Exclusive)—Owners of the Cody Theater here have closed the playhouse for the purpose of installing talking-picture apparatus. This, with other repairs and refurnishings, will cost about $25,000, it is stated by John T. Rennie, manager.

Congregation Plans Resumption of Building Work



Proposed Edifice for Monrovia

After two years, work will be resumed on the First Christian Church building at Monrovia, according to announcement last week.

CONSTRUCTION FIGURES GIVEN

East, Southeast District Total $5,787,700

Residential, Unannounced Work Not Included

Largest Contract Awarded by City for Viaduct

More than $5,787,700 is involved in construction activities in the district east and southeast from downtown Los Angeles, as disclosed yesterday with the release by the J. B. Ransom Corporation of a monthly summary prepared by the FitzGerald Engineering and Construction Company.

According to C. M. Hamilton, director of sales for the Ransom organization, developers of the East Side, this total does not include residential construction which is under way nor a number of projects where the total expenditures have not been made public.

Figures as announced cover ten street improvement projects where the contracts have been awarded, totaling $1,505,935.12; seven street improvement projects where bids have been requested, totaling $1,048,-785; contracts have been awarded for five factory buildings and a school structure totaling $1,195,000 while bids requested covering buildings total fourteen with a total of $2,040,000.

The largest item under contracts awarded for street improvement work is a total of $1,246,635 being expended by the city of Los Angeles for the Fourth street viaduct project. Street improvement projects for which bids have been requested but no estimate made public include: Los Angeles county for temporary bridges over the San Gabriel Wash; Los Angeles City for paving of Huntington Drive from Locke to Van Horne; Los Angeles county, paving of New Avenue in Monterey Park; City of Montebello for widening of Whittier Boulevard.

Included in the bids requested for street improvement work is $600,000 for improvement of Washington street, and $300,000 for the first unit of the Sixth street viaduct.

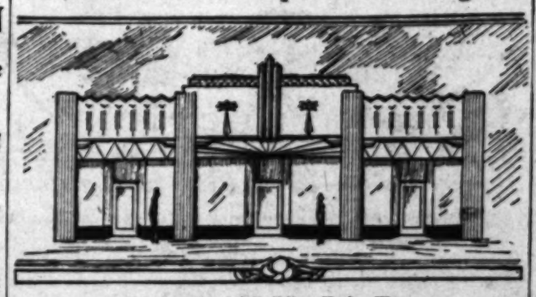
The National Lead Company has purchased a factory site at Bay and Wilson streets, and will erect a factory within the year.

A contract in the sum of $10,237.50 has been awarded for levee work along the San Gabriel River.

Members Plan for Convention

The members of the Santa Cruz Realty Board, under the leadership of President James A. Sheldon, have completed many of the arrangements for the entertainment of the members of the California Real Estate Association, who will meet in twenty-sixth annual convention at the Surf City October 22-24.

Pico Boulevard Improvement Begun



Construction of Building Under Way

Construction work has started on a three-unit store building at 4308 Pico Boulevard for M. P. Freebey, owner, on plans prepared by Walter Fuesler, architect. The improvement will cost approximately $10,000 and will be 56x70 feet in dimensions. The Chapman Ice Cream Company will occupy one of the units. W. C. Scott, realty broker, has the rental of the building.

BRICK FINISH POPULARITY ON INCREASE

Many New Shapes Appear in Modern Apartments Being Erected

Modern apartment-house architecture is following a new trend to such an extent that experts in exterior brickwork are now said to be devoting a major portion of their time to designing new shapes, finishes and colorings in brick.

Apartment-house construction of the better class in Los Angeles during the past two years shows this trend clearly, according to Fred B. Ortman, executive vice-president of Gladding, McBean & Co., clay products manufacturers. While brick has always been the favored facing material for this type of structure, it was not until recent years that thought was given to improving colors and styles in line with the artistic development of most other building facings, he said.

Two of the most recent examples of the adaptation of art ideas to brick are found in the new Chateau LaMartine Apartments, on South Normandie, Hollywood, and the Fanuel Hall Apartments on South Cochran, Ortman stated. In the first structure the company's new old rose ruffle brick were used, a brick that is made up in shades of tan, purple, lavender and old rose with a ruffled wire cut face; in the other, an extremely rugged-faced brick, suggestive of weathered age, were specified. The architect for both of these buildings was Max Maltzman, with Harry Feigenbaum as the general contractor.

FACTORY CONTEMPLATED

Erection of a factory building in Huntington Beach to house a plant for the manufacture of white lead, red lead and litharge is contemplated by J. D. Wright of Long Beach. Estimated cost is $50,000.

SMALLER HOMES TO BE BUILT

Demand to be Met for Conservatively Priced Residences

Announcement was made yesterday by C. E. Toberman that four additional Mediterranean type homes will soon be built in the Outpost by the Toberman Company. The homes will be smaller than those constructed recently in the Outpost, with each representing an approximate investment of $25,000, including the site.

Each of the homes will contain three bedrooms and servants' quarters. The sale of three homes in the Outpost in two weeks time, with negotiations pending for two other residences, was responsible for the Toberman Company arranging to construct additional residences to accommodate the demand for the smaller and conservatively priced type, it was stated.

The Outpost architectural jury has approved the tentative plans for the Mediterranean home to be built by David M. Hughes and the construction work will be started shortly, said Toberman.

SANATORIUM PLANNED

PRIZE WINNERS TO BE SELECTED

Kitchen Competition Final Entry Date Past

Hundreds of Designs Sent to Two Divisions

Jury to Hold Meetings for Judging This Week

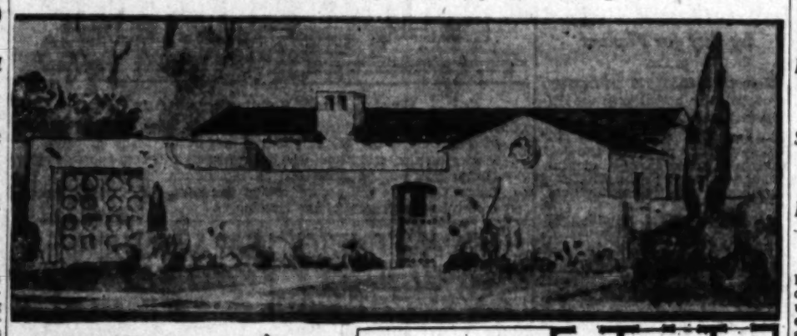
Selection of prize winners in the perfect kitchen competition sponsored by the Architects' Building Material Exhibit, Fifth and Figueroa streets is scheduled for this week following the closing date for the receipt of entries yesterday. Several hundred designs have been submitted in the two divisions of the contest, according to Miss M. L. Schmidt, president of the exhibit.

The jury of awards plans to hold several meetings this week, beginning Wednesday, to consider the many plans submitted by architects and by housewives and others not in the architectural division. Should the judging be completed this week announcement of the winners of the $950 in cash prizes will be made next Sunday.

The prizes will be awarded in two divisions. The first prize for housewives is $300, and the second is $100. For architects and architectural draftsmen there is a first prize of $400 and a second of $150. The competition has been held for the purpose of stimulating interest in better arranged and better equipped kitchens. It was approved as of educational value by the executive committee of the Southern California Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

The committee of judges includes Harold C. Chambers, president of the Southern California Chapter of the American Institute of Architects; Mrs. H. W. Michael, representing the Los Angeles Federation of Women's Clubs; Mabelle Wyman, chef of The Times; Miss M. L. Schmidt, and William Kienhols, director of vocational education of the Los Angeles Board of Education. Architect W. L. Risley will act as professional adviser to the jury but will have no vote.

Ideal Five-Room Plan for California Reproduced



HOME PLAN PRESENTED HIGH HONOR

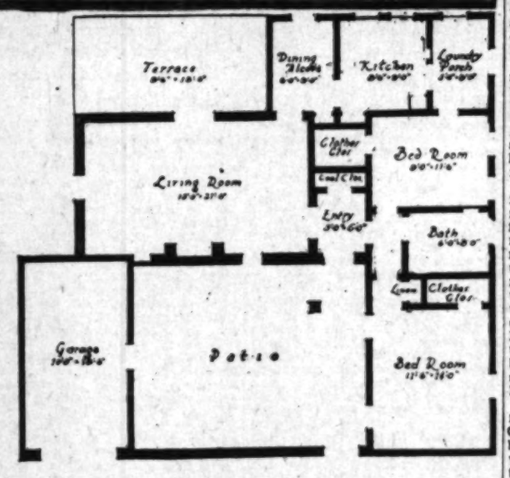
Design Featuring Troweled Stucco Given First Prize by Award Jury

BY THEODORE A. KOETZLI
Director Small House Plan Service

The house here produced designed by Walter L. Moody, architect, and awarded first prize in a competition held by the Community Arts Association of Santa Barbara, combines so many of the items considered by both architects and laymen as essential to a house of five rooms, that it will repay careful study.

The competition demands were for a dwelling suitable for California, of not more than five rooms, located on an inside lot of fifty-foot frontage, to provide a home for a family of good taste, with beauty of design obtained by harmony of lines, color and proportion, and simplicity of treatment of the house and grounds.

The jury of architects in passing upon the design commended particularly the general grouping, the roof lines, and the attractiveness of the whole. They pointed out that the partitions were well arranged structurally, the units of the plan skillfully related to each other, the rooms well placed and lighted, and that the relation of house with the street, motor drive and garden is ideal.



Competition Demands Answered

Details of the above design, by Walter L. Moody, architect, may be seen at the Small House Plan Service, 6537 Lexington avenue, Hollywood.

ENTRANCE WELL PLANNED

The entrance to the house, through the patio, either from the garage or through the grilled garden gate, is happily planned, and the little entry hall itself adds a pleasant and convenient preliminary note introductory to the hospitality of the living room.

The latter is charmingly arranged, intimately tied in with the patio in front, with vistas through French doors to the terrace and garden in the rear. Possibly placing the fireplace in the end wall might accentuate the welcome to the entering guest and also simplify the arrangement of furniture.

A ceiling height of more than ten feet may be attained in the living-room by a segmental vaulted ceiling, adding considerably to its impressiveness. But if economy is necessary, a nine-foot flat ceiling will afford a thoroughly satisfying result.

PRIVACY AFFORDED

A desirable feature is the dining alcove just off one end of the living-room, affording a privacy which is missing when the dining-room is combined with the living-room. The ceiling is sufficiently low to give the room a feeling of coziness and comfort. A cupboard for dishes, table linen and silver is conveniently located next to the door.

As to the exterior, the architect's idea is to use for the roof heavy cedar shingles, oiled and left to weather. These will, in the course of time, take on beautiful natural wood colors in gray and brown, sufficiently varied and enhanced by contrast with the stucco walls. A texture is given to the plaster by showing trowel marks; it should have sufficient irregularity to account for a certain imperfection which belongs to humankind.

The requirement of simplicity was exactly fulfilled. The only attempt at ornament is found in the circular placque in the gable end.

The building cost can probably be kept within $4000 to $5000.

FACING OF WOOD DESIGN FEATURE

Frame House Plan Offered by Architects

Simplicity and Economy Two Chief Factors

Drawing Stresses Comfort and Convenience

A great majority of the small-house designs that are available today call for a type of construction using either stucco or brick, builders declare. It is very seldom that a frame house that has the charm of good design is offered the public for its inspection, they say.

The design shown today was submitted by Arthur C. Munson, architect, and Allen Ruoff, associate, to the Small Home Plan Bureau in the Architects' Building Material Exhibit at Fifth and Figueroa streets. It is a small, inexpensive home, illustrating the simplicity that is possible in the frame house.

The floor plan is regarded as being well executed and gives the utmost in comfort and convenience for a home of this size. The living-room and dining-room are so arranged that it is possible to throw them together, making one large room of the two. The storm porch takes the place of an entrance hall without the loss of floor place that occurs when the hall is included. Bedrooms and closet space are held to be adroitly arranged, and the bath room is so situated that it is accessible from all parts of the house.

This design is one of the forty-five included in the book of Small California Homes that was published by the plan bureau under the supervision of the Los Angeles Architectural Club, the Architects' League of Hollywood and the Pasadena Architectural Club. The house contains 850 square feet and can be built for $2500 to $3000, depending on the interior finish and the kind of materials used. Complete working drawings and specifications are available at the Small Home Plan Bureau at Fifth and Figueroa streets.

HOME FINANCING EXPLAINED

Home Buyers and Builders Who Borrow Divided Into Classes According to Available Cash

BY GEORGE A. SCHNEIDER
Prepared for the California Building-Loan League
(Copyright, 1930, by George A. Schneider)

[This is the seventeenth of a series of articles designed primarily for the home owner of moderate means.]

In discussions relating to plans for home financing, it is customary to divide home buyers and home builders who borrow into three classes, as follows:

(a) Those who can supply in cash 50 per cent or more of the price of the property and who have access to sources from which the remainder needed can be readily obtained.

(b) Those who can supply cash within the approximate limits of from 25 to 40 per cent of the price of the property and require financial assistance to the extent of the entire remainder required.

(c) Those who can supply in cash 10 to 25 per cent of the price of the property which they contemplate buying or having built for them.

Real estate financing up to 50 per cent of the value of the property does not ordinarily present any serious problem for the home owner. Families in the first class will, therefore, experience little difficulty in financing their home, whether they purchase or build, since there are a number of sources from which the amount needed over and above their cash payment can be obtained on the security of a first mortgage or a first deed of trust. However, when the loan is for construction purposes, they may be obliged to pay a slightly higher interest rate or pay a bonus or commission for obtaining the loan.

FINANCING PROBLEM

When purchasing property, a buyer in the first class will customarily complete his financing on one of the following plans:

(a) If the property under consideration is not mortgaged, he may pay 50 per cent in cash and execute a note secured by a purchase-money mortgage to the seller to cover the remainder of the purchase price.

(b) If there is no mortgage on the property, he may borrow 50 per cent on a first mortgage, and by adding the proceeds of this loan to the 50 per cent in cash which he has available, pay the seller the entire purchase price in cash.

(c) If there is a mortgage of 50 per cent or more of the purchase price already on the property, he may pay the difference between the amount of the mortgage and the purchase price in cash and take title subject to the mortgage, or he may assume its payment. (See existing mortgage a part of sale, in article on notes and mortgages.)

JUNIOR LIENS

(d) If the existing mortgage is less than 50 per cent and its holder is willing to accept payment, or if it contains a provision for payment before maturity, it may be paid off out of the proceeds of a new loan of 50 per cent, and the difference between the amount of the original and the new loan together with the cash payment of the buyer, is paid to the seller. In lieu of this procedure, the seller may be willing to carry the difference between the existing mortgage and the cash payment in the form of a purchase money deed of trust, as explained later in the discussion of junior financing.

In the foregoing classification of home owners, the second group includes those who can supply in cash from 25 to approximately 40 per cent of the price of the property, but require financial assistance for the remainder of the sum required. Their problem is to bridge the gap between the amount that can be borrowed on a straight first mortgage and the amount of their available cash. This is accomplished through second mortgage or junior financing, although in some instances the financing can be more satisfactorily handled by means of a high-percentage amortized first loan.

INTEREST IN PLAN SHOWN

Power Bureau Reports Response of Builders in Receiving Aid in Electrical Arrangement

Intense interest is being shown in the Bureau of Power and Light plan to assist builders of homes in Los Angeles in the working out of the electrical arrangement of residences, according to a report of bureau engineers.

More and more builders are taking an interest in the interior arrangement of the home as well as the exterior beauty, the report states. "Beauty is not the only factor in building a home," a prominent builder is quoted as declaring. "This is especially true as to the kitchen. The bride who arranges her home is, naturally, solicitous as to the refinements and attractiveness of her entire home. She wants a kitchen that will be appealing to the eye. But she must not neglect the matter of convenience and efficiency.

"One million women today are cooking with electricity. The electric range has become a definite part of the home equipment. So, too, is the electric refrigerator and all the many needed small pieces of electric equipment.

"The properly arranged kitchen in the modern home must take these factors into consideration and see that wall plugs are properly placed, that consideration is given throughout the home to all of the electrical demands."

Power Bureau engineers have pointed out the need of careful study of electrical planning before the home is built. So many people find after the home is occupied that many convenient electric outlets were left out of the original plans. Careful planning beforehand will avert this disappointment, says the planning engineers.

Distribution of a book entitled "How to Plan an Electrical Home" is being planned by the Power Bureau. This book covers the subject of proper wiring, proper distribution of illumination, planning for household aids. It contains, also, many hints on home decoration.

Already being distributed is a scrapbook "Ideas for My Home." It is substantially bound and designed to give the women, who some day plan to build, a place to put clippings of ideas which have been collected over a long period of time. A large number of requests have been received by the Bureau of Power and Light for the scrapbook, officials report.

"DO NOT PICK" SIGN ABSENT

Guests at Hostelry Invited to Gather Flowers for Room Decoration

There are no "Do Not Pick" signs in the flower gardens of the Fontana Farms Inn at Fontana.

Visitors at the inn are greeted by cards in their rooms inviting them to pick flowers with which to decorate their rooms. Scissors and vases are provided for the purpose.

"Our guests often remark about this because it is such a reversal of form," reports Mrs. Harry E. Bonnell, hostess and manager. "But I find guests enjoy picking the flowers themselves and decorating their rooms with flowers that are their favorites.

"When guests know the privilege is theirs, it is not abused," she added.

Verner B. McClurg, Architect, designed this $7,000 Spanish home of charming proportions.

Have you obtained your copy of the "Idea Scrap Book" illustrated above which the Bureau of Power and Light offers to anyone living within the Los Angeles city limits for 10c to cover cost of mailing? It contains 36 pages, including homebuilding hints and blank pages in which to paste up your cherished clippings of clever interiors. Use the coupon for both the Scrap Book and a copy of "How to Plan an Electrical Home."

And they lived happily ever after

They couldn't afford a big expensive house... $7,000 was all that Jim could undertake... but the $7,000 included a modern wiring plan!

And that means a modern fast-cooking electric range in the kitchen... a range so easy to use that even a bride can manage delicious, economical meals without spending hours in a hot kitchen and spoiling pretty hands scrubbing blackened pots and pans.

It means electric wall heaters in every room... clean, safe and unobtrusive.

It means plenty of convenience outlets for lamps and radio... for fan and vacuum cleaner... for washing machine and electric ironer... and all the other electrical helps which do so much to keep home-making fun and smooth out the temper-ruffling struggles of inexperienced young wives to keep the new home bright and shining.

Perhaps neither of the young people realize it... but the few extra dollars spent for modern wiring will mean more to them in years to come than most any investment they could make!

ART CLUB PRESENTS EXHIBITION

Contemporary Creative California Architecture to be Shown

A representative exhibit of contemporary creative architecture in California will be on view at the California Art Club, in Hollenbeck Park, this week beginning Tuesday.

The exhibit was recently assembled at the University of California at Los Angeles, will tour the coast this year under auspices of the Southern Association of Museum Directors, and will later be seen in eastern cities as evidence of the creative contribution being made in California to the development of architecture.

Works shown are those of Lee D. Peters, Richard Neutra, J. R. Davidson, John Weber, Mueller, Pflueger of San Francisco, Lutah Weber, and R. M. Schindler.

The last of these, R. M. Schindler, has recently returned from Europe and will speak on his impressions of recent architectural developments in New York, next Thursday evening, the 26th. inst., at the California Art Club. The exhibition will be open to the public each day from 2 to 5 p.m.

The grammar school built in 1922 cost $100,000; bonds for a $410,000 Newport Harbor Union High School and for a $80,000 grammar schol were voted, and construction will begin soon. The city has beautified several miles of the Southern Pacific right of way with shrubs and flowers.

Two years ago development started on the street, sewer, water and lighting system in Dana Point and six months ago residences were under construction. When the recent census count was taken there were 140 residents in the city.

A water system has been established with pavements, curbs, walks, ornamental lights and tree planting amounting to $1,500,000 in cost. A hotel, costing $750,000, is under construction.

OTHER BEACH CITIES

Capistrano Beach has a population of 549 today and fifty persons are reported to have been living there ten years ago. A school plant costing $35,000 was erected three years ago; 124 students are enrolled as against 9 ten years ago.

Five years ago there were ten persons living on the site where San Clemente stands today. When the census was taken this year 688 persons were counted. Incorporated in 1929, San Clemente has forty miles of paved streets and sidewalks, a beach club, estimated to cost $100,000; school, $75,000; $100,000 community clubhouse; many beautiful residences and business blocks.

Figures disclosed by Stanley E. Goode, supervisor of census of the southern district, show a population in Seal Beach township in the 1930 census of 2016, which includes the city of Seal Beach, 1161, and Sunset Beach and the surrounding community, 150.

Improvements in the district have been many. Surf Colony was planned last July and today there are sixty-five cottages and residences.

Huntington Beach township has a population of 11,132. This township, six miles square, includes Huntington Beach with a population of 3699; Wintersburg, 400; Westminster, 491; Midway City, 485, and Polsa and Talbert, which are not tabulated separately.

Midway City had in 1910 but two or three farm houses on the site where it now stands. In four years time it has gained a population of 485.

The township of San Juan includes San Juan Capistrano of 784 population, Dana Point, 140, Capistrano Beach, 549, El Toro, 108, and San Clemente, 668.

The township of Laguna has a population of 2165, which includes Laguna Beach, 1974 persons, and the surrounding territory.

TUSTIN EXPANDS

No record was kept of the population or of the number of buildings in Tustin ten years ago, but today in the city which was recently incorporated there are 924 persons living and in the township the population is 4070, which includes the ranches in the vicinity. During the ten-year period two churches have been erected, as well as an elaborate high school plant and two elementary school buildings, three large citrus packing plants, a grape juice factory, ten building blocks and many homes. The assessed valuation of the city, incorporated in September, 1927, was $562,900. The chief industries are the growing of citrus fruits, walnuts grapes and avocados. The annual production of oranges in carloads is 1450; of lemons, 350 carloads; of walnuts, 1250 tons, and grape juice, 40,000 gallons.

Tustin is located eight miles back from the coast, but the township of Tustin runs to the city of Laguna Beach and joins the township of Newport Beach.

In the Tustin grammar schools ten years ago there were 272 pupils registered and today there is an enrollment of 550 students. The high school today has 317 pupils and ten years ago there was no school.

Totals	1023	857	$4,084,328

A survey of real estate activity in the city of Los Angeles last week based on a weekly compilation made by the Fidelity Savings and Loan Association shows that a total of 1023 transfers of property was recorded during that period, and that 857 trust deeds and mortgages were filed involving the total of $4,084,328 in realty financing.

The southwest, Wilshire, San Fernando and Hollywood districts held rank as the leading centers in volume of real estate activity as well as in value of realty financing.

SOUTHWEST LEADS

First place in the survey was taken by the southwest district of the city where 171 transfers of property were recorded as indicated by the number of deeds filed. The 158 trust deeds and mortgages were valued at $364,561.

With 156 deeds filed, the Wilshire district held second place in last week's survey, but led the remaining fourteen districts of the city in realty financing. A total of 130 trust deeds and mortgages involved the sum of $971,313 in financing.

VALLEY DISTRICT

In the San Fernando Valley district there were 116 deeds filed, a gain of eleven over the number of the preceding week, and financing was valued at $179,277, as compared with $139,878 of the week before, a gain of $39,399. Hollywood registered eighty-eight deeds and $612,658 in mortgages and trust deeds filed, giving it second rank in value of the week's financing.

With fifty-six transfers of property in the Highland Park district as compared with thirty-eight for the preceding week, that district made the largest increase in point of activity and gained eighth place in the week's survey as compared with twelfth place for the previous week.

The Venice-Playa del Rey district gained fourteen over its last total; the Westlake Park district, seven, and the central business district, five. Increases in financing amounted to $320,950 for the central business section; to $127,193 for Elysian Park; and to $39,399 for the San Fernando Valley district.

POPULATION GAIN LISTED FOR TRACT

Eighteen Single-Family Residences, Three Flat Buildings to Start

A population increase of 570 per cent during a single year is the record set by Leimert Park, it was announced yesterday, following the completion of a survey by officials of the Walter H. Leimert Company, developers of the park.

Since June of last year, when 350 people were reported living in the tract, the population has grown to a present total of 2000, states James Bibo, salesmanager.

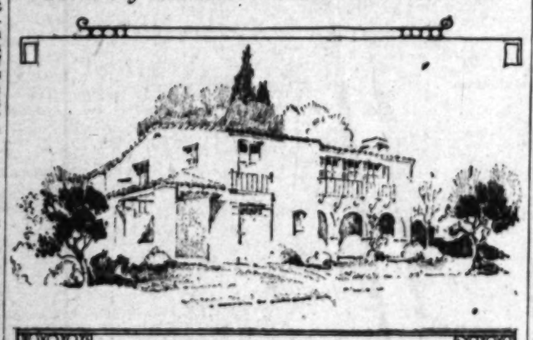
Lewis Lehman, builder, has completed plans for eighteen single-family residences to rise in Leimert Park within the next few months, it is stated. The firm of Herding & Adams, architects for the Leimert Company, announces that it is now taking bids for three six-family flat buildings to be constructed within two blocks of the Leimert business center at West Vernon avenue and Crenshaw Boulevard.

Organization Moves Offices

Announcement was male yesterday by George Larsen, secretary of the West Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, that that organization would move from its present location in the Masonic Building in West Los Angeles and would take possession of the entire building located at 11014 Santa Monica Boulevard in Westwood Hills.

This structure is located between Camden and Greenfield avenues. The date of possession was set for July 15.

Sorority Established in New Home



Residence Located Near University

Another sorority house has been completed in the Westwood area, with the recent occupancy of the quarters erected for Alpha Psi Chapter, of Alpha Chi Omega on Hilgard avenue, Westwood. The house is of Mediterranean type architecture and will accommodate twenty women. Including furnishings the cost is placed at $40,000. It was built under the direction of Herbert G. Riesenberg of Beverly Hills with Perry J. Smith as architect. Officers of the building corporation in charge of the structure are Miss Elizabeth Bryan, president; Miss Helen Pease, vice-president; Miss Beatrice Brand, secretary, and Mrs. Harry L. Masser, treasurer.

FIVE-MONTH SALE TOTAL ANNOUNCED

Commercial, Residential Holdings Included Among Transactions

In a summary of realty transactions for the first five months of 1930 the Fred F. Jamison Company reports deals involving a total of $386,000. The company operates chiefly in the La Brea-Beverly Boulevard district.

Among sales concluded are the following:

Northeast corner La Cienega and Beverly boulevards to H. J. Burke for a cash consideration of $50,000.

Southeast corner of Beverly Boulevard and Mariel to J. T. Harold for $35,000.

Northwest corner of Beverly Boulevard and Gardner street for $65,000 to Beverly-Gardner Market Company. New owners have just completed a drive-in market upon this property.

Southwest corner Fairfax and Oakwood avenue to the Tyrace Company for a cash consideration of $45,000. Improvement with a super oil station is planned at once.

Northwest corner South West Drive and Van Ness avenue to R. T. Arthur for $25,000.

Southeast corner of Beverly Boulevard and Kilkea, improved with the MacMillan Oil Company station, for $37,500 to R. T. Arthur, who intends holding for an investment.

Lot on Highland avenue near Third street sold to L. T. Stone for $12,000.

Lot on Fairfax near Wilshire Boulevard sold for $17,500 to R. F. Gray, who intends improving and holding for investment.

Lot on Fairfax near Beverly Boulevard sold for $20,000 to H. J. Kuhle, who intends improving and holding for investment.

Home at 150 Ocean Park Boulevard in Ocean Park and three Venice View lots sold to Jane Anderson for $14,000.

Home on Wilcox avenue to John Purding for $15,000.

First Unit of School to be Started Soon

ONTARIO, June 21. (Exclusive)—First unit of Chaffey Junior College, to be erected at the corner of Fifth street and Euclid avenue, will be started before the first of the year, according to members of the board of trustees of the school.

The building is to be erected by direct tax of 34 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. The first unit will be thirteen rooms, including laboratories for agriculture, bacteriology, geology, zoology and chemistry, men's and women's quarters, and nine classrooms.

Work Started on Orphanage

ONTARIO, June 21. (Exclusive)—Actual construction work on the Pacific Christian Home for Orphan Children at 548 West Francis street is under way.

The home will be a twelve-room frame and stucco structure. It is sponsored and erected by the Church of Christ of California and started through the efforts of Rev. Samuel E. Witty, formerly pastor in Ontario Church of Christ. Cash donations are being received from many parts of the Pacific Coast. A. L. Hamilton has the building contract.

STRUCTURE BUILT FOR PHYSICIAN

Offices and Laboratories to be Housed in Floor Below Street

ALHAMBRA, June 21. (Exclusive)—Dr. L. T. Butka, local physician, is erecting a $20,000 medical and dental office building on East Main street, near the city boundary. Construction is in charge of Hart Brothers of Los Angeles. John Walker Smart of Alhambra is the architect.

The structure, to be completed in the fall, is of concrete and brick, with the outside walls in stucco, decorated with ornamental tile. The principal entrance will be on Main street and will lead into a reception room from which there will be stairways leading to the lower floor offices, consultation rooms and laboratories. The lower floor will be below the street level.

Dr. Butka's offices will be located in the building which will include a suite for a resident physician. Dr. Jack Loop, associated with Dr. Butka, will be in charge of the dental department of the enterprise.

FOURTH FLOOR PLANNED

Dedrick & Bobbe, Long Beach, are preparing plans for completion of the fourth floor of the business administration building of the Long Beach Board of Education on Locust avenue. Appropriation of $25,000 has been made for the work.

LOAN MONEY SURVEY MADE

Realty Board Expects to Reveal Plenty of Funds Available at Banks for Home Building

Co-operating with the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the Los Angeles Realty Board is making a survey of the amount of money in local banks available to borrowers for home building. Like data is being compiled in 600 cities of the country, and the completed figures for the United States will be released the 30th inst.

This, according to President Harold G. Ferguson, is being done to offset the more or less popular belief prevalent that the average man is unable to secure funds to undertake the building or financing of a home, and which, according to a preliminary survey, is not the case.

"President Hoover and many leading business men believe that a resumption of construction will do more than anything to restore normal business activity and reduce unemployment," President Ferguson said.

"Home building in Chicago has been considerably increased following the announcement that $300,000,000 was available in nineteen financial institutions in that city. With an established need in Los Angeles of 41,000 new homes during the next three years, based on a careful study of all factors of growth and rates of mcrease, past and present, a disclosure that there is plenty of money in our banks ready to be loaned should accelerate construction."

DORMITORY, LABORATORY PROJECTED

Caltech Plans Buildings for Expansion of Marine Life Department

CORONA DEL MAR, June 21. (Exclusive)—The California Institute of Technology of Pasadena will spend $500,000 here on additional buildings for its marine life department and for the construction of dormitories to house 500 students who will be permanently located here.

Several months ago the Pasadena school purchased the Palisades club bath-house and property located on the bluff at Corona Del Mar. Dr. G. W. Moore, professor of geology at Caltech, stated that the fish and marine specimens found there could not be duplicated in any other location on the western coast. The bath-house has been transformed into a laboratory where sea life is being studied by a number of students. Dr. and Mrs. Moore have established quarters in the building.

An addition will be made, extending the present building to the top of the bluff, and elevator service will be installed, providing better access to the college. Entrance to the building now can be reached only by descending the bluff. Dormitories will be built on the top of the bluff. It is planned to construct additions as needs demand.

Permit Issued for Additions

HUNTINGTON PARK, June 21. (Exclusive)—A permit calling for $90,000 in building expansion has been issued to the Southern California Telephone Company, for a part four-story and part two-story addition to the present exchange building at Santa Fe avenue and Zoe street. The additions will be constructed of steel and reinforced concrete, work to be started at once.

PERMIT VALUATIONS REACH MILLION MARK

HUNTINGTON PARK, June 21. (Exclusive)—Building permit valuations for the present year have passed the $1,000,000 mark. Last year and 1928, the $1,000,000 mark was reached earlier, but the present showing is considerably ahead of the two years prior to 1928, when the $1,000,000 valuation mark was not reached until August.

BANK REALTY LOANS HEAVY

First Mortgages Constitute Security for Almost Half Amount Loaned Throughout State

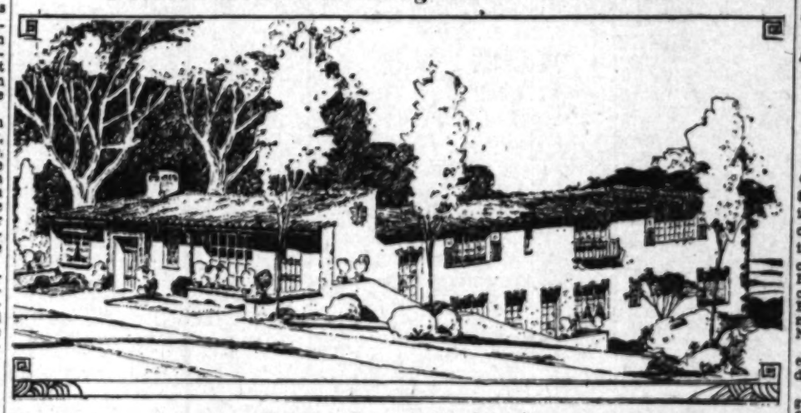
Savings bank in California now have $536,160,000 loaned out, the security for which is first mortgages on real estate, according to Will C. Wood, State Superintendent of Banks, in a statement to the California Real Estate Association.

"The State commercial banks and trust companies have $9,517,000 and the national banks have $463,188,000, making a grand total with the savings banks of $1,008,765,000 in such loans," Wood declared. "This constitutes almost one-half of the total loans of whatever nature made by the banks of California.

"In the California savings banks, real-estate loans constitute 81.5 per cent of all loans made and 55.1 of their total deposits. After allowing for the fact that only 50 per cent of the time deposits of the national banks can be loaned on real-estate security, we find that 71.6 per cent of all the funds accumulated by savings depositors in this State are loaned on real estate.

"Private issues based on large tracts of agricultural land, subdivisions, investment properties and office buildings, have found a ready market in the banks after they have met with the provisions of the law that make them legal investments for the funds of savings banks."

Medico-Dental Building Under Construction



Reception Room on Street Level

A $20,000 medical and dental office building is being erected by Hart Brothers, contractors, for Dr. L. T. Butka, on East Main street, Alhambra. John Walker Smart is the architect. Plans provide for a principal entrance on Main street, leading into a reception room from which stairways will lead to lower-floor offices, consultation rooms and laboratories.

ATTENDANCE AT BEACHES ON INCREASE

County Purchase Held Reason for Great Interest Along Seashore

Increased interest in beach homesite property adjacent to Los Angeles, and particularly in the southwest beaches, where the county has expended approximately $750,000 in beach frontage for public use, is reported by A. B. Condon, sales agent for Manhattan Manor, beach homesite subdivision at Manhattan Beach.

"Los Angeles county is to be highly commended for the foresight of its public servants in purchasing approximately 11,500 front feet of beach frontage at a total cost of $825,000," Condon declares. "This acquisition precludes the probability of this valuable property passing into the hands of private corporations which no doubt would close it to the public. The property purchased consists of three pieces, two in Manhattan Beach and one in Redondo Beach.

"Since Los Angeles county has taken possession of its purchase at Manhattan the beach has been cleaned, an adequate lifeguard patrol is being maintained and a doctor and nurses are available if needed. That this service is appreciated by the public is attested by the large number which now visit Manhattan Beach over the week-ends. It is reported that some 40,000 were on the beach at Manhattan last Sunday.

Realty Broker Lists Deals of Month to Date

The following deals for the month to date are reported by Manager Reid of the Congress Realty Company, Sawtelle: Five-room house at 1153 Federal avenue, $6500, to Golda Jarett of Phoenix; six-room stucco on Missouri, near Cobly to Fred Willcox, $6000; two houses at 1868 and 1870 West Twenty-eighth street, Los Angeles, to Roy O. Duncan, $8900; five-room house at 713 Golden avenue, to L. M. Slater, $4250; three-year lease on the southwest corner of Pico Boulevard and Highland avenue, to a Mr. Peterson of the West Adams Awning Company, $1500; five-year lease, northeast corner of Saltair avenue and Broadway to Algernon Fox for a service station, more than $5000.

Power Concern Plans Offices

CORONA, June 21. (Exclusive)—The Southern Sierras Power Company has closed a deal for the fifty-foot lot across the alley from the Public Library on Main street. The property, which was purchased from Temescal Lodge, F. & A. M., will be the site of the new home of this company.

A. W. Briggs, superintendent, states that as soon as the lease expires on the present location, the company will be ready to move into one of the finest offices in the city.

Date Fixed for Plunge Opening

TULARE, June 21. (Exclusive)—Tulare's $18,000 swimming pool is expected to be opened to the public August 1, next, according to Al Atkins of New York, who is constructing the pool. Specifications call for a California type stucco building with cement fence surrounding the property. The pool is to be 100x80 feet and from three to ten feet deep.

Work Started on Structures

GLENDALE, June 21. (Exclusive)—Construction of a $35,000 three-story sixty-unit apartment-house at 323 East Lomita avenue has been started by O. C. Williams, Los Angeles contractor, for the Thomas Manufacturing Company of Los Angeles. The L. H. Wilson Industrial Realty, Ltd., is erecting a $32,000 commercial building at 1521-5 South San Fernando Road.

CONSTRUCTION ADVANCE MADE

San Diego Building Activity Approaches Normal

Largest Project at State Teachers' College

Development Industrially Shown by Directory

SAN DIEGO, June 21. (Exclusive)—San Diego's building activity is making advances that border on normal. Of projects that now are under way and which are to give continued employment to mechanics throughout the summer, the largest is the construction of a group of buildings for the San Diego State Teachers' College. Three buildings now under way are the academic, library, and science. The Pettfer Hunt Company expects to have these completed by September 1. The aggregate cost is $350,000.

Work has been started on the Rachel Wegeforth two-story, brick and tile structure to front 200 feet on E street, 100 feet on Fifth avenue and 100 feet on Sixth street. The Kier Construction Company has taken this contract for $93,000. M. H. Golden has started work on an addition to the Munger Laundry plant on Sixteenth street, to cost approximately $25,000. Dormitories for the San Diego Army and Navy Academy at Pacific Beach are under way. Both are to be of concrete and tile, and will involve a total investment of $300,000. The Jarboe Construction Company has this contract. M. H. Golden has the contract for erection of a $30,000 addition to the Bishops School, La Jolla, where the building will be known as Bentham Hall. Progress is being made on the two-story brick business block at Twelfth and Broadway for C. Borgerding. J. Verreast is the contractor. The aggregate cost is $25,000.

OTHER WORK LISTED

An addition to the First Baptist Church is nearing completion. This concrete structure is to contain Sunday-school classrooms and a social hall. A tower will house a carillon. The cost is $60,000, and R. A. Jackson is the contractor. A $160,000 addition to the Herbert Hoover High School is being constructed by H. H. Presbiatus and Son, and is to be used as a school workshop. Max Rabinowitz is erecting a public market building at Twelfth and E streets at a cost of $120,000. B. O. Larson has the contract. A two-story frame and brick store building is being erected on Fifth avenue for W. W. Whitson by A. W. Farr. The cost will be $250,000. Tom Quin is building a two-story garage and apartments at 327 Island avenue at a cost of $20,000. Galland and Eden have the contract.

The store building at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Q streets is being remodeled at a cost of $15,000. The Lerner stores will occupy the building. The Streicher Shoe Company has begun remodeling of the building at 939 Fifth avenue at a cost of $17,000. The F. and W. Grand Company shortly will begin remodeling of the building on Fifth avenue and Sixth street recently leased for a 5-and-10-cent store. This project will cost approximately $15,000, it is reported. Concrete and frame apartments are being built at 1307 to 1315 Russ Boulevard for E. [illegible] Engleborn, by H. I. Hunter, contractor. The cost will be $25,000.

Residences under construction include one at 3108 Elliot street for Mrs. F. B. Everingham to cost $12,000, one for Harry Pollock at Point Loma to cost $15,000, one for Antoine Frey at Twenty-eighth street and O'Neall Terrace to cost $14,000. In addition to these projects the United States Navy is spending an aggregate of $60,000 on small buildings at the various navy units here.

Recent acquisition of a tract of land near the foot of Sampson street by the Texas company, is followed by announcement that a storage and distributing plant is to be immediately built, the initial cost of which will be $50,000.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

The industrial development of San Diego is reflected in the new directory of manufacturers published by the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce. The directory shows San Diego now has 315 manufacturing plants and 284 other industrial plants not usually considered manufacturers. Cleaning and dyeing plants, sheet metal shops, laundries, newspapers, photographers, printers and auto top and windshield plants are not listed as manufacturers in the directory. San Diego has 254 plants of this type.

The directory shows that San Diego's 315 manufacturers produce products ranging from agar to wire. The classified directory shows that among other types of plants, San Diego has thirty-three bakeries three battery manufacturers, six boat-building plants, eleven candy factories, six fish canneries, four iron foundries, three cigar factories, two brick yards, thirteen furniture factories, five manufacturers of heating equipment, six ice-cream factories, three olive-packing plants, two textile mills, three soap factories and one tooth paste manufacturing plant. The industrial plants of San Diego now employ 9600 men and 3500 women, at a total annual wage of $17,885,000, and the annual production of the plants is valued at more than $63,000,000.

National Guard Camp Buildings to be Erected

FLAGSTAFF (Ariz.) June 21. (Exclusive)—An appropriation of $100,000 from the War Department is to be used at once in erection of a National Guard encampment in the woods, four miles southwest of this city. Adjt.-Gen. J. P. Pomeroy has announced that the camp is to be named in honor of Brig.-Gen. Alex M. Tuthill, commanding the Colorado and Arizona National Guard units.

Twenty-six buildings are to be erected on a 7000-acre site, withdrawn by the Interior Department.

Emmet G. Martin of Los Angeles is architect for an $80,000 Catholic church for the Flagstaff parish, with completion expected in November. The present church is to be converted into an auditorium with a basement for club needs.

I HAVE the highest class society hotel proposition in Southern California. Details have been worked out in the highest class manner. The present money conditions have made it impossible for me to carry out my original plans, and I am now offering some party an opportunity to take a half interest in this program. The required capital for a half interest will take approximately fifty thousand in cash, and I am in a position to guarantee, to the right kind of a party, against loss of their money. No hotel experience necessary, but party must be keen and amply with good business ability. This is no promotion, stock or bonds, but will be individually owned without incumbrance. Parties interested in this high class program address P. box 86, Times Office. Give your address and phone number and an appointment will be arranged at which I am in a position to give the best of references as to myself, and will expect the same from anyone desiring to become a partner. I am forty-five years old with an unlimited business experience, and would prefer to connect with someone about the same age. My program has a setting that with the proper management can be worked into an unlimited success, and with the right kind of a gentleman as partner I will put in additional property to guarantee the investment. For this project must be completed and ready for operation by the first of 1931. Unless you have the available cash do not answer.

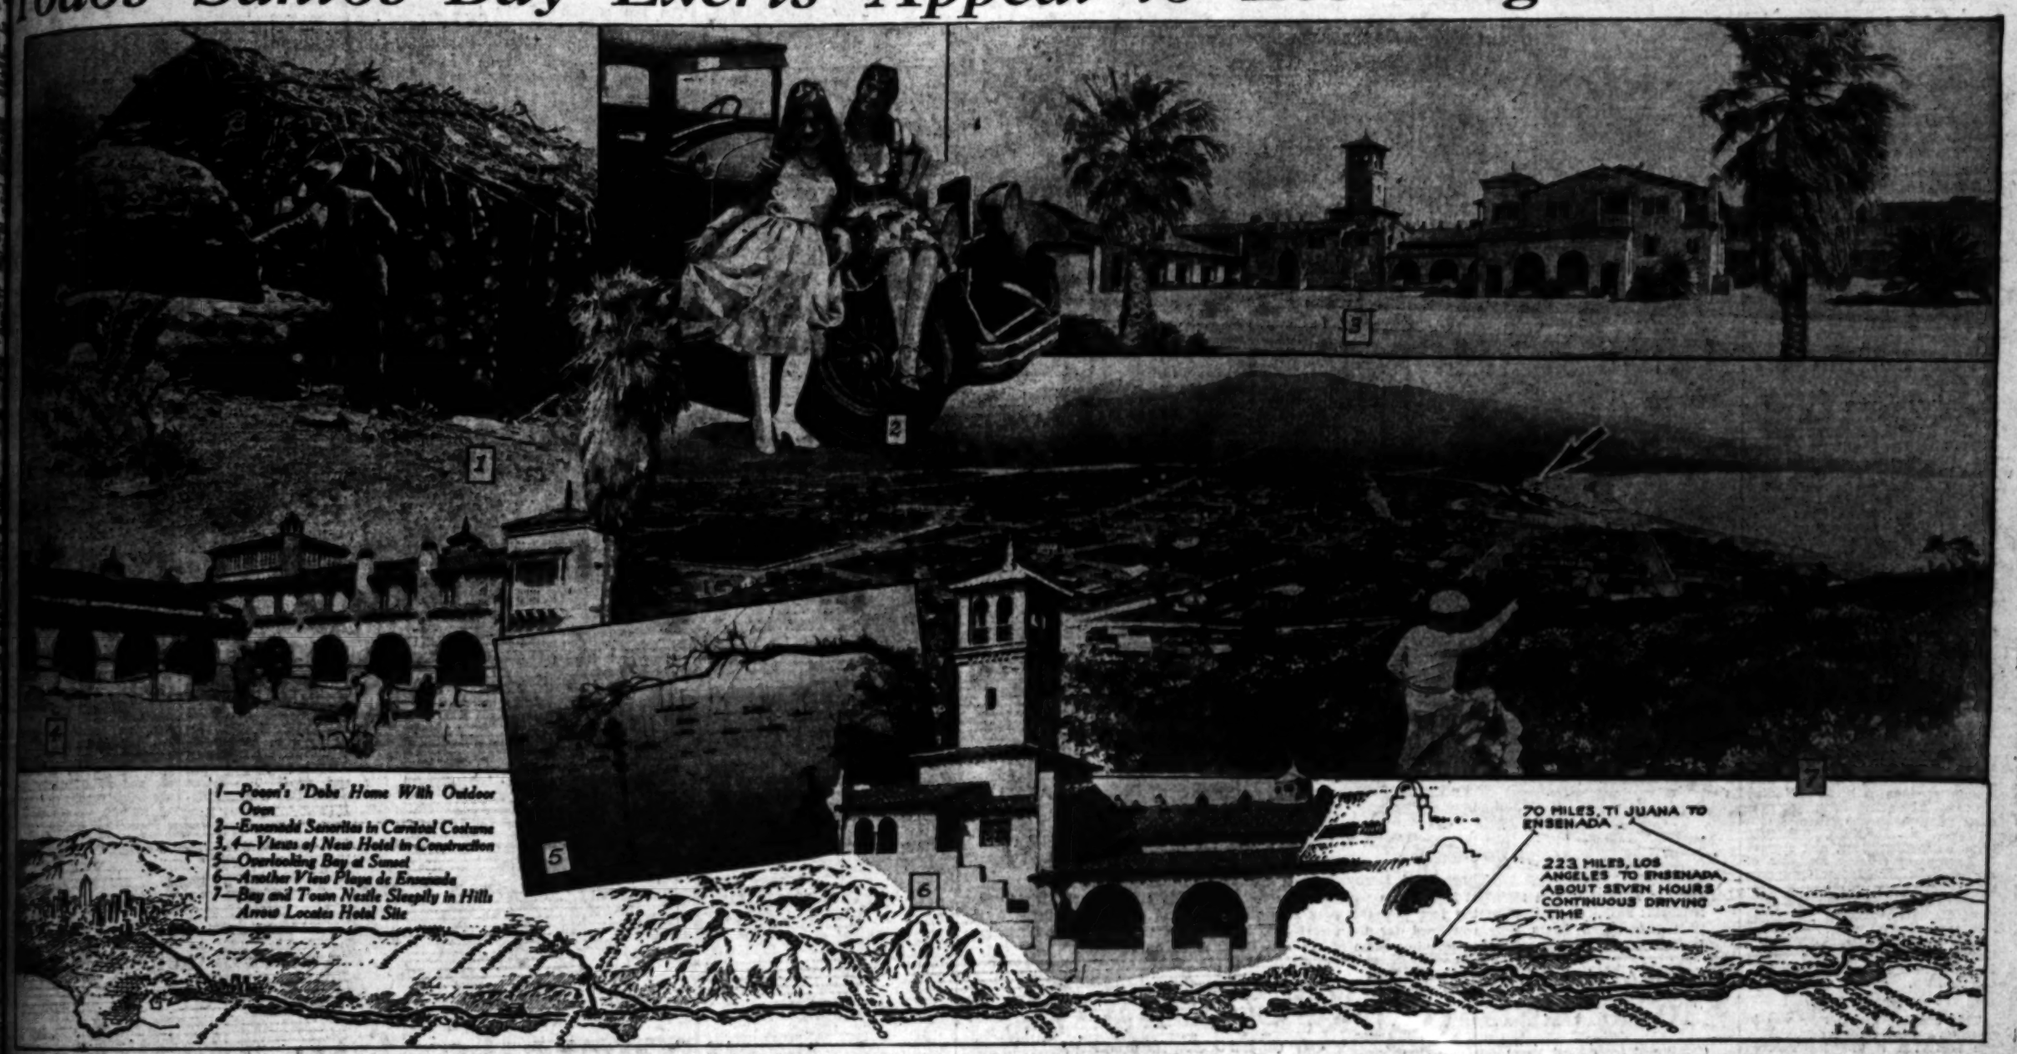
Todos Santos Bay Exerts Appeal to Los Angeles Motorists



URE OF ENSENADA FELT BY MOTORISTS

utiful Bay of Todos Santos Has Charm for Southern Californian; Resort to be Established

BY AL PARMENTER.

Where shall we go for an automobile trip or for vacation? That question is to be answered in a way that most Southern Californians are not yet aware of as a possibility.

Offering something unusual in that it is a trip into a foreign country, Ensenada is suggested as the goal of a motor outing.

Ensenada is the capital of the state of Lower California, Mexico, on the Pacific coast, 70 miles south of the international boundary line at Tia Juana. It is the port of entry for the state and is the seat of the state government.

Ensenada is on a huge natural harbor, looking down the ocean where it is just prepared for the spectacle. Penetrating the mountains the car follows the strand for but a few miles before the hood of the car is pointed a point about 1000 feet above the ocean to reveal to the passengers of the car a grand view.

The bay of Todos Santos is the town that presents a picture all the way from the picture all the time and there has not been a time when the town and its atmosphere as to the hosts at anchor to a more beautiful and happy aspect than that greets one on final approach to the bay of Todos Santos and the town.

Ensenada is the town that presents a

Zion National Park Brought Within One Short Day From Los Angeles by Automobile

QUICK TRIP TO PARK ATTAINED

"Three-Meal Derby" Shows Site Available

Twenty-four Hours Permit Complete Tour

Fuel Costs on Journey in Reach of All

Normally Zion National Park in Southern Utah is regarded by Southern California motorists as a summer vacation objective, but the elasticity of modern motor cars moves Zion to within less than a half-day of travel from Los Angeles. The entire round trip of 982 miles with a stop of two hours and fifteen minutes in Ion Canyon itself was completed in an elapsed time of twenty-three hours and two minutes, while actual running time amounted to exactly eighteen hours and eight minutes, an average of fifty-four miles per hour, by a party from Los Angeles last week.

A party of four, traveling in a Nash from the Nash Breyer Motor Company, sat down to breakfast in Los Angeles at 12:01 a.m. last Tuesday, stowed away a considerable amount of food in anticipation of a long time until lunch, checked out of the Sixth and Spring office of the Western Union at 12:21 a.m., and were on their way to a great motoring adventure. Ten hours and nineteen minutes later, at 10:40 a.m. by Pacific standard time, the quartet checked in at Zion National Park checking station, having covered 483 miles (detours brought the correct mileage to this figure) in an actual driving time of eight hours and fifty-nine minutes.

FEW PICTURES

After luncheon at the lodge and a round of picture taking, in all consuming two and one-quarter hours, the Nash eight sedan was checked out of the park at 12:55 p.m. Pacific standard time (1:55 p.m. by mountain time) and after retracing its outward course, arrived back at the Western Union office in Los Angeles at 11:23 p.m., ten hours and twenty-eight minutes elapsed time for the return journey, with actual driving time amounting to nine hours and nine minutes. The party consumed nine more minutes on the return jaunt.

Arthur B. Marshall, wholesale service superintendent, and Rupert L. Larson, advertising manager of the Nash-Breyer Motor Company, alternated at the wheel of the sedan with Charles H. Green and Bernard Garbutt riding as passengers and observers on what was facetiously called "the three-meal derby," since breakfast and dinner were had in Los Angeles, and luncheon in Zion.

NO SPEED RUN

This one-day scenic tour was in no sense a speed-record run, despite the fact that it probably lowered any time mark that may have existed between Los Angeles and the Utah park.

The average motorist, of course, will still prefer (at least until much of the loose, ball-bearing gravel roads in Nevada and Utah is replaced by some type of firm surface) to take two days in driving from Los Angeles to Zion National Park, though an increasing number in visiting the playground of Southern Utah find it interesting to make the drive in one day, leaving city at around 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning.

COST OF TRIP

Assuming the vacationist will make stops at Barstow, Las Vegas and St. George to replenish his fuel supply, and with the price of gasoline varying from 20 cents at Barstow to 30 cents at St. George, his gasoline cost for a medium weight car (assuming he leaves Los Angeles with a full tank at around 12 1-2 cents per gallon) will amount to only about $2.25 for the trip going, and to about $3.45 for the return trip, while oil consumption for the modern car for the round trip should not exceeded a gallon. Thus, assuming $16.70 for gasoline and $1.50 for the oil (the finer grades of oil are 40 cents a quart in Nevada and Utah) the fuel and lubrication costs for the jaunt should run around $18.20 for the average medium weight cars, with the cost for heavy cars rather higher, and the cost for light cars somewhat lower.

Zion National Park was created by act of Congress on November 19, 1919, prior to which it was a national monument called by the Indian name for Zion Creek, which is Mukuntuweap. Its total embraces 120 square miles.

Jaunt to Zion Reveals Availability of Park to Los Angeles

Three-Meal Derby Proves Practical

Leaving Los Angeles after a midnight breakfast a party of four motorists made a quick round-trip to Zion National Park, demonstrating the fact that this park is not as distant as commonly believed. Less than twenty-four hours were consumed for the round trip. Views show the Nash eight sedan used for the journey with the sketches revealing some of the attractions noted on the trip.

ENSENADA LURE TO MOTORISTS

cost of installing machinery to dry them was prohibitive and operations had to be abandoned. Then the population as a whole was out of work and as a result most of it left Ensenada. There remains a spot of beauty whose lure is now to the tourist—the motor tourist.

ATTRACTIONS STRONG

There are a few hundred people living there throughout the year.

There is a quaint atmosphere.
There is an old cemetery.
There are abandoned mines.
A few mines are being worked.
There is an old mission.
There is a beach along the bay that is an automobile speedway available to all visitors.
Ranches, wild life, quail, deer, fishing, swimming, sun baths, camping, motoring along the wet sands of the bay, Mexican people without the American influence. All these are available for the visitor.

AMERICAN RESORT

And now comes a move to make it an American resort. Plans and construction are already well under way to establish a hotel and resort center.

With five miles of the bay front leased and many acres of land owned a resort is nearly completed.

Present plans call for the formal opening of the hotel some time during the summer; meanwhile, on July 4 motorists, air travelers and yachtsmen will gather to greet the new project in an informal way.

Already the hotel is sufficiently far along in construction to prove that when completed it will rank with the finest in California hostelries. Compania Mexicana del Rosarito, S.A., operating with concessions from the Mexican government, is building the structure.

HIGHWAY TO COME

Ultimately, there will be an all-paved highway from Tia Juana to Ensenada, a large portion of which will follow a new survey providing for an all-coast route from Rosarito Beach about twenty miles from Tia Juana, to the southern city. This highway will be nine miles shorter than the present route, or about sixty miles long; and will be eighteen feet wide, of concrete, enabling motorists to reach Ensenada from the international border in ninety minutes.

Ensenada has been described as one of the most beautiful small harbors in the world. Its nine-mile beach is crescent-shaped. Tall mountains rise almost from the water, as along the European Riviera or in the South Seas.

The Rosarito Company, a Mexican corporation, owns 587 acres of land fronting on Ensenada Bay, and has a lease from the Mexican government for twenty years on a five-mile stretch of the beach in front of its property. The company also holds a contract with the Mexican government giving it the right, for a period of twenty years, to conduct at Playa Ensenada all games and sports permitted in the republic.

Of particular interest to yachtsmen will be the change in harbor conditions at Ensenada as a result of the Rosarito company's development. The company is building for the Mexican government a pier 2760 feet long to an average tide-water depth of twenty-seven feet. This will permit coastwise vessels to dock. A landing float will be provided. A breakwater approximately 1000 feet long will project from Ensenada Point, giving considerable area of quiet anchorage.

AMONG THE FANS

On Thursady afternoon, June 12, a team match was played at South Park between the players there and a team from Exposition Park. The latter team won by score of 18 to 17 and 13 draws. The occasion of the match was the celebrating of the new shelter over the playing tables at South Park which will protect the players from rain in the winter and from the sun in the summer. Below will be found the individual scores, the name of the Exposition player appearing first in each sitting. I do not guarantee correct spelling of any names and in some instances could only obtain first name of player.

S. S. Day, 2; Clark, 1, draw 1; Dougherty, 1; Dacus, 0, draw, 3; Embleyton, 3; Nelson, 0, draw, 1; Ellis, 0; Morrah, 4; Fleshman, 2; Sam, 1, draw, 1; Davison, 2; Anderson, 1, draw, 1; Hamm, 4; Nell, 0; Gaterey, 3; Bowen, 0, draw, 1; Overton, 0; Pierce, 2, draw, 2; Olson, 1; Reinhart, 2, draw, 1; Cloe, 0; Latham, 3, draw, 1; Valentine, 0; Joe, 3, draw, 1.

Total, Exposition Park, 19; South Park, 17; drawn, 13.

A return match is expected to be played soon.

A team match was played on May 30, last, at Allentown, Pa., between a team from New Jersey and New York vs. Pennsylvania, which was won by the former by score of 22 to 18, and 32 drawn games. There were two internationalist players on the winning team—M. B. Reynolds and T. J. O'Grady. Reynolds beat H. C. Newcomb, 2 to 0 and 2 draws, and O'Grady disposed of Herman Rudolph by the same score. There were eighteen players on each side and a general good time was had. Matty Priest, an 88-year-old "kid" from Philadelphia, made the best score on either team, defeating D. Forgoone, champion of Paterson, N. J., by score of 3 to 0, and 1 draw.

The editor gave a simultaneous checker exhibition last Monday evening at the Arroyo Seco Playground Chess and Checker Club. Twelve boards were played—26 games in all—ye editor winning 16, drawing 7 and losing 3. I failed to get the names of the players securing the wins, but will receive them later.

Willie Ryan's Checkergram has not appeared on the scene lately—wonder if it is going the way of all others before it.

A stranger coming to the city and visiting the local clubrooms at Second and Hill would wonder what kind of "headquarters" we had here. A goodly number of chess players can always be found there, but checker players are few and far between. For some reason the checker players have drifted away and now can be found at the Mesa Municipal clubrooms, South Park, Exposition Park, Arroyo Seco Park, or numerous other gathering places around over the city.

Dog Catcher to Catch Car

The "dog catcher" in Porterville will be doubly feared after July 1. On that date he starts his rounds, collecting not only stray canines this time, but automobiles on which the city tax for 1930 has not been paid.

Huge Tax Bill Paid on Autos

Taxes paid by motor-vehicle owners in the United States last year came to the grand total of $929,479,997.

State taxes, comprising registration fees and gasoline tax, totaled $779,479,997, while municipal taxes totaled $30,000,000. Personal-property tax totaling $130,000,000 brought the grand total to more than $929,000,000. In 1920 total motor-vehicle taxes in the United States were only $316,720,000. In the last ten years automobile owners have paid a total of $5,881,869,000 in taxes.

Camp Space Increased in Sequoia Park

Recognizing the need of additional camp space and removal of the excessive number of campers in the immediate vicinity of Giant Forest, Sequoia National Park, Col. John R. White, park superintendent, is engaged in extensive camp development at Lodge Pole. He also expects to develop other camp sites further along the General's Highway as soon as it is extended.

A circular road is to be built about the entire Lodge Pole campgrounds this summer. A bridge will also be constructed at the upper end of the camp site, so that both sides of the river may be used.

About $12,000 has been appropriated for next year to develop a complete water supply and piping system for Lodge Pole. Col. White also hopes to build a swimming pool at the lower end of the camp and to improve the swimming pool at the lower Marble Fork camp.

Sunset Paving Work Ordered

The Board of Public Works has awarded the contract for the improvement of Sunset Boulevard between Normandie and Havenhurst avenues to the W. F. Crawford Company at a price of $363,889. The improvement involves the laying of asphalt pavement.

FISHING AT BEACH STILL RUNS GOOD

Salt-Water Sport Holding Interest of Anglers Report Shows

The run of fish off the local beaches which has been on for a month continued last week and from signs is likely to continue for some weeks to come. The run is considered by many of the old time salt water anglers here as the greatest in fifteen years.

Barracuda are apparently in the lead in the number of fish being caught. These "tigers of the sea" have been caught by the thousands not only from live-bait boats, but from anchored barges and in quite a few instances from the piers.

From the report received from Capt. Jack Dugan of the Morris boats of Santa Monica, fishing off that point has been ideal with hundreds of anglers taking advantage of the runs. Not only have barracuda been caught by the ton, but plenty of halibut and bass have been giving the anglers sport. A thirty-eight pound white sea bass was caught early last week. Many of these latter fish have been caught, but not nearly as big as the thirty-eight pounder.

Starting a week ago today, Morris put on a ship known as the Morris Owl on the twice-a-day run. This ship was rigidly inspected and passed by the United States steamboat inspectors. It carries fifty passengers and it is skippered by Capt. Jhonny Ingebregt, a licensed pilot. The Palisades continues on the Morris all-day run.

Larger catches of halibut, some barracuda, sculpin and mackerel have been landed by the anglers fishing from the Challenger barge anchored a short distance off the bay city. The Challenger offers every accommodation to deep sea anglers.

The report from Ocean Park declares that fishing was not as good the last week as was experienced during previous weeks. Halibut were caught in large numbers but were running smaller.

Capt. Anderson at Hermosa declared fishing off that point was continuing good, large catches being made from the Olympic barges, from the pier, and from the surf.

Big crowds of anglers have been getting in on the run of fish off San Pedro points, also Long Beach. The catches have included bass, halibut and barracuda. A report from Capt. Chester Stanciff at Long Beach was received. He stated that good fishing was still being had both by trolling and from the anchored live-bait boats. Also that broadbill swordfish have been seen in large numbers judged to be greater than the big runs of last season.

Again only a few reports on trout fishing came in. The season this year does not seem to be holding up to expectations. At high Sierras points the fishing has been fair and good. The report from the Jordan Hot Springs declares fishing good with trout running larger than [illegible] season. Fishing was [illegible] in Nine-mile Creek [illegible] still high and [illegible] there are taking [illegible] a couple of weeks [illegible] fishing will be good [illegible] the Kern.

VETERAN COAST AUTO DISTRIBUTOR ENDS CRUISE

One of the foremost developers of motoring on the Pacific Coast in his twenty-five years as a distributor, Charles S. Howard, head of the Howard Automobile Company, is completing an interesting chapter of sea travel to add to his active life of accomplishments. Arriving in Los Angeles Harbor last week aboard his new 183-foot yacht, Aras, Howard had cruised 7501 miles since sailing from Miami, Fla., April 8, visited twelve countries and touched thirty-six ports.

With a crew of twenty-three men under the command of Capt. T. I. Vatland, Howard, with his newly purchased boat, visited Cuba, Jamaica, the Panama Canal, the Galapagos Islands, Central American ports and then cruised northward along the Mexican shore to Los Angeles, leisurely stopping to enjoy some of the big fish sport. Among the catches were some man-eating sharks, one of which was eighteen feet in length.

The total time of the voyage was sixty-seven days of which thirty-eight were passed in port. The Aras, with two Diesel engines developing 475 horsepower each, has a top speed of fifteen knots. The average cruising speed was twelve knots. The fuel capacity is 6000 miles.

All of the time that Howard was aboard he was in constant touch with his business through radio, the Aras being equipped with powerful sets of both long and short wave lengths.

Sharkey is so anxious to remove the stain of his defeat on a foul that he is already on record at the New York State Athletic Commission as willing to pay Buelow's 20 per cent share in Schmeling's wages.

Frank Bruen, general manager of the Garden, left for Boston tonight to talk with Sharkey and his manager, Johnny Buckley, as to the terms of the purchase. Sharkey's share probably will be inclosed in Monday's proclamation. Buelow is reported willing to tear up the Schmeling contract for about $50,000, which would approximate his share in the Teuton's profit from the return fight.

There are other minor differences to be adjusted before the match can be made. Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's

Move from Old Contract One Bar to Match

Heads in Conference Tomorrow on Matter

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Conferences stemmed all over town today as lawyers worked overtime and Madison Square Garden promised something important in the way of announcements concerning Max Schmeling's return bout with Jack Sharkey by Monday afternoon.

The final conference between Garden officials and Arthur Buelow, deposed manager of the man who won the heavyweight championship on a foul from Sharkey in the 10th inst., is scheduled for today. After that is over the Garden hopes to be able to announce that the last bar to a return match late in September has been removed.

Sharkey is ready to fight if he can get a release from Buelow's managerial contract, which does not expire until October 11. Otherwise he insists that he will remain idle until the struggling alliance with Buelow is wiped out by time. Buelow is no anxious to remove the stain of his defeat on a foul as he is already on record at the New York State Athletic Commission as willing to pay Sharkey's 25 per cent share in Schmeling's wages.

Jack Bruns, general manager of Sharkey, left for Boston tonight to confer with Sharkey and his manager, Johnny Buckley, as to the terms of the purchase. Sharkey's contract probably will be inclosed in Buelow's proclamation. Buelow is said willing to tear up the Sharkey contract for about $50,000, which would approximate his profit in the Teuton's fight.

There are other minor differences to be ironed before the match can be made. Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, is on the high seas.

Muench and Muelheisen Lose Finals

WILMINGTON (Del.) June 21. (AP) — Frank Shields, 20-year-old tennis player of Scarsdale, N. Y., stroked his way to a surprising victory today over Fritz Mercur, sixth national ranking netman, and won the Delaware State turf-court championship by scores of 6-1, 6-2, 11-9.

Mercur and J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., won the men's doubles, defeating Dolf Muelheisen and Robert Muench, University of California, 6-2, 6-3, 7-5, in the finals.

Columbia also raced against time and Navy covered the stretch in a hard row that Coach Glendon would not admit was a formal time trial. As a result many visitors lining the river banks were treated to the sight of four of the outstanding varsity favorites, covering the distance within a few hours of each other.

At the end of the day it still was the general opinion that it was anyone's race. Coach Al Ulbrickson of Washington did not announce the time for his varsity's trial. However, clocks on shore caught the shell in 7m. 27s. for a mile and a half of the four-mile stretch.

TWIN VICTORY OVER REDS KEEPS ROBINS IN TOP SPOT

CINCINNATI, June 21. (AP)—The Brooklyn Robins came back today to take hold on first place in the National League standings by winning both games of a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 4 and 11 to 5. Archie Campbell rallied in one run in the first game, while Rixey issued a pass to Hyer with the bases full in the ninth. Ray Phelps held the Reds to seven hits, a homer by Kelly bringing the only Cincinnati run. The second game was called in the eighth, when Red Lucas was relieved in after Jakie May had been lifted for a pinch hitter, gave three hits and two runs. Score:

The Southern Gentleman Who is Dormie Two

Atlanta's Favorite Son

Two photographs of the incomparable Bobby Jones who, having won the British amateur and open crowns, is literally two up on the four major golf titles of the year. He has yet to win the American open and the American amateur. The cup photo shows Bobby with the victory trophy emblematic of his winning the British amateur championship at historic St. Andrews, when he beat Roger Wethered, 7 and 6. The photo at the right shows him, surrounded by his gallery, driving off during his match with Wethered.

BRITISHERS PRAISE BOBBY JONES

"The Greatest of All Living Golfers," Says One London Links Expert; Hagen Claims No One Else Had a Chance; Atlanta Lawyer Plays Charity Match

LONDON, June 21. (AP) — There were no reservations in the admiration bestowed today by the British press upon Bobby Jones, victor in yesterday's British open golf tournament finals, nor was there any expression of sour grapes in the golfing vineyard over his success at the expense of British players.

WALTER HAGEN

"The greatest of all living golfers," "the greatest golfing genius of all time," were among the encomiums showered upon the victor today, while one writer suggested homorously that he be conceded both amateur and open championships for life and automatically presented two cups yearly.

"This would restore the competitive spirit to golf," he said.

HAGEN SAYS NOBODY ELSE HAS A CHANCE

VICTORIA (B. C.) June 21. (AP)—No living professional golfer has a chance against Bobby Jones in a four-day medal test, barring freak scores, Walter Hagen, back from Australia and Japan, said here today in acclaiming the recent winner of the British open and amateur titles as "the greatest golfer in the world."

Hagen returned here on the Empress of Russia with Joe Kirkwood. They will go to Seattle today, then to Detroit, before proceeding to Minneapolis to prepare for the American open late next month.

BOBBY WINS FOR CHARITY'S SAKE

BIRMINGHAM (Eng.) June 21. (AP)—Paired with Dr. William Tweddell, 1927 British amateur champion, Bobby Jones who yesterday won the British open, defeated Stanley Lunt of Worcester and Eric Piddian of Stourbridge in a four-ball match played for charity today. The score was 3 and 2 with Jones and Tweddell having the best ball score of 69 to their opponents' 73.

SELIGSON CAPTURES CLAY-COURT TITLE

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Julius Seligson of Lehigh added the eastern intercollegiate tennis championship to his metropolitan clay-court title today by defeating Clifford Sutter of Tulane, the southern collegiate champion, in three out of five hard-fought sets. The score was 6-1, 6-3, 3-6, 0-6, 6-1.

Sutter and Bayon won the doubles title late in the afternoon by defeating the California pair, Elbert Lewis and Clifford Robbins, by the score of 10-8, 5-7, 6-0, 6-2.

SAN DIEGO SILVER GATE SWIM SCHEDULED TODAY

BY OLIVE HATCH

Three hundred or more A.A.U. Southern California men and women swimmers will paddle across the Silver Gate this afternoon in San Diego Bay. Seven local organizations have close to 100 entries in the event, with the Hollywood Athletic Club in the lead, numbering sixteen juniors and seniors.

NORENE FORBES.

Twenty or more trophies will be distributed in the men's division, while a similar number goes to women swimmers. Boys and girls 12 years of age and under compete for junior trophies, while men and women 65 and over have entered the veterans' trophy division.

No annual event on the Pacific Coast attracts as many swimmers of all ages as this 670-yard race between Point Pio Pico and Fort Rosecrans, at the mouth of San Diego Bay. This is the eleventh year of the swim.

Coach Fred Cady is traveling southward with his two Los Angeles Athletic Club bets, Buster Crabbe and Josephine McKim, who he predicts as first winners in the men's and women's divisions. The last winners in both divisions he presented in 1925, with Tom Blake and Viola Hartman, who is now Mrs.

EICHELBERGER IN FINALS

Ex-Southland Junior Champion Plays Les Coleman for California Country Club Crown Today

BY BRAVEN DYER

Having blazed their way through unusually stiff competition, Harry Eichelberger, Jr., and Lester Coleman will battle it out this morning for the title in the annual California Country Club invitational tournament, which comes to a close today after a tremendously successful week.

The match starts at 10 o'clock and should attract quite a gallery for Eichelberger has many supporters among his fellow-players at the Los Angeles Country Club while Coleman, playing on his home course, will naturally be well supported. Eichelberger was Southern California Junior champion two years ago.

LESTER COLEMAN

Both finalists disposed of their semifinal foes in ruthless fashion, presaging a great battle today. Eichelberger defeated Cloyd Marshall of California, 6 and 5, while Coleman smashed his way to victory over Bill Jelliffe, 5 and 4. Of the two it's hard to tell which win was the more outstanding. Marshall is very much at home at California and played some brilliant golf throughout the tourney, while Jelliffe is always a tough foe to contend with.

WELL MATCHED

At any rate there are plenty who liked Eichelberger's golf better than Coleman's yesterday, although it is this writer's hunch that Lester will emerge with the crown today.

Dick Russell of Rio Hondo won last year, but did not defend his title this time. Fay Coleman won medal honors with a 67, but then dropped out, and undoubtedly expects to see his younger brother carry on in his stead.

Yesterday's biggest upset was the way in which Marshall disposed of Danny Sangster, youthful Potrero star, in the morning semifinal round. The score was 3 and 2, and the result naturally occasioned considerable surprise.

There was quite a high wind yesterday and this, plus a week of pretty stiff traveling, undoubtedly told on many of the competitors. We can't all be Bobby Joneses even when it comes to stamina.

WON EARLY

Both Eichelberger and Coleman won their matches early yesterday. Harry was 5 up on Marshall at the turn and Coleman had a four-hole margin on Jelliffe. Naturally, after that, nothing mattered much for the two leaders merely had to coast in.

Eichelberger qualified on Tuesday with a fine 70, and was low for the

RUTH WALLOPS TWENTY-THIRD

Babe Blasts Another Homer as Yankees Triumph

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Herb Pennock, dean of the Yankees, pitched his way to the head of the American League's hurlers today, shutting out the Detroit Tigers with five hits, while New York won the final game of the series, 3 to 0. Pennock has six victories and one defeat.

BABE RUTH

Elon Hogsett pitched a good game against the Yankees, but he yielded two runs in the first inning on a pair of walks, followed by singles by Lazzeri and Gehrig, and allowed Babe Ruth to hit his twenty-third home run of the season in the eighth frame.

Lyn Lary, Yankee shortstop who was injured playing against Detroit yesterday, turned up at today's game to report the extent of the injury to his right thumb. An X-ray examination had disclosed the digit was both dislocated and fractured in the first joint, he said, and the injury probably would keep him out of action for three weeks. The score:

YALE HORSEMEN GALLOP TO FIFTH POLO CHAMPIONSHIP

RUMSON (N. J.) June 21. (AP)—Yale's polo quartet defeated the Princeton team today, 11 to 0, and gained its fifth American intercollegiate championship.

Playing before a large crowd at Herbert Memorial Field, Capt. Hardie Scott led the Old Eli through the decisive victory.

Once more Stewart B. Iglehart, ace of the Old Aiken team, holder of the junior national championship array, was leading factor for Yale. In beating the West Point cadets Tuesday Iglehart tallied six goals. Today he corralled three.

SEALS ARE WALLOPED BY ANGELS

Seraphs Sew Up Series by Batting Elmer Jacobs and Perry for Victory

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21.—Los Angeles beat the Seals today, 11 to 7, and thus cinched the series. The Seals have lost four out of the five games played and they look like a disheartened ball club. Earl Sheely is about the only one who is doing any timely hitting. The pitching staff that looked so good on paper last spring has not been functioning, so the team is taking its beatings.

WEB SCHULMERICH

Elmer Jacobs started today but did not survive the first inning. "Tub" Perry pitched the rest of the game. Sigafoos doubled in the first inning, Moore walked and Dittmar bunted the two runners along. Harper scored them with a single, B. Jacobs popped out but Schulmerich doubled and Haney hit a home run. Hannah singled and then Jacobs went to the clubhouse. Perry struck out Ballou to retire the side.

Ballou started for the third time in the series and again he failed to finish the game. Despite the fact he was given a substantial lead he had to be lifted in the fourth and Bill Peters finished the game. The Angels made five runs off Jacobs in the first inning and the Seals came back with one on hits by Crosetti, Pinelli and Sheely.

Ray Jacobs hit a home run off Perry in the third and Ballou hit a home run in the fourth. In the last of the fourth Gaston got the first of his two home runs, driving in Sulik and Baker ahead of him.

The Angels got these three runs back in the fifth. Schulmerich doubled and took third on Sulik's bad throw and scored on Haney's single. Hannah sacrificed and Peters singled infield. Sigafoos brought Haney home. Moore popped out but Dittmar got a hit on a ball that

WILMER ALLISON WINS LONDON TENNIS CROWN

LONDON, June 21. (AP)—Wilmer Allison, young Texan, defeated Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., fellow-member of the American Davis Cup squad, in the final round of the London lawn tennis championships at the Queens Club today. The scores were 6-4, 8-6.

JOHNNY DOEG

An all-American final for the doubles championship gave Georgo Lott and John Doeg, also members of the Davis Cup squad, a four-set victory over their teammates, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, by scores of 13-14, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4. Allison and Van Ryn are the American cup doubles pair.

The mixed doubles title went to J. C. Gregory and Miss Elizabeth Ryan, who defeated George Lott and Miss Mary Greef of Chicago and Kansas City, respectively, 6-1, 6-1.

VICTORY GIVES SHEIKS SERIES

Four Runs in Eighth Cinch Contest for Vittmen

Shellenback Hurls Stars to Fourth Win of Week

Jesse Hill Again Sparkles With Pair of Swats

BY BOB RAY

After allowing the Missions to score three runs in the eighth and take a 5-to-4 lead Oscar Vitt's scrapping Stars came back strong in their half of the eighth, batted across four runs and defeated the Reds, 8 to 5, before 4500 fans yesterday at Wrigley Field. The win cinched the series for the Hollywooders, who have won four of the five games this week.

FRANK SHELLENBACK

The Stars won despite the fact that they made five errors of commission and several others of omission. Dave Barbee and Cleo Carlyle both committed blunders that lent the impression they were playing in a haze, but the Stars won anyway so all is forgiven.

Frank Shellenback, ace of the Sheik slab staff last season, went the route for the Vittmen to turn in the victory. Shelly yielded eight hits and should have breezed in without extending himself had his mates given him some near perfect support.

THREE RED HURLERS

Skipper Killefer used a trio of moundmen, George Jasper Casper starting and being followed by Lefty Douglas and Ted Pillette. Douglas replaced Caster in the second and pitched good ball until the eighth, when the Stars put on their winning splurge. Pillette took Douglas's place during the eighth-inning rally and eventually retired the side. The defeat was charged to Douglas.

Jesse Hill, the Trojan who turned Sheik, again continued his spectacular hitting with a double and a single in three times at bat to bring his batting average above the .400 mark. Jesse also drew a couple of walks to get on base in four of his five trips to the plate, Johnny Baxter was the only other Star to get two hits, but then Hollywood got but nine safeties off the three Mission hurlers.

The Reds got a run in the first after two were out when Rosenberg walked and scored on Hafey's triple off the right-field screen. Barbee had the ball but couldn't hold it. Rosenberg generally eats those kind alive.

Hollywood evened it up in its half when Hill smashed one through Mulligan and stretched it into a double by some speedy sprinting. Lee doubled to right center, scoring Hill, but was out trying to make it good for three bases, Hafey to Wright to Mulligan.

CASTER GOES WILD

Caster went wild in the second and walked four men to force in two more Hollywood runs, Carlyle's double and walks to Heath, Shellenback, Hill and Lee forced in the runs, after which Douglas replaced Caster and disposed of Brannan for the third out.

In the Hollywood fourth Baxter's hit, Camilla's sacrifice, walks to Shellenback and Hill and an infield out gave the Stars a fourth run.

The Reds scored one more in the fifth, Hofmann getting a life when Hill dropped his line drive after speeding over nicely to get in front of the terrific smash. Douglas's double and Mulligan's sacrifice fly brought Hofmann around. Lee saved Shellenback in this round with a leaping, one-handed catch of Monroe's line drive for the second out.

Shellenback's defense blew up in the eighth and the Reds chased over three runs on two hits with

Southern California's Junior Olympic Games Champions Off Sunday for Atlantic C

YOUNGSTERS IMPROVE IN FINAL WORKOUTS

Boyd Comstock Says Local Boys Should Do Well in National Meet in East Next Month

BY BRAVEN DYER

Nothing is being left undone in an effort to put Southern California's Junior Olympic Games champions in the best possible shape for the national meet to be held at Atlantic City July 7-12. Friday the four boys with their coaches gathered with Boyd Comstock, director of the program for Southern California, and went through an afternoon of intensive drill at Echo Park Playground.

Sam Waxman, Louis Haley, Joe Andrade and Johnny Lee are the four youngsters carrying Southern California's hopes in the big meet at Atlantic City. And Comstock states that all four, thanks to diligent work on the part of their respective coaches, have improved tremendously since the local finals.

The boys will leave one week from today for Atlantic City. John F. Ness of The Times will be in charge of the party and accompanying him will be Arthur Dietz, the man who coached Bob San Jose to the national championship last year. Following the meet at Atlantic City the party will go to New York and board a Panama Mail liner for Latin America, the ocean voyage to consume twenty-eight days and bring the boys back to Los Angeles via the Panama Canal.

HAWAIIANS DUE

Eb Crane, director of the Junior Olympics in Hawaii, will arrive here next Wednesday with his Honolulu champions. The Hawaiian boys, who have made fine marks, are looked upon as Southern California' chief threat in the nationals. The Honolulu party will land at San Francisco Tuesday and then come south via train. They will stop at the Alexandria Hotel while in this city.

Coach Comstock has the following to say about Friday's workout:

"Our little get-together at Echo Park brought out some pleasing results and if advance form may be taken as a criterion it is logical to assume that Southern California will be up in front at Atlantic City, and battling for honors in the first division.

"Sam Waxman, Southern California senior champion, is showing a decided form improvement and if this attention to technique continues at the same rate, I look for him to better his last total. He has caught the harmonious relation that should exist between the legs and arms in the standing broad jump and this timing will certainly make certain a mark that will exceed his last official performance.

"He has eliminated his lack of follow through in the baseball throw which should give him some more footage in his distance. His last throw Friday in the impromptu test was almost perfect. In this action he put in all of his speed and at the same time was able to get set and get his shoulder into the heave. His work in the sprint was well worth watching. Previous to this he relied entirely upon his natural speed and fighting ability but within the last few days he has picked up the knack of lifting his knees and timing his arm action to his legs. To do this he has taken up the circular arm action which pulls the body forward when he is running his last twenty yards under stress.

CHINS WELL

"His chinning form is reminiscent of the form that we find in gymnasiums as used by trained athletes. The basketball event in which he scored so well in the Southern California meet should again net him a better than average score. This event is one that calls for mental poise and in this Waxman stands out.

Louis Haley, who ran second to Waxman in the finals, is also showing the correct amount of improvement and when these two seniors get together at Atlantic City it is probable that the basketball event will again decide the personal issue between them. Prior to the Southern California meet, Haley was the outstanding senior in the south, but in the finals he fell below his par in the baseball throw by more than twenty feet and dropped slightly in the basketball event. This gave first honors to Waxman, but in such a pentathlon as the Junior Olympics contest any one of a number of breaks may make or lose first honors.

In Friday's contest, Haley ran a dead heat with Waxman in the fast time of 3 3-5s. This betters the best mark made by either contestant by a full fifth of a second. Haley has potential stuff in this event that should come out within the next few weeks and the same thing applies to the broad jump. In this event Haley was under par in his earlier jumps, showing an inability to get real action into his effort. His past record and the fact that Coach Joe Colley has given him a better rhythm should bring the advance that has been predicted.

GETS OLD FORM

In the baseball test, Haley again showed the stuff that gave him his 310ft. throw in his county meet. He bettered his Southern California throw by about five feet and I feel certain that he will again pass the 300-foot mark.

Haley is also improving his chinning form, it being the theory of all the coaches that the style of all the Southern California boys should be above reproach. He is an excellent chinner and his slight deviations from perfect form are steadily being erased. Coach Colley seemed quite content with his form in the basketball event, although this particular event was not run off Friday. He is developing a higher arc and his mental poise while performing is excellent.

The junior champion, Joe Andrade, has been adopted by Coach Arthur Dietz of San Pedro and he has already worked this youngster into a smooth routine that should make him the outstanding junior of the country. Dietz is specializing on his one glaring weakness, the basketball event, and reported that he had thrown seventeen out of twenty in his last workout. Prior to this time he averaged but nine out of twenty and for this reason any improvement will help tremendously. In this and the other events he is being helped by Bob San Jose, last year's senior champion, who goes through events with him. Andrade also has the advantage of being cool and collected under fire and it will be remembered that he won his title by coming to the front after he had started his day with only nine baskets out of a possible twenty.

Andrade is almost perfect in the broad jump, throws the ball in good shape and is steadily improving his form in the sprint. He is getting away to a nice smooth start and is getting his feet up in front of him during the actual race. In Friday's test at Echo Park he finished a scant yard and a half back of the two seniors, which would give him a time better than nine seconds. He did this in his street clothes and when it is remembered that he was only capable of 9.1s. in the Southern California finals it will be seen that he is on the upgrade in this event. His jumping was also on a par with the best jumps made by the seniors. His chinning form is excellent and he should add points to his score in this event under the careful tutelage of Coach Dietz.

Coach Marion Sparrow reported that his boy Johnny Lee is holding his own in all events and expressed a wish that the boys would again get together out at his playground for a final test. He arrived too late Friday to get into any of the events save the chinning in which he showed ability.

STAR YOUNG ATHLETES WELL COACHED

PACHECO WINNER IN McMULLEN BOUT

Pete Pacheco, the Colorado sensation, last night captured the favor of the hundreds of fight fans who jammed the Main-Street Athletic Club when he won over Bill McMullen, 148-pound slugger, in the third round of a scheduled six-round bout. Pacheco was given a technical knockout decision over McMullen when McMullen's second stopped the bout by throwing in the towel. Ramon Montoya won a referee's decision from Kid Avelino in a close six-round match. The two fought on even terms for five rounds, Montoya winning the decision in the sixth by piling up a big lead.

The other three bouts resulted in a victory for Bobby Flores, who was given the fight over Milton Wilkins in the second round. Wilkins's lack of aggressiveness cost him the fight. Eddie Rubio lost to Joel Rich and Nimo Peres won from Santo Munano.

Eddie Collins has appeared in the box scores of twenty-five different American League seasons, starting with the Athletics in 1906 and finishing with the same club this year.

UPSETS FEATURE JUNIOR GAMES

San Diego Olympic Titles Won by Goddard, Lewis

SAN DIEGO, June 21.—Upsets featured the San Diego county championship Junior Olympic Games meet here this afternoon when Ed Goddard from Escondido with 566 points, and William Lewis of Grossmont, 550 points, won the senior and junior division championships, respectively.

Neither youngster was figured to finish in the money, but with their steady performances in each of the five events, they pulled away from a classy field.

The two boys' scores were the lowest recorded here in many years in winning a major county championship.

Goddard took but one first, this being in the standing broad jump which he won with a leap of 8ft. 9½in. He tied for second in the basketball toss with 14 and in the dash at 8 2-5s.

Lewis turned in but one first place. He won the basketball toss with sixteen baskets and was third in the seventy-five-yard dash at 9s. flat.

The two boys will leave for Atlantic City July 1 where they will compete in the national finals.

SERAPHS CLOUT SEALS, 11 TO 7

Crosetti only knocked down. Peters scored but Sigafoos was thrown out at the plate.

Gaston hit his second home run in the fifth, Crosetti and Pinelli singled in the sixth and the former scored on Donovan's fly. A pass to Haney, a sacrifice and a hit by Sigafoos gave the Angels a run in the seventh and Baker made one for the Seals in the last half of that inning with a circuit clout. Score:

FREEBOOTERS IN MALLET BATTLE WITH UPLIFTERS

With both the Freebooters led by Hal Roach and the Uplifters captained by Lionel Pedley, presenting changed lineups for the polo tilt on the Beverly Boulevard field, this afternoon it is conceded that the Uplifters have a splendid chance of avenging their defeat of last week.

Polo is taking so well at the Uplifters that the directors of the club have authorised a year round program calling for match games each Sunday throughout the twelve months, during which time several visiting teams will meet the locals in week-end games. In the meantime, club teams will battle it out each Sunday for the edification of the fans. And don't think that simply because most of the players are members of the one club that there is any lack of rivalry existing between the two teams, for such a spirit of sportsmanship prevails in this game of polo that it is considered quite the thing to bump your best friend all over the lot in the most approved fashion and still be thought none the less of by him for it, for he is just as apt to return the favor with interest on the next play.

For the benefit of those who are not familiar with the game, a running account of it, play by play, is given over the public address system installed at the field, although the game is an open one and most anyone can get the idea of it during the first few minutes of play.

Special reduced rates are in effect for the summer, there being several hundred seats available at half the usual nominal charge, parking is free and really there is no more pleasant way of spending an afternoon than by watching the action and thrills of this most exciting sport.

Paul Kremple Will Captain Gymnast Team

Paul Krempel, veteran L.A.A.C. gymnast and a member of the 1920 and 1928 American Olympic teams, has been chosen captain of the Mercury team winner of the 1930 American gymnastic championship.

Krempel will serve as captain for an indefinite period, and will aid Coach Ben Price in developing young high school gymnasts for the 1932 Olympics to be held here. He is the first L.A.A.C. gym captain and is certain to serve in that capacity through the Olympic Games.

Krempel has been an active gymnast in Southern California for many years, having won championships as far back as 1916.

The new captain was elected at a banquet of L.A.A.C. gymnasts a few days ago, held to celebrate the winning of the national title. At the dinner several recommendations were made to be forwarded to the national A.A.U. committee relative to the staging of future championships.

STREET AND BLADES DRAW SUSPENSIONS

ST. LOUIS, June 21. (AP)—Manager Gabby Street of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Ray Blades, outfielder, were suspended for three days by President John A. Heydler of the National League for an argument with Umpire Nagerkurth in yesterday's St. Louis-Philadelphia game, it was announced here today. Blades protested a called third strike and was ousted. Street was ordered off the field for protesting.

All the Angles

REGARDLESS of what sort of fight it may be, terrible or otherwise, terrible or even worse, few fights have brought about as much discussion and as many angles as the impending Carnera-Godfrey fight in Philadelphia tomorrow night.

In the first place, the sheer bulk or hulk of the two men—their combined weight being about 510 or 520 pounds—is out of the ordinary. Then, there is all the whispering, the charges and the denials.

There are those who believe that Godfrey is still the best of the heavyweights—when he wants to be. There are just as many others who are certain that Godfrey is all through, overfat, too old and too slow.

One camp takes the view that Carnera couldn't possibly beat him unless the result was all fixed in advance. Another camp figures that Carnera can win without being any second wonder.

Anyway the material is there for all the angles and arguments anyone can think up. For example, here is a contribution from a trained observer who ought to know:

About Carnera

Dear Sir: Will someone please tell me what they're going to do about this big Carnera?

I went to see him against Christner with the private belief and secret hope that the Akron rubber man would bounce him three-quarters of the way back to the banks of the dear old Tiber, but it was all quite different. Christner hit him enough times in the first round to make me believe that dreams do come true after all, but shucks, it didn't even erase the four or five yards of smile it takes to cover the lower sections of Carnera's face.

Carnera actually boxed, if you can imagine it. He wasn't off his toes a second in the ten or eleven minutes and skipped about quite like Ann Pennington on one of her really good nights—well, all right then, perhaps not quite that good—but anyway, he didn't wallow around like a Firpo or Willard or a hippo mired in the muck. Also, Carnera doesn't employ that flat, brassie swing that Firpo introduced with such success. No, sir. He pokes 'em straight out and when he decided the customers had their money's worth he popped Mr. Christner in earnest and the Akron man's knees started clicking together like the roll of a snare drum. Then a left and right turned out the lights and Christner went into a "deep dream of peace" just like A. B. Adhem but when he awakened, unlike Abou, he wasn't leading anything.

The big wop has fought himself into a pretty handy man in the twenty-four-foot districts. Any 200-pounder that takes him on ought to be given his option of a baseball bat or two bare fists. It is possible to learn to fight by fighting, the modern idea to the contrary, and if this big elephant sticks another dozen set-ups, frame-ups and let-ups under his belt he'll make those that are capable of thinking think two and even three times before they dip the quill in the ink.

Christner kept playing for the jaw and whether some solid smacks in the tummy could force as many "oof's" per minute out of Carnera as they did out of Willard at Toledo is yet to be determined, but they can't wave him aside with a light, airy gesture. He's actually lean through the midsection, too.

A. S. D.

P.S.: How'd you like to have a 275-pounder crack you with a full right swing? Personally, I'd rather start Morton Smith 6 up when he was hot. One could come down in 24 down in an eighteen-hole match and actually chuckle for weeks.

The Test at Wimbledon

There are two well-known facts that I can write down in advance of the big tennis carnival at Wimbledon. One is that Henri Cochet should win the singles championship and that Helen Wills Moody should dominate the women's contingent.

The big test may come in deciding whether Bill Tilden or Borotra is the next best player in the world. This argument is rather complicated. Tilden recently beat Borotra and Cochet beat Tilden. Then Borotra stopped Cochet, which is a feat that has been rarely accomplished in the last few years.

Tilden and Borotra look to be the two challengers out in front, but neither has more than an outside chance to nail the younger French star.

The wonder is that a veteran, such as Tilden now is, could go through the smashing campaign he has followed for so many months without getting stale. It will be his inability to recover quickly after a hard match that will count against him at Wimbledon more than anything else. In the women's sector gven Suzanne Lenglen never quite dominated the courts as Mrs. Moody rules them today.

Frank Hunter Works Before Big Match

BY WILLIAM T. TILDEN

WIMBLEDON (Eng.) June 21. (NANA)—Every tennis player has a favorite way of practicing for competition. There are players who want a complete lay off for days before a tournament.

You will find players who insist on playing actual sets in practice to get their timing. There are others who want to do no more than play but hours of steady practice instead. There are those who believe they need no practice at all. It is interesting to study the styles of various players.

COCHET RESTS

Henri Cochet is a player who appears to want little or no practice before a match; very little hard drill or competition in preparation for the event, but he prefers to play the match after several days of the most lazy and indifferent practice. In marked contrast to him, Rene La Coste wants plenty of intensive tennis up to the very moment of play.

La Coste will spend several hours a day during the preliminary rounds to the Davis Cup matches, and even on some one or two stretches when he does not want to actually play, he usually offers to tune up the muscles in his game.

Jean Borotra usually spends his practice periods of about an hour a day for the week before the competition begins in actual practice, but on the day immediately preceding he will indulge in several hard sets of singles. Borotra is a player of impulse rather than mechanical perfection. He sometimes bores him and is not a practice player stale. He is one of the few players in the game who can afford to produce his best tennis after short of practice.

Frank Hunter is a player who is a hard worker in practice. He prefers to play rather than to practice strokes, but he wants to play plenty of it up to almost the time for going to one day before the championship begins. He has one peculiarity in his practice preference. He likes to go out in the morning and get set on the day of a big match.

George Lott and John Hennessey do not want as much practice as work as Hunter. Lott also likes a day of rest, if possible, before a big match. On the other hand, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn want plenty of practice sessions for work up to the time of the actual play. They do not seem to get enough play.

MISS RYAN WORKS HARD

Among the women players it seems to want to practice all the time is Elizabeth Ryan. She is in Riviera one round before the tournaments, practicing as much as 3 in the morning and again in the afternoon, play stopped in the middle of the day.

Helen Wills is a player who practices regularly and conscientiously, but for short periods of time. She prefers to actually play sets and always chooses a man as her opponent rather than a woman. The same is true of Helen Jacobs except she usually does longer workouts than Miss Wills. She, too, prefers to play sets in her practice with a man.

Cilly Aussem, the little German star, is a very serious player in practice. She spends hours at a time on her game with a purpose. She usually just practices on the court where she will play in competition, often in the past to the detriment of her match play.

Senorita Alvarez loves to play on the court and practice for practice and overhead. She seldom plays singles and seldom pays much attention to her driving game.

I want to get my game in actual tournament play, for I never learn to make my game in practice. It is not worth while to practice. It is not worth while to practice. It is not worth while to

Los Angeles Athletic Club to Stage Prenational Swimming Meet Friday Evening

MISS MADISON ARRIVES THIS WEEK FOR EVENT

National Aquatic Stars to Compete at Mercury Club; Seattle Mermaid in Limelight

With the arrival of Helene Madison, Seattle school girl, the New York A. C. men's national championship swimming team and the Women's Swimming Association team early this week, the Los Angeles Athletic Club is primed for it's great swimming carnival featuring these stars next Friday night, just before the national championships at Los Beach, July 3 to 6.

Miss Madison, who splurged to fame by shattering nine world records in her first national competition, will be seen in a special 100-yard free style contest with Josephine McKim and Olive Hatch of L.A.A.C. Miss Madison did the 100-yard free style in the fast time of 1:08 flat, breaking the indoor record for the short course mark of 59 9-10s. held since 1926 by Ethel Lackie of Illinois W.A.C.

The New York men's swimming team to arrive Tuesday includes George Kojac, national indoor champion; Ray Jensen, national outdoor champion; Ray Ris, New York schoolboy, ranks nationally in the 100-yard distance; and Alberto Zorilla, Olympic Games 400-meter champion.

A mile relay race between Walter Crabbe of L.A.A.C. and Buster Crabbe of L.A. will be headed up by Fred Kellett, national 400-meter champion, and Austin Clapp, Yale A.C. may complete in the 1928 Olympic 400-meter relay. Crabbe, Clapp and Kellett followed Zorilla to the wire in the 1928 Olympic 400-meter relay, fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively, for the United States.

Ray Kojac, winner of the national indoor championship in 1928, will meet Frank Kellett, national outdoor champion, in a 220-yard free style. This is a special race over the non-Olympic outdoor distance.

Other stars to arrive on Tuesday's train include Eleanor Holm, Agnes Geraghty, Lisa Lindstrom, Adelaide Lambert, Katherine Rose, Catherine Ames and Constance Hanf, all stars in the Women's Swimming Association, which is expected to send a strong team.

Miss Madison, holder of numerous national and medley world's records, will appear in a relay with Adelaide Lambert, Miss Geraghty, Miss Lindstrom and Miss Ames. SILVER GATE EVENT TODAY

Cady. Both Crabbe and Miss McKim are students at U.S.C.

Among the competitors are Austin Clapp of Hollywood Athletic Club, who finished within five seconds of Crabbe in the recent three-quarter-mile swim at Lake Sherwood. Norman Kettering of Pacific Coast Club should finish well. From the Ambassador Swimming Club, a number of Tommy Thompson's juniors, winners last year, are expected to clean up on the 12-year cups, while Bob Bond is his best bet in the seniors. John Murray and Jack Wright should fight it out for the junior high place, according to the instructor.

In the women's division Miss McKim will have as her nearest rival, Norene Forbes, unattached 16-year-old girl who has won the Gate swim two years in succession. Miss Forbes is said to be improving lately and should, according to Coach (Doc) Beasley, offer plenty of competition. Hilda Curtis, also unattached, Venice, finished close to Miss Forbes in the recent Sherwood Lake race, and is favored to place. Lake Norconian Club also enters Edna Hayson, who last year won the girl's first junior trophy (12 years and under.)

Desauville Beach Club enters fifteen strong swimmers, headed by Tom Pierce, with Tom Medlicott, Norman, Ray, Harold and Roland Skeete, Jack White and others. The Santa Monica group competed in a dual meet with the San Diego Rowing Club on Friday night as a last warm-up affair for the event.

San Francisco and San Diego enter about 200 other swimmers. Carl Stevenson and Frank Mooney of the Olympic Club are predicted to defeat some of the best local talent.

Local entries:

Hollywood Athletic Club: Austin Clapp, McGowan Miller, Charles Best, Weston Kimball, Frank Wilton, Stewart Deats, George Merriam, James Tuthill, Frank Scott, Reggie Harrison, Lawrence Hall, Duke Callaghan, Bill Adams, George Harris, Bill Hoffman and Edward Rabell.

Desauville Beach Club: Tom Medlicott, Les Kheel, Bob Elliot, Lloyd Lightfoot, Ray McClelland, Norman, Ray, Holland, Harold Skeete, Braiden White, Jack White, Cy Washburn, Lyman Pratt, Francis Foster, Ray Pettigrew.

Los Angeles Y.M.C.A.: Ray Murray, Jack McDowell, Bob Crysler, Lynn Sears, Chas. Hart Bowman, Bruce Kiesler and Art Feldman.

Pacific Coast Club: Norman Kettering, Earl Pinelli, Al Bixler, Parton Klein, Jim Biving, Art Roden, Art Lindegren, Al Peterson, Don Kelly, Don Bovey.

Venice Athletic Swimming Association: Phil Daubenspeck, Hilda Curtis, Margaret Chamerot, Barbara Burke, Isabel Stobbe, Marion Burke, Justine Moses and Frieda Hartman.

Ambassador Swimming Club: John Wright, John Murray, Ralph Templer, Bob Bond, Edward Von Cleaf, Jack Murphy.

L.A.A.C.: Josephine McKim and Buster Crabbe.

Lake Norconian Club: Babe Walton, Louise Wenth, Ruby Harris, Phyllis Bell.

Tommy Thompson, instructor and coach at the Ambassador, announces that the Southern Pacific Association A.A.U. has granted him a sanction for the first outdoor swimming meet to be held in the evening of August 17.

Cochran to Perform Here

William A. Spinks, one of the best-known billiardists of the country, and holder of the world's record for the high run at 18.2 balkline, considers Welker Cochran the equal of any performer on the green cloth today.

Cochran, who is opening an engagement at Clifford Jones's billiard room tomorrow evening at 8 p.m., is ranked second at the balkline game by the latest National Billiard Association ranking, and seventh at three cushions. There is no game on the billiard table at which he does not excel.

Mr. Spinks, speaking from an experience of over forty years, considers Frank Ives as the great billiard master of all time, and compares Welker Cochran's game very favorably with that of the great Ives. Their common characteristic, according to Mr. Spinks, is their lack of affection at the table, and the absence of mannerisms of stroke and style so common to the top flight players of today.

ERNIE HOOD, IMPERIAL TO MIX AT PASADENA

Those little rivals of the flyweight class, Ernie Hood and Alfredo Imperial, who have already met three times with honors now even, will clash in the main event of an interesting bill at Pasadena Arena Thursday night.

Chalky Wright will fight the six-round semifinal against that tough Mexican boy, Ray Navarro, at 120 pounds. Trench Kling will meet Hewey Maples in the four-round special event, 135 pounds. Four-round preliminaries will be: Paul Burke vs. Paul Chaney, 130 pounds; Stafford McCoy vs. Al Hamilton, 128 pounds.

EQUIPOISE ANNEXES ANOTHER TURF RACE

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Harry Payne Whitney's Equipoise ran his 2-year-old winning streak to five straight today as he won the Great American Stakes and $14,450 at Aqueduct. Carrying the crushing impost of 130 pounds, the Whitney juvenile defeated W. R. Coe's Polydorus by two lengths with Gifford Cochrane's Hellanthus, third.

RABBIT PUNCHES

By Paul Lowry

AN OPEN QUESTION

THERE probably will be some little predicting within the next few months relative to the return of Jack Dempsey to the ring. Literary men all over the country will write about the matter, and some of them may even follow the quaint custom of traveling to California shores from the East to interview Mr. Dempsey personally.

It has been some time since Mr. Dempsey was heavyweight ruler of the universe, and it has been some time since Mr. Dempsey has waged a battle within the ropes—1927 to be exact—but Mr. Dempsey's activities and future plans still make the headlines.

And since Herr Max Schmeling of Germany was so inconsiderate as to win the world's heavyweight crown on a foul from Jack Sharkey, some of Mr. Dempsey's remarks previous to that battle are being held against him.

For one thing, Mr. Dempsey said that in the event of Herr Schmeling capturing the heavyweight crown he might be constrained to emerge from retirement.

Said constrainment, of course, would be due solely to the unselfish desire of lifting the diadem again for dear old America.

But it appears now, as in the past, that Dempsey interviews are almost unanimously incorrect.

The night Herr Schmeling was awarded the championship Mr. Dempsey, sitting in his Los Feliz home, said the result did not change his ideas of permanent retirement.

DEMPSEY WILL FIGHT

IT IS, therefore, necessary to seek information from other channels on Mr. Dempsey's probable intentions.

None could be any closer to the subject than Mr. Ray Alvis, manager of Young Jack Thompson, the new welterweight champion of the world. Mr. Alvis was Dempsey's matchmaker in Chicago.

Ray says Manassa Jack will fight again.

"No question about it," declares Ray.

"The lure of a $1,000,000 purse will drag Dempsey out of retirement.

"He will get that amount for a fight next summer—not this summer. He can't get into shape this year. The operation he had was severer than imagined.

"Regardless of what the prospects are for gate receipts, Madison Square Garden officials want Dempsey in a championship match.

"Money is the lure for Dempsey. He's not broke by any means, but he's a tremendous spender, and he needs ready cash.

"He'll meet Schmeling next summer. You mark my words."

That was Alvis's parting shot as he departed for San Francisco, where Thompson meets Young Corbett in a nontitle match that nets the champion $20,000.

Before the shove-off Alvis said Thompson will not defend his title this year, and when he does, it will not be against Jackie Fields but Jimmy McLarnin.

"I'm after three more overweight matches for Thompson this summer—Johnny Indrassano at New York, Tommy Freeman at Detroit and possibly Benny Miller here.

"We'll put the title up a year after winning it."

PRAISES TIMES MARATHON

A WORTHWHILE compliment for The Times Pre-Olympic Marathon, an annual fixture, comes from H. O. Heason, an entrant the past two years.

He writes:

"I understand The Times Pre-Olympic Marathon is to develop distance runners that will be able to represent old Uncle Sam successfully in the next Olympic Games. In the one year since its start I believe it has done a lot of developing.

"Here are a few of the figures that might be of interest to you:

"Last year, allowing time for the extra mile of the race, but seven runners were able to negotiate the distance in four hours or less. This year four hours was a snail's pace. Twenty-one finished in that time—a 300 per cent increase.

"Of those finishing in the first ten last year, all returned to run, showing the interest, and of the lot, eight finished in the first ten again, one twelfth and one out of the money. All but two showed an improvement varying from eleven minutes to one hour.

A MARATHON CLUB

"I PREDICT next year will see seven run under three hours, and twenty-five under three and one-half hours.

"We have formed a new club called the Marathon Club of Southern California, open to anyone interested in long-distance running. Any one interested can secure a membership application by getting in touch with me at 12204 Washington Boulevard.

"Five of our members were in the four-hour limit—eighth, ninth, twelfth, nineteenth and twenty-first. We believe that the Indians' superiority lies in the fact that they are in trainig at all times.

"With that in mind our club has the determination to keep up our interest all year instead of one or two months in the spring, and prove we are on par.

"Wishing you even greater success next year."

ANGELENOS BRING IN THOUSANDS OF FISH

Thousands of barracuda, bass, halibut and bonita were caught during the last week by the many local anglers fishing from the live-bait boats at Santa Monica, declares Capt. Jack Dugan of the Morris boats Palisades and Morris Owl.

One angler earlier in the week hooked and succeeded in landing a thirty-eight-pound white sea bass, the largest caught this season at the bay city. The Morris Company's new ship Morris Owl, on the twice-a-day run, has now been in commission and has been favorably taken to by the anglers. It carries fifty passengers and is commanded by Capt. John Inglehart, licensed pilot.

Splendid catches of bottom fish, some barracuda and plenty of mackerel have been caught by the many anglers fishing from the Challenger barge. Every accommodation is offered on the barge, including plenty of live bait.

MORRISON SUSPENDED

CINCINNATI, June 21. (AP)—John Morrison, Brooklyn National League pitcher, today was suspended and fined $250 by Manager Wilbert Robinson for violation of the club rules. The latter said Morrison relieved Adolf Luque in Thursday's game here and he has not seen Morrison since.

Big Six

By the Associated Press

The big six aggregation was again on the downward path yesterday with the exception of its cellar champion, Babe Ruth. The Babe had a perfect day, going to bat officially only twice and getting two hits, one of them his twenty-third home run.

The result lifted his average 6 points, to .378. The two leaders, Chuck Klein and Mickey Cochrane, each hit once in four times up and lost a point each. Paul Waner also was dropped a point with two hits in five tries.

Babe Herman and Johnny Hodapp dropped clear out of the big six with a bad day at bat. Sam Rice of Washington, regained his place as American League member going into fourth place at .367, and Bill Terry of New York became a National League representative, his .360 average placing him between Rice and Ruth.

The standing:

	G	AB	R	H	Pct.
Klein, Phillies	69	278	76	105	.378
Cochrane, Athletics	69	258	69	97	.376
Waner, Pirates	69	280	70	105	.375
Rice, Senators	69	267	56	100	.375

STAR MERMAIDS TO COMPETE IN ARROWHEAD SWIM MEET

A great field of feminine swimmers and divers will feature the Lake Arrowhead swimming meet to be held at the mountain resort next Sunday, June 29. The entire team from the Women's Swimming Association of New York will compete as well as Helene Madison, holder of nine world records, Josephine McKim, three times a winner in the 1929 American outdoor championships, and Georgia Coleman, holder of three national diving championships.

The New York team is composed of Eleanor Holm, Adelaide Lambert, Agnes Geraghty, Lisa Lindstrom, Katharine Brown, Catharine Ames and Constance Hanf. The latter is a 13-year-old miss who has been creating a sensation in metropolitan sprint swimming circles. This field is the greatest feminine contingent ever gathered together for a meet outside of the nationals. All the stars will take part in the 1930 American championships at Long Beach, July 3 to 6, and in the prenationals at the L.A.A.C. next Friday. The Arrowhead meet will be staged by Fred Cady, coach of the Los Angeles A. C. team.

YACHTSMEN ENTER ISLAND RACE

San Clemente Cruise May Draw Largest Field Since Event Was Founded in 1926; Sloops, Schooners, Yawls Seek Winning Trophy

BY FRANK ROCHE

One of the finest sailing tests of the summer season for Southern California yachtsmen will be provided next Saturday and Sunday when the gun is sounded outside the Los Angeles Harbor breakwater sending away some twenty craft on the first leg of the annual San Clemente Island race. The pick of Southern California's schooners, yawls and sloops, excepting, of course, the boats entered in the Honolulu classic, which gets under way July 4, will be represented in the two-day cruise around San Clemente Island.

Henry "Skip" Warren, the man who started the ball rolling for the San Clemente race in 1926, the year of its founding, predicts that the field this time will come near the record for entries, which was set the first time out. "Skip" believes more than twenty boats will face the starter's gun. Twenty-two boats raced the first year and that mark has not been reached since.

The trophy for this 127-mile sailing event is a silver replica of the Westward, Syl Spaulding's cruiser. Spaulding was one of the first entries with his boat, incidentally. Another seasoned Southland skipper who is pointing for the trophy is W. W. Pedder. His Diablo won the race three times and he is eager to cop it again.

Among the entries is the boat that won the race last year, Owen Churchill's trim little eight-meter sea charger, the Babe. Churchill, however, will not be on hand to skipper his sloop as he is in the East awaiting the arrival from this coast of the Angelita, his latest eight-meter craft which he purchased from the California Yacht Club syndicate following the King of Spain races last March. The Angelita will race on Long Island Sound this summer.

In Churchill's absence the Babe will probably be sailed by Commodore Pierre Davis of the California Yacht Club. When the Babe won the race last year, Ted Conant skippered her.

Commodore Al Christie expects his new six-meter buy the Lanai here any day now from the east coast. She is a famous six and should go fine in competition here.

Preparations for start of the Honolulu race are going along fine, according to Admiral Albert Soiland. Morgan Adams's Enchantress, Walter Horne's Contender, Dr. Floyd Swift's Mollilou; Lazard Lippman's Talayha and H. W. Rohl's Pandora are all being given last-minute touches and each skipper believes his boat will be in tip-top shape for the long race.

Several last-minute entries are expected by the Trans-Pacific Yacht Club, the organization staging the race. Clem Stose has not as yet entered his yawl Teva, winner of the last race, but those in the know believe he will do so before the list closes.

The eights, R's, sixes and stars resumed their week-end series yesterday off the breakwater. They will carry on again today. The Long Beach-Los Angeles star boat series will also be continued off the beach city this afternoon.

SACRAMENTO FANS NEED SLEEP

Night Baseball Keeping Diamond Bugs Up too Late; Town Folk Hope to Hit Hay as Soon as Senators Leave Town; Hard on Telegraph Operators

SACRAMENTO, June 21. (AP)—Sacramento baseball fans who used to complain their work wouldn't permit them to attend games except on Sunday now have a problem of another kind. They're not getting enough sleep.

The coming of night baseball, under artificial lights, at Moreing Field brought joy to the hearts of those who put in eight hours a day, six days a week, keeping the wolf a safe distance from the door.

"Here, at least, is a break for the working people," they said. "Now we can see baseball games in the cool of the evening when the toil of the day is ended."

So they flocked to Moreing Field—12,000 of them on the opening night, and more than 9000 the second night. The first night the game lasted until 11 o'clock. That was considered unusual. And it was a gala occasion, anyway, so nobody minded staying up a little past the usual bedtime.

The second night the game opened at 8:30 and the last gun was fired at 11:10. Unusual again, the spectators thought. Lots of hitting.

After stifling yawns through the heat of a June afternoon the loyal band of onlookers came back gamely on the third evening.

"It'll be short and snappy tonight," they thought. "We'll get to bed early and make up some sleep."

Instead, they sat popeyed and watched the Senators and the Oaks run up startling totals of hits, the home-town team finally winning, 14 to 12. Pitcher after pitcher was rushed into the fray in attempts to stop the barrage. Oakland used five and Sacramento four. The curtain went down at 11:30.

How many men, women and children were late for work the next morning never will be known. Sleepily they discussed the game, agreeing that night baseball is a great thing—and counting on getting some sleep when the team is away.

In a hot little room in a corner of a morning newspaper office sat a telegraph operator the other night, bending over his key. "Huh, box scores at midnight," he growled. "What's the world coming to, anyway?"

REISTER SIGNS FOR JACK SPARR BATTLE

Bobby Reister, the Alhambra schoolboy, who is growing from a lightweight into a welter and who has not lost a professional fight during his career at the smaller clubs around Los Angeles, meets Jack Sparr, the veteran Lomita scrapper, in the eight-round main event of Matchmaker "Doc" Moffett's weekly ring show at South Gate Thursday night.

Sparr, who has fought such men as Young Jack Thompson and Sammy Mandell during his career, is expected to prove the acid test for the youngster. Ritchie Thomas of Compton and Lupe Castro of Santa Ana, a pair of aggressive junior lightweights, are billed for the semi-final.

TAYLOR HURTS HAND; MASTRO GO DEFERRED

DETROIT, June 21. (AP)—The fight between Earl Mastro and Bud Taylor, scheduled for the 26th inst., was postponed until July 1 today when Taylor's manager informed the State Boxing Commission the fighter had suffered an injury to his hand.

HARNESS RACES LISTED FOR ANNUAL COUNTY FAIR

POMONA, June 21.—Harness races ranging from the 2:08 class to the 2:25 are to be held at the Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona, opening September 12, according to announcement by Frank Lieginger of Stockton, racing secretary of the Western Fairs Association, who now is accepting final entries for the stake races. Entries for the stake races are scheduled to close June 20, but entries for the other races will not close until September 8.

The wide range in classes is indicative of what is expected to be the greatest racing program ever planned for the county fair. Practically all of the races will be made up of horses in 2:20 class or less, and in addition to these events there will be a series of running races.

Legion Ascot Speedway Lists Bitter Battle This Afternoon Between Auto Race Kings

More speed and the most bitter competition ever seen at the track, is the promise for this afternoon at the Legion Ascot Speedway. With the fight for the 1930 championship of the Southwest well under way and several dirt-track speed kings in the thick of the battle such pilots as Jimmy Sharp, Francis Quinn, "Swede" Smith and Walt May are expected to open their mounts to the limit and to enact some of the most hair-raising battles ever staged on the hazardous curves of the five-eights of a mile saucer.

Sharp, whose Garnet Special blew a tire with only two laps to go in the feature race of thirty laps last week, and which resulted in his being passed by Francis Quinn on the last lap, is in second place in the competition for the year's racing crown, and the San Pedro ace anticipates adding a number of points to his credit by a clean sweep of things this afternoon.

Quinn has installed a new 183-cubic-inch motor in his Dayton special and figures he will be able to set a hot pace from now on and thereby stave off the efforts of all others to unseat him in his position of leader for the title. Francis, who was injured at Fresno a month ago, was not in tiptop physical condition last Sunday, and therefore did not drive his mount as fast as it would go, it is declared. Having fully recovered, the plucky little veteran should be in shape to open up the high-speed creation today.

However, while Sharp and Quinn finished one-two in the three races last Sunday, and only encountered serious competition from Melvin McKee, they are expected to go to the post against a much faster and larger field of drivers of cars this afternoon.

Considerable remodeling work has been going on in the racing colony during the past several days, with the result that several contestants are expected to push their gas chariots around the five-eighths-of-a-mile oval much faster than ever before.

For one, Walt May should bear watching. The Alhambra husky did not accomplish anything spectacular last week because his McDowell special was not ready for the test. However, this car, which was a year and a half under construction, and which is fashioned around a Model A Ford motor, being one of the few of its kind, has been clicking off some sensational speed in trial spins during the past week, and may be driven to first money in the thirty-lap feature today.

At the same time "Speed" Hinkley of Pasadena will have a set of new cylinders in front of him when he climbs in the seat of the Redlands special. "Swede" Smith is introducing a remodeled Triflex special, while Melvin McKee predicts that his Mikkleson creation will outsprint every other creation at the course.

The races will get under way promptly at 2 o'clock, with Ed (Strangler) Lewis, the wrestler, billed to be the honorary referee. Lewis, an ardent racing fan, has been given full authority in the staging of the program.

Herb Marow will again give listeners-in a lap-by-lap description over the radio broadcasting hook-up.

HORSES TO RUN AGAIN AT BORDER

Agua Caliente Summer Bill Scheduled to Get Under Way on July 4

AGUA CALIENTE (Mex.) June 21.—The fifty-two-day summer meeting of the Agua Caliente Jockey Club is going to start off on July Fourth in a three-day inaugural "Blaze of Glory," with thirty races carded for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 4, 5 and 6. Racing Secretary Francis Dunne, has sent on the program for the opening week from Washington Park, Chicago. The young official has supplied a wide variety of contests for the Mexican course. The opening day's sport includes the Summer Inaugural handicap and the Independence Handicap, both overnight events for high-class horses. Clockers now on hand report numerous stables have their star performers in readiness for action.

Shipments from Kansas City, Chicago, St. Louis and Cleveland will arrive before July 1, so that horses from these places are certain to be in readiness to go to the post.

Dunne has arranged feature events for each day, including a number of juvenile clashes. Agua Caliente boasts a plentiful supply of two-year-olds. It will be possible to card at least one kindergarten race daily. A few of the two-year-olds now in training at the Mexican Spa are: J. W. Grant, Millard, Mi Concha, Harahaw, Shasta Dipper, Anaesthetic, Fleet Bank, Morcita, Engardo, Mustardo, Seths Pride, Judge Austin, Beedle Boodle, Nina Sioan, Ella Madelina, La Carrillon, My Shot, Mary Ream, Shasta Charm, Blanche Brook, Golden Oriole, Sam Gilmore, College Inn, Emma Lou, etc. Up, Whatman, College Girl, Miss Joan, Gabbo, Miss Cheyenne, among those coming from eastern points.

These baby thoroughbreds are to be pointed toward one of the principal stake events of the season—the Juvenile Handicap, scheduled for decision on the afternoon of August 16, at five and a half furlongs.

"New York makes a specialty of two-year-old contests, during the summer," said General Manager James N. Crofton. "While I was visiting Belmont Park recently, they ran two juvenile events daily.

Speedy Dado and Chato Laredo, Two Ring Gamecocks, Battle Tuesday in Olympic

FLYWEIGHTS TO TOP BOUT CARD

Filipino and Mexican Clash in Ten-Rounder

Boy from Below Border Set for Local Debut

Newsboy Brown Lost Verdict to Juarez Boxer

Chato Laredo and Speedy Dado—gamecocks of the flyweights—clash at the Olympic Tuesday night in a semi-Pacific Coast title bout. It also includes foreign territory, since Laredo is the champion of Mexico and Dado claims the 112-pound crown of the Orient.

It will be the initial appearance of Laredo here. He comes from Juarez, just across the line from El Paso, where he has whipped everything in sight, including three Los Angeles flies. They are Newsboy Brown, Young Sport and Ernie Hood.

Laredo can get plenty of action here in ramakichea with all three. The Mexican's decision over Brown was protested by Emmett Ledwith, but the Juarez boy's hand was raised in the bull ring to the salve of "vivas."

Dado has been regarded as the outstanding 112-pounder on the Coast for a couple of years. His colorful style has made him popular. Jesus Cortez, the boy's Filipino manager, is now ready to take Dado to New York and demand a showdown for the world's title.

OFFERED WOLGAST GO

Cortez has an offer to send Dado against Midget Wolgast the second week in July, but will not accept the match until the Laredo fight is over. Nothing but a trick shoulder, which has forced the Filipino to take frequent vacations, has kept him out of the East.

In the gymnasium Laredo looks like a splendid little fighter. He is a combination club miller and boxer. He won many of his fights at the border by knockouts.

About a year ago Laredo was on the Coast. He held Dado to a draw in San Francisco. Managerial troubles forced him to return to Mexico and he has improved his stuff with added strength.

Matchmaker Wad Wadhams is sending Jimmy Hanna, the Idaho boy who stopped Wally Fraser his last start, back in the semi-wind-up under Dado and Laredo. He meets Bud Doyle of San Francisco.

FOUGHT CAMPBELL

Doyle stayed six rounds with Frankie Campbell and when a rematch was suggested here Campbell turned it down. Hanna seems to have hit his stride and should land a main event if he gets by Doyle.

Sammy Offerman and Rito Punay will tangle in the six-round special event. The weight is 135 pounds. Both of these boys throw a lot of gloves, Offerman being the best boxer, however.

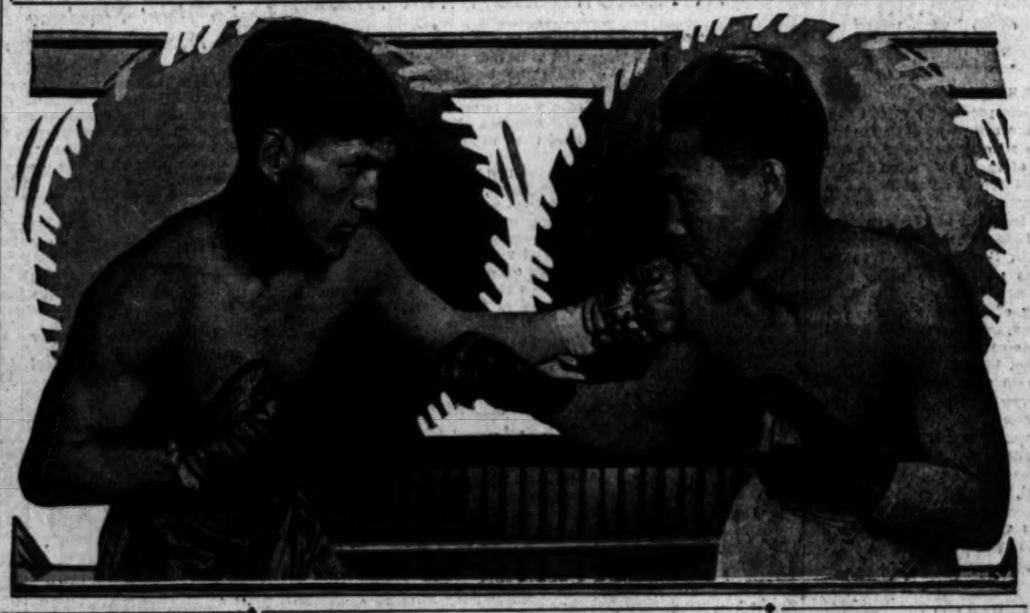
Sammy Aguirre and Manuel Davilo, lightweights, box one four, with Leo Domingo and Frankie Manna in the curtain-raiser.

Since his arrival here Laredo has been licensed by the Mexican colony. He is the first real champion to come here from Mexico. Most of the boys claiming Mexican titles were born and raised in the United States.

Laredo won his title below the border by winning tournaments in different Mexican States and turning back all comers.

WHEN CACTUS CHAMP MEETS THE BAMBOO KING

Flyweight title-holders of Mexico and the Orient fight for the Pacific Coast laurels Tuesday night when Chato Laredo and Speedy Dado square off at the Olympic. Laredo is the product of the Juarez bull rings while Dado is Manila's best "wrapper."



MILLER FIGHTS BABE ANDERSON

Welterweights Clash Friday at Hollywood Club

Babe Anderson of San Jose will fight Benny Miller at the Hollywood American Legion stadium Friday night. Anderson stopped Oakland Jimmy Duffy in three heats. The same Duffy went ten rounds with Miller only recently. Anderson stopped Leo Hernandez in a punch last Tuesday night. That's the type fighter Babe Anderson is. He was matched to fight Black Jack Thompson at the Olympic but it is said Ray Alvis, Thompson's manager, threatened to pull the welterweight champion off the card if the Olympic went through with its intentions to match Anderson with Thompson. Alvis afterward agreed to take on Cardosa.

It may be tough on Miller fighting a socker like Anderson and just why the local Jewish flash takes on such a dangerous opponent at this stage of his career no one knows. He has nothing to gain and everything to lose, the experts contend, as Anderson has yet to clash with local fight fans.

Ray Spiker fights Bad News Johnson in the semi-wind-up. The boys are heavyweights and there will be some socking in this fight.

The real class of the show may be Young Papke in the special event. No fighter in three years has fought at Hollywood with Papke's all-around color. He looks like a comer and his two quick knockouts in the only fights he has had at the stadium have made him a popular fighter with the post's patrons. Papke is being groomed for bigger fights but he is too young to fight semi-wind-ups and main events. Jess Vasques will fight Papke.

Boxo Kamisher meets Mike Cordova in the second spot and Dick McDaniels will battle Domingo Lopez in the curtain raiser.

Loynes Boat Almost Ready

Under the watchful and expert eye of Dick Loynes, Long Beach sportsman, a speedboat, which it is hoped will bring the famous American Gold Cup to the Pacific Coast for the first time, is nearing the final stages of construction and will soon be launched at Wilmington for tests and tuning up before shipment to the east coast, where the American championships will be held this year.

Since the first of the year the process of planning and building has gone forward in the yards of Fellows & Stewart, Inc., Wilmington boat builders, and the craft is just now assuming the proportions of a speedboat. Finishing touches to the upper frames and graining the wood for painting and installation of auxiliary equipment is the work of the day at present.

Following consultations with technicians of the Union Oil Company as to motor specifications and the proper fuel and lubricants which would be required, Loynes has constructed a sixteen-cylinder motor of his own design which he terms a "Loynes Special." Its specifications will permit it to be entered in the C-3 class, the division comprising the American Gold Cup and the President of the United States Cup races. Of 625 cubic inch piston displacement, the huge engine, which has sixteen intakes and sixteen carburetors, one for each cylinder, is V-type in construction and will develop 400 horsepower.

The American Gold Cup race will be held at Red Bank, N. J., August 16. The President of United States Cup race, which Loynes has also entered, will be held on the Potomac River, Washington, D. C., September 13.

MILLERS GET HARRIS BACK

PHILADELPHIA, June 21. (AP)—Spencer Harris, substitute outfielder for the Athletics, will be returned to the Minneapolis club in the American Association, the Philadelphia club announced tonight. Harris came to the Athletics from Detroit, which had obtained him from Minneapolis, under the rule he will be sent back to the latter club.

"Bill" Hunter Will Reopen Camp for Boys

Willis O. (Bill) Hunter, popular director of athletics at the University of Southern California, this week is winding up his affairs at the Trojan institution until later this summer preparatory to opening his Catalina Island Boys' Camp. Hunter, who is a member of the official football rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and a nationally recognized sports authority, has been conducting the camp for seven years and it has become immensely popular with boys from 7 to 17 and with their parents who are anxious to have them spend a summer of outdoor life. The camp is open from July 2 to August 16.

The camp is located at Howland's Landing, near the Isthmus and fourteen miles from Avalon, and facilities and instruction are provided for all athletics, including tennis, baseball, track and field, basketball, handball, boxing, wrestling, football, golf, fishing and all types of water sports. Nature study is also included as is study of submarine gardens and Indian relics found near the camp. A expert dietician directs the dining-room.

Elmer Henderson, former University of Southern California football coach, is codirector of the camp with Hunter.

BROWNS MUST TAKE BACK RED BENNETT

MILWAUKEE, June 21. (AP)—Officials of the Milwaukee Association baseball team today said Commissioner Landis ordered Red Bennett, Brewer outfielder, to return immediately to the St. Louis Browns. Landis said Bennett was optioned out twice before he came here last spring. He ruled the Browns either must retain Bennett or sell him to a club outside the Browns' chain.

DOLD WINS TITLE

REFEREE FAILED TO CLICK

Crowley in Tough Spot in Recent Heavyweight Muddle; Handled it Badly, Writer Says

BY JACK FARRELL

NEW YORK, June 21. (Exclusive)—It must be admitted that Jimmy Crowley, referee of that four-round fizzle between Jack Sharkey of Boston and Max Schmeling of Germany, was in a tough spot when the Teuton went down claiming a foul in that fourth session last week. But there have been other referees in situations just as delicate and they handled them to perfection. Crowley did not.

And the bout which saw Schmeling crowned heavyweight champion of the world (shades of Dempsey and Tunney!) will go down in the books as being grossly mishandled. The only thing about the bout that was well handled was the getting of enough suckers to pay a $750,000 gate to see a pair of palookas swing at each other like two youngsters with a pair of pillows. No wonder one of them was hit low. On several occasions each of them came near to breaking the other kneecap.

But to get back to the referee. In the first place Crowley did not see the punch which dropped Schmeling, despite the fact that he said later that he did. When Schmeling dropped to the canvas Crowley rushed over and crouched down beside him. Then he turned his eyes to the opposite side of the ring to catch the count of the knockdown timekeeper. He had no chance to pick up the count because the bell ending the round rang very shortly thereafter.

JUDGE'S VERDICT

When Schmeling continued to writhe on the canvas after the bell Crowley asked first one judge and then the other if he had seen the blow. One of them, Harold Barnes, said that he did. And it was his decision, not that of Crowley, that gave Schmeling the victory on a foul, although the official victory was written by Crowley.

From our position at the ringside we were facing Schmeling's back when the questionable blow landed. The judge, Barnes, who was seated immediately below the mix-up, said it was clearly a low punch. Spectators on the side of the ring opposite from our chair also declared the blow foul; Sharkey, himself, admitted the punch was low, but insists it did not cripple the Teuton. From all the testimony available, the punch was quite evidently low. The question that now puzzles us is, "Was it hard enough to cripple Schmeling?" Sharkey was moving backward at the time and it didn't seem possible to us he could deliver a crippling blow.

Sharkey has been mixed up in several fights that have ended in fouls and controversies. The upshot of his participation in bouts which have ended in fouls or alleged fouls was that he went into the ring last week with the odds against him if he sent any punches out of bounds.

But it was only natural a claim of foul by Schmeling on a punch that was in the least way questionable would tend to remove some of the skepticism and make the skeptics reflect: "Maybe Sharkey does hit 'em low, after all." The psychological reaction on the part of the fans to more alleged low punches by Sharkey most certainly would not be in Sharkey's favor.

WHAT ABOUT MAX?

But what about Schmeling? Max got himself knocked out by Larry Gains over in Europe before he came to this country. Maxie claimed he was fouled. He was knocked out in a bout with Franz Deiner and again claimed he was fouled. There is such a thing as a chronic foul claimer. Phil Scott, the Englishman, is in that class. It seems to be a European trait which provides a fortune for them and a goodly number of shekels for the third and fourth-rate American boxers who meet them. The next time Schmeling fights in this country he will be closely watched for indications of foul claiming.

An honest appraisal of Schmeling as champion at this stage of his career cannot possibly put him in a class with good second-raters of the Sexing game. Sharkey outfought and outslugged him all the way and undoubtedly would have won were it not for the foul.

Carnera and Godfrey Set for Ring Mill

PHILADELPHIA, June 21. (AP)—Primo Carnera, man mountain of Italy, and George Godfrey, Black Panther of Leigerville, Pa., topped off their training today for Monday night's ten-round battle at the Phillies' ball park.

Carnera, with a score of knockouts to his credit since his invasion of America six months ago, is bigger than Godfrey, but despite a physical handicap of twenty-five pounds, the negro was a slight favorite on what betting has taken place.

The Italian will enter the ring scaling about 265 pounds, while Godfrey expects to be down to 240.

Godfrey insists he is in better shape for Carnera than he has been in years and predicts he will win by a knockout. He thinks a left hook to the jaw will catch the ambling Alp some time during the bout and that when, and if it does, Primo will take the count.

In the main, however, Godfrey said he probably would fight a defensive battle. "I'm not going to be crazy enough to stick out my chin," he said, "but if I get him a left it will be curtains."

Billy Duffy, Carnera's American manager, said his charge had a good chance to knock out Godfrey with a right to the heart.

"The only way I think Godfrey can win," he said, "is through his greater ring experience. He might get the decision after ten rounds. I would rather have waited six months before tackling Godfrey, but Carnera insisted, so here we are."

Announcement said the bout would be broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System through stations WCAU and WXAU. The bout is scheduled to start at 9 o'clock, eastern standard time.

MAURICE McCARTHY RETAINS GOLF TITLE

ST. ALBANS (N. Y.) June 21. (AP) Maurice J. McCarthy, Jr., former Georgetown star, successfully defended his metropolitan amateur golf championship today, trouncing Pennington Miller-Jones, a clubmate, at a Green Meadow, 9 and 7, in the thirty-six-hole final match.

IDAHO ANNOUNCES TWO GRID GAMES IN HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO (Moscow) June 21.—Contracts have been signed for the University of Idaho's 1930 football team to make two appearances in the Hawaiian Islands during the Christmas vacation, announces George E. Horton, graduate manager of athletics at Idaho. Christmas Day the Vandals meet the Honolulu town team, an aggregation boasting a large number of ex-Pacific Coast football stars, and on New Year's Day they oppose the University of Hawaii eleven. The Vandals will sail from San Francisco about December 17, Horton announces. These games will be the first appearance of an Idaho football team in the Hawaiian Islands.

MUNICIPAL NET TOURNEY TODAY

Women's Singles and Men's Doubles Play Opens

Play in the annual municipal tennis tournament, now under way at Griffith Playground courts, will be featured by the opening of first-round matches in the women's singles and men's doubles today, according to the announcement of the Playground and Recreation Department, which is conducting the event.

In the men's singles, which began last Sunday, matches will be continued, with most of the favorites still remaining in the race for the championship. Last week a record number of entries in this division began play, a total of 103 men having entered. Similar large entry lists have been received in other divisions.

Following the custom started last week for this tournament, only the hours of play have been announced by the tournament committee, and players will not be told their pairings until their arrival at the courts.

The schedule for today follows:

8 a.m.—Bartosh, Belgio, Burgfield, Graves, Hammond, Klaer, Johnson, Miller, Smith, Patten, Reese, Shaw, Tonzing, Wetsell, Whedon, Wrighter.

9 a.m.—Berg and Cooperswith, Chanson, Hall, Hoffman, Hunter, Jones, Kaufman, Johnson and Wentworth, Mahoney, Millham, Otis, Pote, Randall, Rindell, Washington.

10 a.m.—Bartosh and Whedon, Belgio and Patten, Bond and Burgfield, Boris and Harris, Cate, Chanson and Howard, Dent and Middleton, Johnson, Klaer and Ehlers, Longwood and Boardman, Masias and Andrews, Shrwin, Cooper and partner, Patten and Edwards, Shrwin and Graves, Shaw, Dunbar.

11 a.m.—Ackley and Gordon, Brashear, Bond, Bush, Cate, Conner and Myer, Custer and Crockett, Goodman and Dietz, Hall, Hoffman, Hall and Wood, Hunter and Woodrow, Myers, Sebelin, Palmer, Reese and Cole, Watkins and Bond, Williams and Little, Woodhurst and Hall.

12 noon—Baller, Bartosh, Collier, Escobedo, Galloway and Rexfield, Hazelrigg, Manning, Patten, Quinn, Rhodes, Schultz, Sullivan and Custeau.

1 p.m.—B. Curtis, Dicks, H. Campbell, Harris, Hyman, Olney, J. Muller, Quinn, Serale, Sleet, Stanek, Tabakow, Wood, Wynne.

2 p.m.—Bartosh, Callahan and Callahan, Hendrex, Mackerman and Libaer, Lorimore and Patton, Maddoux, Price and Skinner, Matthews, Medford.

3 p.m.—Brashear and Vanamaker, A. Curtis, Hunt, Lindsey and Collins, Mcbell, Rose.

Rough Water Swim Carded

With a start and finish on the beach in the breakers, Lady Luck is expected to play a hand in the one-mile rough-water swim to be held next Saturday afternoon at the Santa Monica Breakers Club under sanction of the A.A.U.

A swimmer coming in for the finish may catch a breaker just at the right time and speed to the beach for a fast finish. Likewise the "breaks" of the breakers will also play a big part in the race.

The course will be from the beach, around Walter Armstrong's pleasure yacht "Edna" which will be anchored a half-mile off the shore, and back to the beach again.

Entries for the event are being received by M. B. Egbert, S.P.A. chairman of the swimming committee of the club and at 784 Gladys avenue.

Iowa, Army on Pitt Card

PITTSBURGH, June 21. (AP)—The University of Pittsburgh football team will meet Iowa and the Army in 1931, W. D. Harrison, director of athletics at Pitt, announced today. Both institutions are new to the Panther schedule.

PROVISION POLOISTS BEAT ENGLISH RIVALS

LONDON, June 21. (AP)—The provision English international polo team composed of Louis Lacey, Gerald Balding, Capt. C. T. L. Roark and Aidan Roark, won the sixth trial match at the Ranelagh Club, beating the Best, 8 goals to 4. The Best four was composed of the Marquis of Villabragima, J. A. K. Traill, Col. P. K. Wise and Laddie Sanford.

WHIRLWIND MAT BATTLES LOOM

Six Crack Wrestlers Clash Wednesday Night

Marshall and Wycoff Likely to Steal Show

Strangler Lewis Will Meet Marin Plestina

Three whirlwind mat battles are practically assured for the wrestling fans of Southern California at the Olympic Wednesday night.

"Carnation" Lou Daro has lined up a half-dozen of the very best wrestlers to be sect. in action in this section of the country and matched them in such a way that the possible outcome of each of the three bouts could be classed as toss-ups.

The match that is expected to furnish the greatest excitement, more spectacular, fast, and scientific wrestling, however, is the final event of the evening that will bring together Everett Marshall, the Coloradoan, and Lee Wycoff, the lanky and crafty Missouri farmer.

Marshall will probably enter the ring a favorite to win. The airplane spin exponent has shown his ability against too many of the best wrestlers in the game to be placed beneath a grappler of even Wycoff's apparent ability.

EVENLY MATCHED

There is little to choose between these two as far as weight, strength, experience and wrestling ability is concerned, according to close followers of the sport. Wycoff has been wrestling as a pro for five years, and had not been defeated in the last three until he had to default his bout with Dan George because of an accidental injury. Marshall has been wrestling as a pro for a year and a half, and the only defeats on his record, including the three years he wrestled as an amateur, have been registered against him here by Champion Gus Sonnenberg and Ed (Strangler) Lewis.

Wycoff, however, has many followers here who look for him to win. The showing he made the night he wrestled George left no doubt in the mind of the 10,000 fans present that night but that he had everything in the wrestling line to give the best in the game a real battle. His speed in switching from one hold to another, his diversified mat attack and the expert execution of a large assortment of punishing grips, featured his mat work that night.

Wycoff will depend upon his whirlwind and aggressive attacks to beat Marshall. He believes he will be able to keep the Coloradoan on the defense long enough to hook him with one of the dozen or more grips he uses as winning holds.

Ed (Strangler) Lewis and Marin Plestina, real giants and mat enemies of years' standing, will provide the fireworks in the second best-two-out-of-three-fall finish battle. These two are as evenly matched as the final eventers. There is little difference in the ages, weight, strength and ability of this pair, who have been in the first flight of the heavyweight division for more than fifteen years and still rate with the very best in the game.

There is a chance of the opening event stealing the show that night. George, former amateur mat king, will clash with "Big Moose" Norbeck, a young, sensational Canadian, in this event. It will be Norbeck's first match here, and he hopes to get over with flying colors just as Marshall, George and Wycoff have before him.

ELKS AND BURNELL TO MIX AT HARBOR

Tommy Elks, Arizona Mexican welterweight, who defeated Bobby La Salle when the latter was a threat hereabouts, has been given the assignment to test Frankie Burnell's main-event capabilities in an eight-rounder at Wilmington Wednesday night. The welters headline a forty-round program.

The six-round semifinal between the Cuban Negro, Henri Inloe, and "Irish" Jerry Duffy, promising young Long Beach feather, is regarded as the stellar event of the six-rounders. Jimmy Hart meets Joe Reese in the special. Sid Grigry battles Joe Kelly and Johnny Gonzales meets the hard-hitting Filipino feather, Jess Gabucco, in the other six-round bouts.

Jimmy Benway vs. Hugh McArdle and Adam Moraga vs. Harry Gray complete the card. "Ladies night" also will be featured.

French Wins Gimble Prize

Marion "Patches" French, U.C.L.A. center for the past three years, is now the possessor of the Gimble Award. This takes with it a gold medal and $25 in cash for excellence in his attitude toward the university and in athletic endeavor. The Gimble Award was founded back in the Big Ten but now four Coast schools get it each year. Jess Mortensen at U.S.C.; Harlow Rothert at Stanford, and Lee Elsan at California were the other winners this year. French finished his football for U.C.L.A. at the termination of last season. Coach Bill Spaulding has often stated that "Patches" was one of best players he has ever had on any of his teams.

TRIBE PILOT BLAMES LOSS OF WALLET TO NIGHT BASH

SACRAMENTO, June 21.—Ernie Johnson, pitcher of the Seattle baseball club, is off night baseball, which he is playing for the first time here this week against the Tribe. The reason is that Ernie was so intent upon getting a rest after last night's contest that he mistook a bungalow for a directed hotel guest with the result that today he is minus wallet, $5 in currency, a platinum stick-pin, and an operator's license. Awakened by the intruder, Johnson was told "Hello, is that you, Bill" by the stranger, whereupon he replied: "No, this is not Bill, and for the love of mike get out of this room and let me sleep." The robbery was discovered when he crawled out of the covers several hours later.

When I reported to the Phillies in 1911 I still didn't consider a big leaguer in any sense of the word. I was 24 years old, a youngster I had followed the careers of Wagner, Mathewson, great stars then playing, and to think of myself in the same company was ridiculous.

I went along with the idea that this was just going to be a trip south for me, and that when it was over I would be sent back where I belonged, to the minors. We trained in Birmingham, Ala., that spring.

What a difference between the rookies of that day and this! If some of the young fellows joining big league clubs now had to go through what we went through it would kill them. The veterans didn't go out of their way in the old times to tell the youngsters things about the game. They made it tough for them.

Nowadays a rookie thinks he ought to have a lower berth on the train. When I broke in a rookie was lucky if he got a berth at all. Dan Howley, now manager of the Cincinnati Reds, joined the Phillies a year or two after I did, and when he reported to the club at Southern Pines, N. C., he didn't even get a bed. He slept on a blanket spread under a bed one of the regulars occupied. I'll leave it to Howley if this isn't true.

Practice for a rookie then meant getting out of the most distant parts of the field and chasing down the balls the regulars hit. As for getting a chance to hit in batting practice, that was a joke.

I think Pat Moran was more responsible for making a big league pitcher out of me than any other man. When I went to the Phillies Charlie Dooin was manager. Pat Moran, who in 1913, as manager, led the Phillies to their first pennant, was a catcher and a sort of lieutenant to Dooin.

When the training camp broke up the squad was divided into two teams, the first going straight back to Philadelphia to play the Athletics in the city series, the second team barnstorming back. I was with the second one, and Pat Moran was in charge.

When we got into Philadelphia the Athletics had won three straight, as I recall.

"Have you got anybody with you who looks as if he could pitch?" Dooin asked Moran.

"I've got a young fellow named Alexander," said Pat.

"All right," Dooin told him. "You and Alexander will be the battery this afternoon."

So I pitched the first five innings against the A's and held them hitless. I walked only one man. That was the first time I ever showed anything for the Phillies.

We opened the season in New York that year, and I remember Earl Moore pitched against Christy Mathewson in the opener. Moore beat him, 1 to 0. That night the Polo Grounds burned down—the stands had been an old wooden structure—and the rest of the series was called off.

From New York we went to Boston, and I was permitted to open the series there. I pitched my first big league game and lost it, 3 to 1, in ten innings. After that I got started and I had a winning streak of eight straight.

I was still only a raw rookie, and considered as such by the team, and during that winning streak there was an incident that gave me a good idea of the philosophy of the big leaguer. I was sitting on the bench, and Earl Moore was pitching against New York. We had the Giants beaten by two or three runs, but they rallied and scored four off Moore and went ahead.

In those days players fought with all they had, and when the team came in, Otto Knabe, second baseman, and at one time manager of the Athletics, said heatedly: "We have a pitcher who can win a game and he gives him a dozen runs."

Two or three runs is by no means a game always, and I got that far ahead, was willing to do it I stuck out and gave a little more. Knabe looked over at me.

"Listen, you dumb busher," he said, "when we get to the bench I'll show you how to be a regular."

I was a little peeved. But when we went to the bench after the game I went over to Knabe and said: "Well, I'm ready now if you want to fight."

"Oh, the game's over now," Knabe said. And that's all it was between us.

That was the first time I learned that all the things said in the heat of battle aren't to be taken literally.

That was the kind of baseball I was. He played shortstop and is now a coach of the Cincinnati Reds. Knabe and Dooin were the two greatest second baseman-manager combinations I ever saw. I'll never stop that ever lived, by any means; but if there was ever a pair that hustled harder than Knabe and Dooin I'd like to see them. They were always trying to do everything they had to do to win a game and were always playing heads-up baseball.

And they were full of fight, too. They were not afraid to mix with anybody. Many a rumpus broke out on the field when one player on a base runner tried to break up a double play. I remember on one of these fellows one of these times tried to knock Knabe down and Knabe's head while the other was trying to hit him cost. But they didn't start any offense by any means. They were really good fighters.

Union Pacific Track and Field Eliminations May 16; Championships August 15

Benefits of recreation and athletics for industrial workers is becoming so increasingly evident that the time will come when every man and woman in gainful occupation will participate in some form of out-door sport or gymnasium activity, A. A. Hendricks, Omaha, Neb., athletic director, predicted yesterday. Mr. Hendricks is president of the International Railroad Athletic League and, as its president, said his prediction would be realized more quickly in California than elsewhere, due to the greater opportunities for out-door play.

In the first five months of 1930 membership in the Union Pacific System Athletic League has increased 25 per cent to 18,000 members in the fifty-three athletic clubs, he reported.

Mr. Hendricks announced the holding of the Union Pacific System meet in Ogden, Utah, August 15 and 16, with an elimination meet here July 26. Events of the system meet will include a baseball tournament, fifteen track and field events, horse

KLEIN IS NATIONAL BAT KING

Philly Slugger Has Mark of .424; Adolfo Luque is Still Hurling Leader

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—The pitching of old Adolfo Luque and the hitting of young Chuck Klein overshadow to a large degree the performances of the other athletes whose names appear in the National League averages this week.

Luque had suffered his first defeat of the year, but the averages issued today, which include Wednesday's games, still show him at the top of the list of pitchers. He has won six games and lost but one while Ervin Brame of Pittsburgh and Phil Collins of Philadelphia are tied for second place with five victories and one defeat.

Klein, the leader of the recent Philadelphia spur, which has brought ten victories in fifteen games and the top place in the club batting figures, leads the league's sluggers in four respects. He not only has by far the best average, .424, but he has made the greatest number of hits, eighty-nine, has clouted nineteen home runs to lead Hack Wilson of the Cubs and Wally Berger of the Braves by one, and has batted in seventy counters.

Frank Hogan of the New York Giants is the only other National League regular who has better than a .400 average. He holds second place at .419. Bill Terry, another Giant, is second in hits with a total of eighty-eight, and in scoring with fifty-six, trailing Woody English of Chicago by one. Wilson is Klein's nearest rival in driving in runs with a total of fifty-nine. Hazen Cuyler of Chicago is another double leader, having hit nine triples to lead English by two and having stolen fifteen bases, more than double the total thefts of his nearest rivals, Paul Waner of Pittsburgh and Babe Herman of Brooklyn. Frank Frisch of St. Louis leads the hitters of two baggers with a total of twenty-one, one ahead of Del Bissonette of Brooklyn.

Although the Phillies have a team batting mark of .326, 7 points ahead of Brooklyn, Klein is their only representative among the first ten regulars on the list. Riggs Stephenson of the Cubs holds third place with a mark of .398 and following him come Terry, New York, .395; Herman, Brooklyn, .395; P. Waner, Pittsburgh, .393; Hallahan, Cincinnati, .391; O'Farrell, New York, .389; Grantham, Pittsburgh, .378, and Bissonette, Brooklyn, .372.

Cincinnati still holds its club fielding leadership with a .976 mark, 1 point ahead of Boston.

STAR RALLY BEATS REDS

Missions Score Three in Eighth But Sheiks Put Across Four in Their Half to Win, 8-5

the aid of three walks and a trio of errors. Rosenberg walked to start trouble. Hufft followed with a pop fly that should have been caught, but Barbee didn't get to it, so it fell for a single. Carlyle picked the ball up and threw it past Lee, Rosenberg going for third. Lee finally got the ball and heaved it past Cassell. Hufft taking second on this error. Boone was purposely walked to fill the bases. Burns sent a sacrifice fly to Carlyle, Rosenberg scoring, and Cleo for some unknown reason heaved the ball to the plate. To make matters worse, the ball went by Baseler, letting the tying run reach third and the prospective winning run get to second. Bert Cole, batting for Wright, was purposely walked to again fill the bases. Hofmann's sacrifice fly scored Hufft to knot the count and then Douglas singled to score Boone and put the Missions in front. Hill picked Mulligan's long fly off the left-field wall to end the inning.

SHEIKS SCORE FOUR

Then came the Sheiks with their winning rally in the home half of the eighth. Barbee led off with a two-base wallop against the left-field bricks, but went sound asleep and stayed at second when Rosenberg backed up against the center-field fence to pull down Fitch Hitter Rumler's long clout. Barbee could have made third easily after the catch, but evidently he must have been thinking. Heath walked. Hofmann, in attempting to pick Heath off first, threw the ball to right field, Barbee scoring with the tying tally and Mickey rambling to third. Severeid, batting for Baseler, walked. Ted Pillette here replaced Douglas. Harry Green, pinching for Gasella, delivered a smashing hit to left that scored Heath and put the Stars in front. A passed ball by Hofmann moved the runners to second and third. Catina then ran for Green. Shellenback slashed a terrific single through Mulligan and Severeid scored. Hill's torrid single to left brought Catina across with the final run of the day.

Monroe opened the Mission eighth with a hit, but Rosenberg hit into a double play and Lee tossed out Hufft to end the contest. Score:

Mickey Passes Sam Rice to Cop American League Bat Lead With Average of .399

CHICAGO, June 21. (AP)—Sam Rice's five-week march at the front of American League batters has been stopped by a championship backstop, Mickey Cochrane of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Crashing out ten hits in nineteen chances during the ninth week of campaigning, Cochrane boosted his average twenty points to .399 and took the lead away from the veteran Washington outfielder, unofficial averages including games of Wednesday disclose. Johnny Hodapp, Cleveland's second baseman, also went on a hitting rampage during the same period and took second with a .396 mark, dropping Rice to third place with his .390 percentage.

Babe Ruth, who, with Rice, had been monopolizing seven out of a possible nine batting leaderships in the junior circuit, hiked his average up eight points to .379, but fell from fourth to sixth place in addition to losing his leadership in runs batted in to his teammate, Lou Gehrig, who drove in eighteen markers in five games and leads with a total of sixty-seven, or seven more than the Bambino. Al Simmons, who ranked second in batting a week ago, fell to fourth with a .386 average, while Gehrig jumped from eighth to fifth place with a .384 mark, the unofficial averages showed. Other leaders were Dickey, New York, .370; McManus, Detroit, .361; Barnett, Cleveland, .361, and Porter, Cleveland, .351.

Ruth retained three of his leaderships, however, in runs, with seventy, in hits for most total bases with 148 and in his home-run specialty with twenty-one. Hodapp ousted Rice as leader in hits with eighty-nine; McManus and Joe Cronin of Washington were tied in doubles with nineteen each; Earl Combs of the Yankees had nine triples, while Rice still led in stolen bases with a dozen thefts.

PIRATES DROPPED

PITTSBURGH, June 21. (AP)—Pete Donohue gave the New York Giants a 6-to-5 victory over the Pirates in the rubber game of their series today, driving Jackson home with the winning run in the tenth inning. Donohue relieved Clarence Mitchell in the eighth and held the Pirates scoreless the last two innings.

The contest was a close one, New York tying it up in the ninth after trailing most of the way. The Giants had tied the count once before only to drop back again when Comorosky hit a home run in the fourth. Ott and Leach led the Giant attack, each making four hits. The score:

CHICAGO, June 21. (AP) — The Cubs copped the night cap this afternoon against Boston to make it two for the afternoon. Both scores were 8 to 4. The Cubs, by their two victories, were only keeping pace with the leading Dodgers, who also managed to win a twin bill.

The victories gave the Cubs a record of seventeen out of the last twenty-two games.

Teachout and Zachary started to oppose each other in the second game but both were relieved when they proved none too effective. The game was tied up at 4-all as late as the eighth when the Cubs nicked Cunningham, who relieved Zachary, for three hits and the winning run. The scores:

ST. LOUIS, June 21. (AP)—Paced by O'Doul, who had a perfect day at bat, getting two home runs, two singles and a double in five trips, Philadelphia won the second game of the series with the St. Louis Cardinals here today, 13 to 3.

The Phillies collected twenty hits off Big Jess Haines in eight innings, the attack reaching its height in the eighth when six runs were driven across. Haid, who relieved Haines, allowed one hit in the ninth.

The Cardinals were managerless, Gaddy Street having drawn a three-day suspension for an argument with Umpire Magerkurth yesterday.

SUMMER FISHING NEARING HEIGHT

That the summer fishing season in Southern California is slowly nearing its peak is the opinion of Capt. J. M. Andersen, skipper of the big Olympic fishing barge at Hermosa Beach.

Thousands of fish were caught last week by anglers visiting the big pleasure craft, among the catches being barracuda, bonita, halibut, sand dabs, bass and sculpin.

Live bait boat angling is also excellent according to Capt. Cliff Garner, who operates a string of speedy safe boats from the Hermosa pier.

Trojan Golf, Tennis Stars Set for Play

HAVERFORD (Pa.) June 21.—Jack De Lara, southpaw star, and Bob Gates, lanky right-hander, representatives of the University of Southern California in the national intercollegiate tennis championships to be staged at the Merion Cricket Club here starting Monday, worked out here today for the first time on the turf courts on which the tourney will be staged.

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) June 21.—Two University of Southern California boys, anxious to fall in with the championship habits of the Trojan football, baseball, basketball and track teams, played over the tricky Oakmont Country Club course near here today in preparation for the national intercollegiate golf tournament which will be staged at Oakmont starting Monday. The Trojan fairway stars, who are seeking the individual championship won last year by Tommy Aycock of Yale, are Allen Moser and Winston Fuller.

Oaks Win Out in Tenth, 2-1

OAKLAND, June 21. (AP)—Oakland nosed out Portland, 2-1, today, in a bitterly contested ten-inning game featured by a pitching duel between Herb McQuaid of the Oaks and Junk Walters of the visitors.

The Oaks tied the count in the sixth after Walters had held them runless for five frames and hitless for the first four.

McQuaid, recently signed by Oakland after his release by the Missions, received snappy support. Walters had the edge in pitching, allowing five hits, while McQuaid was nicked for eight. Score:

Freitas Bumps Seattle Hard

SACRAMENTO, June 21. (AP)—Tony Freitas, sensational Sacramento southpaw chalked up his ninth victory in the Coast League here tonight when he pitched the Solons to a 10-to-1 victory over Seattle. Freitas allowed eight hits and was deprived of a shutout when Ray French made an error to let a man score in the ninth.

Dolph Camilli led the Senators at the plate rapping three for four. The Indians started with Elmer Hansen, but "Pinches" Kunz relieved him in the third and pitched fair ball for the rest of the game.

Timely hits yesterday gave the Electrical Research Products nine an 8-4 win over the Crane Company plumbers in a game held on the L. A. High diamond. The two, which are members of the American Industrial League, gave a nice exhibition of what nonprofessional baseball players can do on their days off. Woods of the Electricians was the slugger of the day, collecting three safeties out of four tries to the platter.

STARS TACKLE LEADING SACS

Sheiks Have Chance to Aid Cause of Seraphs

Angels and Seals May Make Hay in Northwest

Jesse Hill Cinch to Go Up Claims Oscar Vitt

BY BOB RAY

Buddy Ryan and his Sacramento Night Owls, who happen to be leading this hectic Coast League first half-race, drop in at Wrigley Field next Tuesday to tackle the Hollywood Stars in a seven-game series that ought to furnish a lot of excitement for the local enthusiasts.

Oscar Vitt's Stars will have an opportunity to further tighten up the pennant scramble by knocking over the Solons in the series. By so doing the Sheiks could also be a big help to Jack Lelivelt's Angels and the Seals, who will be performing up in the great Northwest for the next couple of weeks. The Seraphs and Seals figure to bowl over the Indians and Ducks and any assistance the Stars could give them in cutting down Sacramento would be joyfully received by the Messrs. Lelivelt and Nicholas Williams.

There's no questioning that the Stars are playing a better brand of ball right now and it's not beyond the realms of possibility for Skipper Vitt's outfit to upset Sacramento's hopefully pennant-bound apple cart. Such things have happened in the past and Skipper Vitt, as I recall, even went so far as to predict a few weeks ago he would not be surprised if his Stars got going and gave some pennant contender an awful lacing. Mr. Vitt was secretly referring to the Solons then, I believe, for the Sheiks and Saes have a couple of series against each other before the first half ends.

STARS STRONGER

The stellar work of Jesse Hill, the return of Gordon Rhodes from the Yankees, Dud Lee's return to form and the added power gained by Dave Barbee's acquisition have all combined to make the Sheiks a lot more dangerous. In fact if the Stars get any kind of pitching in the second half they figure to be right in the thick of the scramble.

Local fans will be interested in the Saes' appearance here because it will give them another look at Maryl Hoag, the sensational young outfielder, Lenny Backer, infield prospect, and Tony Freitas, the recruit southpaw who ranks as the league's leading hurler. All the fans like to look at youngsters developing into stars and the Saes have their share of budding major leaguers.

Hoag, who was the subject of a controversy between the Yankees and Lew Moreing, has definitely been sold to the New York club and will report next spring. Not yet 21 years old,

Infant Golf Courses Steal Lucrative Play From Other Amusements

Some of these baby courses are open day and night and play never ceases, according to the proprietors. From an idea, the Tom Thumbs and Bob o' Links have developed into big business. The photos are typical of various courses about the city. The one at the upper left is at Vermont and Pico. The girl in the center and the right hand photo were taken at El Patio, one of the layouts which enjoys a large volume of play. The lower left-hand picture is of the prison hole at Jim Morley's indoor course, and the tiny tot and lower right-hand pictures were taken at Chapman Park. The Chapman Park course was once up for sale at $2200, and is now valued at $12,000.

NEW SPORT FAD SPREADS WILDLY

Baby Golf Courses Spring Up Overnight

Investment of $2,500,000 Already Reported

Idea Had Birth in Dear Old Dixie Land

BY EDWARD LAWRENCE

From way down South in Dixie to far away Florida and back again to California, America's sport-loving public is sowing — and the miniature golf course owner is reaping—a golden harvest.

EWING "SLIM" WATKINS.

An epic in financial history, an interesting study in the psychology of the masses, and concrete proof of general prosperity, this newest sport wrinkle has taken Southern California by popular acclaim.

Out of an idea has sprung an industry—and it is an industry in every sense of the word—with more than 100 courses completed, nearing completion, or in the process of construction in Los Angeles alone, and scores of others in surrounding communities, representing an investment that may be conservatively placed at $2,500,000. At the present rate of progress, the number of courses should be doubled and the investment trebled before the summer is over.

Whither came all this business, where it is going, what is the future of the miniature course, the reason for its tremendous popularity, and a hundred and one other questions people are asking, is the reason for this story, which will attempt to cover the ground with a wealth of information—and no doubt some misinformation—gleaned from a multitude of sources.

THE OLD SOUTH

To start at the very beginning, we must be transported to the Fairyland Inn, now the Fairyland Club, on Lookout Mountain just outside the city of Chattanooga, Tenn. The year is 1926.

Since woman has been blamed for most of the world's ills from the time that Eve handed Adam the apple, the accusing finger of a nation inflicted with "golf hysteria" must be pointed at Mrs. Garnett Carter, whose husband ran the Fairyland Inn.

Mrs. Carter was a golf enthusiast, but was confined to the inn a great part of the time. She did not like to give up golf altogether, and one day laid out a golf hole for practicing putts; at one end was a tee and at the other end was a hole, the simplest kind of an arrangement. A second hole followed in the natural course of events, and this one was made more difficult by undulating the fairway—and that was the birth of an idea.

We do not mean to infer that Mrs. Carter was the first to think of a miniature golf course, as there is proof that many people in widely separated sections of the country built courses on a small scale for their own amusement, but it was Mrs. Carter's idea that led to the commercialization of the miniature course.

THE BLOODHOUND SCENT

At the time of Mrs. Carter's experiments there were two young golf course engineers, Pollock (Polly) Boyd and Ewing (Slim) Watkins, living in Chattanooga. They saw the beginning of the putting course at Fairyland Inn, appreciated its possibilities, and finally prevailed upon the Carters to build a complete eighteen-hole layout.

Much of this early background was given by Watkins to The Times in an exclusive interview before he left on Thursday evening for Chattanooga after spending the past few weeks in Los Angeles supervising the construction of new courses.

The Fairyland course was a complete success, but when Boyd and Watkins considered installing a public course in Chattanooga the general opinion prevailed that the venture was doomed to failure. Friends advised against going into the business, saying that such things were all right as a backyard proposition, but that people would never pay to play such contraptions.

Watkins, however, had complete faith in the future of miniature golf. A fine golfer himself (in fact, he and Boyd once held Bobby Jones and Watts Gunn even in an eighteen-hole match) Watkins foresaw big things for any game that smacked of golf. So the course was built.

Not only did people play the new Chattanooga course, the pioneer of its kind, but they literally flocked to it.

Watkins and Boyd immediately went into the miniature course business, copyrighting the name "Bob-o-Link." The Carters secured a copyright on the name "Tom Thumb" and the miniature course industry was launched.

THE FIRE SPREADS

From Chattanooga the idea spread like wildfire. A man whose name has been forgotten in the press of events went to Florida and opened up a string of courses under the name of "All American." This was about the time of the Sharkey-Stribling fight. They were instantaneously successful, and the man sold out shortly after at a fabulous figure if reports can be credited.

Naturally, Boyd and Watkins and the Carters sought to protect their ideas with patents, but, while they have scores of patents pending over practically every phase of miniature golf course construction, they jointly hold only one basic patent, and that covers the use of cottonseed hulls or any other comminuted, flocculent vegetable material as a putting surface. This patent was in existence before the miniature links came into being and was purchased for $67,000.

There was an interesting development over the use of such materials recently, when Judge William Clark in the United States Court of New Jersey issued an order at the instance of the Miniature Golf Courses of America, Inc., against the Beach Miniature Golf Company, Inc., operators of what is termed a "bootleg" course.

Due to this patent, subsequent builders of miniature courses, who did not purchase "Bob-o-Link" or "Tom Thumb" courses were forced to look elsewhere for putting surface materials, finally turning to felt carpet, which has proved most satisfactory.

Now we come to the local development.

LOCAL PAPA UNKNOWN

It is hard to say just who did introduce miniature golf to this section. We recall playing a homemade miniature course at the Glen Arden Club in Glendale a couple of years ago, and it was over two years ago that Jim Morley, veteran promoter of billiards, bowling, baseball and kindred sports where a ball is used, for many years, started looking for a suitable location for an indoor course.

A "Bob-o-Link" and "Tom Thumb" course, however, started the fad, if it is a fad, six months ago, opening up almost simultaneously. Credit for the local debut of miniature golf is generally given to George R. Gillespie, Arizona cowhand, motion-picture cowboy and southern gentleman.

It is one of those queer quirks of fate that Gillespie decided to go back home to Tennessee on his honeymoon. He visited Chattanooga, and was much impressed with the popularity of the miniature course he saw there, returning to Los Angeles with the idea of building firmly implanted in his mind.

Gillespie decided to build in December, 1929, and went ahead putting in the course, a "Bob-O-Link" at the corner of Wilshire and Fairfax. Hopes that he was alone in the field were shattered when a "Tom Thumb" was discovered going up behind the Plaza Hotel in Hollywood.

And the rush was on.

MORE AND MORE

As course after course blossomed out on every available vacant property throughout the city, and play not only remained heavy, but actually increased from day to day, and week to week, talk began to circulate about days when business ran $300 and months that netted $10,000. The result has been more courses, and yet more courses.

Gillespie said the other day that he has anywhere from eight to twelve visitors a day eager to get any details concerning the costs of building, leasing of land, and other information. Many come to get ideas for independent courses, and do not hesitate to sit down and copy any hole they take a fancy to.

Despite outward appearances, the amount of money to be made in miniature golf, with few exceptions, is grossly exaggerated. While it is true that a few outstanding courses are minting money, an average daily intake will rarely run over $100. That may seem like, and is, considerable money, but it must be remembered that the course owner carries a heavy overhead. On top of an investment of from $4000 to $15,000, generally speaking, his lease will cost him anywhere from $100 to $400 a month, depending on location. Lighting an acre or more of ground is expensive, upkeep is costly, and the course owner must figure his depreciation and overhead running up to $50 a day, and oftimes more.

At present many courses are paying from 18 to 20 per cent on the investment, but seldom more.

It is the consensus of miniature course owners with whom we have talked that the sport is here to stay for an unlimited time. One and all agree, however, that the small, poorly kept-up course is doomed, and that only the outstanding courses in favored locations will survive.

As a matter of fact, the situation has developed so rapidly that no one, not even those on the inside, know what to expect. Those who are closest to the game are of the opinion that not 5 per cent of the people who will eventually play on the miniature courses have yet had a putter in their hand. This is based on the daily increase in rounds, which is truly phenomenal.

Gillespie, who has his finger on the pulse of the game with $50,000 invested in a number of courses, believes that the peak will not be reached for several months yet. When that time arrives, he looks for those who have played miniature golf and do not like the game to drop off, while those who are still enthusiasts will decide whether the game shall flourish or die out.

It is a fact that courses being put in now are being built to stay. Much constructive thought on the subject has resulted in more architecturally attractive courses, and the latest tendency is to make the game as much like golf as possible.

It is true that this new sport owes a great deal of its popularity to its connection with golf, as everybody, whether or not they have ever played the Scotch pastime, knows something about the game, thanks to Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen, but in reality miniature golf is a game all by itself, with but little similarity to any conditions one meets on a golf course, except for the hole, the ball and the putter.

MANY PROBLEMS

One of the outstanding features of the newer courses is the size of the greens, which in most instances have been enlarged to make the golfer feel more at home. Right there seems to be the rub, however, as the man who is building his course is not certain whether or not he cares to appeal to the golfer. The fact that miniature golf has enjoyed such a universal appeal rather indicates that the builder must take into consideration both sexes and every age from 6 to 60.

Playing these miniature courses requires practically no skill, and they are many times faster than the fastest green one will find on a golf course, but players can take a terrible score and still have a whale of a time. Putting seems to come natural to most women, the majority of whom are excellent putters, and most of them putt the miniature courses well. Morley, who is a keen observer, and tries to get all newcomers to his indoor course started right, has some interesting theories.

Morley claims that women's hereditary gift of wielding a broom day in and day out has given her a remarkable keen sense of judgment and touch. Whenever Morley starts a woman golfer to putting he tells her to sweep the ball as she would with a broom, and the results are astonishing.

A DREAM COMES TRUE

The El Patio at Third and Vermont, run by two Texans, A. T. Threadgill and W. L. Threadgill, is a typical example of what the better courses are doing, and this particular course was built on a shoestring. The story is worth narrating. It seems that the Threadgills came to Los Angeles with $3000 from Texas, where the miniature golf craze was in full blast. They secured a lease for $1000 and spent $250 for attorney's fees to incorporate. Then they advertised for partners with money and secured enough to open on. Although they have been in operation only a short time, the Threadgills have bought out their partners and the course is paid for. Business is running close to the $10,000 mark every month.

Threadgill said yesterday that business was increasing at the rate of $50 a day, and a week ago Saturday, when the course was open twenty-four hours, there were never less than forty-two people on the course. He has had as many as 205 putters out at once.

It is claimed that such tremendous patronage is hurting theater business, but the theaters report that such is not the case. Miniature golf course owners verify the theaters' reports by pointing out that a large majority of theatergoers stop off on the way home for a round of golf.

That seems to about cover the present miniature golf course situation, but there are certain to be interesting developments within the next few months and perhaps sooner.

Foul Tips

Skipper Vitt has three hurlers ready for action against the Reds today, and will decide before game time who works for Hollywood. Hank Halvey, Gordon Rhodes and Lefty Johns are all aching for a crack at the Missionites.

• • •

These Mission hurlers are nothing if not generous. They issued thirteen walks and hit one man Friday, while yesterday they doled out eight passes to the Sheiks.

It's certainly tough for Eddie Mulligan, the Mission third-sacker, these days. Bill almost tore Eddie's leg off with a torrid smash in the first inning while in the eighth Shellenback drove another one right through Mulligan.

• • •

We had new umpires out at Wrigley Field yesterday, Forest Cady and J. Monroe Swanger replacing Chet Chadbourne and Perle Casey, who moved elsewhere.

Hofmann hit a foul tip in the eighth inning that knocked Umpire Cady's mask off slicker than the whistle. But Cady caught for the Red Sox for many years and he can take 'em.

Leo's catch of Monroe's line drive in the fifth was one of the best made by an infielder at Wrigley this year. Dud timed the ball perfectly and leaped about four feet off the ground to snag the ball with one hand.

Billy Evans, Cleveland official who has been on the Coast looking over athletes and trying to pick a spot for the Tribe to train next year, departed for the East last night. Billy evidently wants to hurry back and see what's wrong with the Indians. Long Beach and Lake Elsinore are being considered for training quarters for the Clevelanders, who will come out here to train if they can line up enough spring games with the Cubs, Pirates, and Angels.

Hill got two out of three yesterday to bring his batting average up over the .400 mark.

Hit Through Ball Inside Line in Golf

We are told to swing through from inside the line in order to properly hit a golf ball. Miss Helen Hicks, judging by the sketches here shown of her bringing her club from the top of the backswing halfway down, follows that theory.

Few question that it is sound. The best pros agree that one should so swing every club for every shot with the exception of the cut and explosion from sand.

You must come into the ball from inside the line and go on out through it. It is a sweeping of ball off the tee or grass. The big idea is to sweep the clubhead on out after the ball. But it won't go far in that direction, as will be shown in Monday's release.

Is the sand trap a mental hazard for you? Sol Metzger's new leaflet on "The Explosion Shot" will help you overcome this. Write for it in care of The Times and inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

nference Finds Bad Driving Habits Sole Cause of Many Motor Vehicle Accidents

AUTOMOTIVE ODDITIES - - By Pete Keenan

right-of-way rule on the part of motorists is vitally necessary was a conclusion of investigations made by the national meeting of traffic and safety experts. California's right-of-way law is the same as that set forth in the National Uniform Vehicle Code sponsored by the conferences. A major point of this right-of-way rule is that a driver of a car approaching an intersection shall yield the right of way to a vehicle which has entered the intersection, and that when two vehicles enter an intersection at the same time, the driver of the vehicle on the left shall yield to the driver on the right.

ROAD HOGGING

Many motorists upon being asked would deny ever being guilty of driving on the wrong side of streets or highways, it is believed by the auto club representative. But it is pointed out to motorists that on any well-traveled highway drivers can be observed turning out upon the wrong side of the road after making a turn or when trying to pass other cars. Included in the errors under this classification is that of "hogging the road." A large share of accidents in Southern California and throughout the nation, it is said, are due to driving on the wrong side of the highway.

Uniform classification of accidents under various cause headings now in use throughout the country for furthering safety efforts also reveals that in a large number of auto mishaps the operator drove off the highway and overturned. This indicates the need for enforcement of the standard rules of the road requiring safe practices, the conference holds, and particularly the need for education of motorists as to the hazards of driving at excessive speeds on curves or narrow highways on embankments, or at speeds excessive for conditions as they exist.

CARE IS CURE

Greater care exercised by the average motorist in remedying these few major motoring mistakes would go far toward insuring his safety and improving traffic, it is pointed out by the motoring organization. Watchfulness and caution are necessary at all times, of course, for the motorist should bear in mind that in driving a car weighing one and one-half tons at a speed of forty miles an hour he is riding on a projectile which travels 58 3-3 feet a second.

Smoking Ban Placed in Park

Due to dangerous fire conditions, the regional forester has closed all areas below the 7500-foot level within Sequoia National Forest to smoking except at camps, at places of habitation and in special posted areas. This regulation became effective June 15, and will continue until further notice. Word to this effect was recently received at headquarters of the Sequoia National Forest service in Porterville. Campers are also required to be equipped with a shovel and ax for use in case of emergency.

TWO METHODS FOR HOLDING CAR ON HILL

There are two methods of holding the car at a standstill while waiting on an up-grade for a change in the traffic signal. One is to use the hand brake; the other to use the hand throttle to feed fuel to the engine. In case one uses the hand brake to hold the car he can feed gas in the normal way. However, by using the hand throttle he can use his right foot on the service brake. It pays to be master of both methods.

CARE OF TIRES

It is more important that tires be kept properly inflated in summer. Heat is rubber's natural enemy. Under-inflated tires, flexing more, generate much more heat.

New Brougham Arrives Here

First of the new custom eight Peerless broughams has just been received here.

The brougham has a wheelbase of 139 inches, which permits of a very spacious body. The motor develops 125 horsepower. The car has four forward speeds.

First of the custom broughams to arrive here is finished in black with blue molding that sweeps across the cowl, along the belt line and curves gracefully over the rear fenders and across the back. The lines are long and low and an added touch of smartness is given by a trunk mounted at the rear. Wire wheels are used.

Kyle to Open Boat Show Room

About July 1 a new building now under construction at Wilshire Boulevard and Realtor Road is to be opened as a marine sales room for S. Clyde Kyle, who has temporary quarters at 908 West Jefferson and who has sales rooms in New York and San Francisco. This action by Kyle followed a recent exhibit made by him at the Los Angeles boat show, and he now has on display outboard motor boats, outboard motors, cruisers, runabouts and marine instruments at his new place.

REROUTING PLAN DENIED

A recent communication from the State Highway Commission to directors of the Tulare Chamber of Commerce stated that the commission is not contemplating rerouting the Golden State Highway through Tulare, as had been rumored. It said, however, that the curve at the south city limits may be altered.

STEAM AUTO DECLARED TO BE FIRST MOTOR CAR

A steam automobile which moved along the streets of Bridgeport, Ct., at thirty miles per hour as early as 1866, twenty-seven years before appearance of the "horseless carriage" ascribed to Haynes or Selden, was really the first American automobile, according to Frank P. Devine, writing in Product Engineering. The steam vehicle is credited to Henry A. and James House. The former is still living.

"The House automobile," Mr. Devine declares, "was built upon the body of a beach wagon manufactured in Bridgeport by the Wood Brothers, carriage builders. The beach wagon was of a type commonly used at that time, originally built for two seats and horsedrawn. The shafts were taken off and the engine fitted under the front seat with the boiler at the rear.

"The machine had a double side chain drive from a countershaft to the rear wheel, a feature carried into the later gasoline automobiles and retained up to 1918 in friction-drive cars. The steering was at first by a wheel, but later was changed to a lever for quicker motion and sensitiveness.

"The boiler was of the water-tube fire-engine type, and was one of the first all-steel shell boilers made. It was tested to 300 pounds hydraulic pressure, and carried this steam pressure on the machine. It was fitted with a 'pop' safety valve, but owing to the effect of the later upon horses a spring lever type of valve which could be held down when necessary was substituted. The fuel was English cannel coal and charcoal fed from a seat behind. The machine would accommodate the driver, fireman, and five passengers. The fuel was carried in a box around the boiler.

"The power unit was a twin-cylinder double-acting slide-valve steam engine of four and one-quarter inch bore, six inch stroke, with connecting rods on disk cranks. The throttle and reverse levers were brought up through the middle of the front seat.

"The machine had no brakes, reverse being used for this purpose, enabling a quick stop to be made. To reverse the car it was necessary only to kick the ratchet release lever on the footboard to one side, set the links of the engine with the reverse lever beside the seat, and open the throttle.

"There were two water gauges beside the boiler, one back of the front seat for the driver, and one behind the boiler for the fireman.

"The engine complete with water pump weighed 110 pounds, and was perfectly balanced. It developed 12 horsepower on the machine. The power attained was sufficient to send the machine along at thirty miles an hour, and one trip of five miles was made in ten minutes. The weight of the complete car with water and fuel sufficient for ten miles was 1400 pounds. It deserves consideration as the first American automobile."

Monroe Takes Agency on Tire

The Al Monroe Tire and Battery Service has taken on the Diamond tire line. The Monroe Service operates three service plants, 751 South Central avenue, Vernon avenue and Santa Fe, and Lankershim and Victory boulevards in North Hollywood.

The firm will carry in stock in all three stores complete range of sizes of every type of tire for every make of car as well as the popular Diamond Air-Flex tubes. This includes bus and truck equipment.

Neeland Back From Bay City

Charles J. Neeland, recently appointed Stutz distributor of Southern California, returned here yesterday from a short trip to San Francisco, where he conferred with William Coombes, manager of Stutz of Northern California.

Neeland expressed confidence in the general business outlook. "We find the demand for quality cars is steadily on the increase, and that the buying power of the public has not been seriously impaired by depressions of the stock market," declared Neeland. "California is fortunate in that business conditions in this State have maintained a higher level during the year to date than any other section of the country. The outlook for increased business and sales activity is also excellent here. Reports from business executives through California are most optimistic and I find after meetings with several prominent bankers and business heads in San Francisco that the same confident optimism is felt in the business world there."

RUSTLESS STEEL—A REFLECTION OF THE QUALITY BUILT INTO THE FORD CAR

Any Ford is a particularly good purchase because it is such an ideal combination of high quality and low cost. Many of its features were formerly thought possible only in an expensive automobile. ¶ In addition to the Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers and Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, another unusual feature is the Rustless Steel used for the head lamps, radiator shell, cowl finish strip, tail lamps, and tail lamps. ¶ This will not rust, corrode or tarnish under any condition and will retain its bright luster for the life of the car. ¶ Though expensive to manufacture, it is used on the new Ford without increased cost to you. Throughout the new Ford are many instances of this EXTRA VALUE made possible by Ford production methods.

Not a reduced-price offering—
Not cars soon to be obsolete:

The New PIERCE-ARROW "Model C"

From $2695 to $2875 at Buffalo

Now on special exhibit at Pierce-Arrow showrooms is the new and brilliant Model C—and not a reduced-price offering of cars soon to be obsolete.

In this offering, Pierce-Arrow has concentrated on the creation of extraordinary value. So it is that these newest Pierce-Arrows are a challenge to all the economics of fine car manufacture.

Advertisement fails Model C, because it represents such unbelievable money's worth. It has the patrician beauty of line and colorings and appointments that characterize Pierce-Arrow and no other automobile, however fine. It is, in every degree of excellence, a true Pierce-Arrow—America's finest motor car.

And the payment-from-income plan makes Pierce-Arrow ownership a surprisingly easy attainment. It should certainly be investigated today!

TEST REQUIRED OF PARACHUTES

Five Methods To Be Used in Examinations

Army or Navy Approval Also Qualifies

Certificate Will Be Issued to Cover Devices

Regulations providing for the issuance by the Department of Commerce of certificates of approval for parachutes are announced.

The new regulations provide for the issuance of certificates which denote approval by the Department of Commerce of parachute types that have met the minimum requirements of the department. The requirements are designed to ascertain the strength of the material of the parachute, its rate of descent and its promptness and certainty in opening. The regulations will become effective July 1.

Five tests, involving more than a score of drops from an airplane in flight, will be required of each parachute type submitted to the Department of Commerce for approval.

In the first test, promptness of opening must be proved by the parachute opening fully within three seconds after being dropped with a dummy weighing 170 pounds from a plane flying seventy miles an hour and at an altitude of 500 feet. Twelve such drops will be made.

The second test will be conducted under the same conditions with the exception that the suspension lines will be twisted and the parachute must open fully within four and one-half seconds with all twists removed. Five such drops shall be made.

The third test to determine the strength of the parachute will involve three drops with a 600-pound weigh from a plane flying 100 miles an hour, and at an altitude of not more than 500 feet.

Two live drops, to be made with a 176-pound man from an altitude of 2000 feet, will constitute the fourth test.

The last test, to determine the rate of descent which shall not exceed twenty-one feet per second, will be accomplished by dropping a parachute from an altitude of 2000 feet with a 176-pound dummy.

The new regulations require that parachutes approved by the Department of Commerce shall be packed or repacked at least once in each sixty days before being worn in flights.

The examination and certification of parachute types will be undertaken by the department only upon application by the manufacturer for an approved type certificate.

The parachute is eligible for approval, also, if it has been accepted by the Army or Navy.

Contest Rules To Be Studied

1. The Times weekly motoring contests are open to everyone except employees of the Los Angeles Times and their families, professional photographers, persons connected with advertising agencies, publicity bureaus or newspapers. It is not necessary to be a subscriber to The Times. The rules are published every week of the series of contests.

2. Any amateur photographer is eligible to participate and may submit as many photographs as desired, provided each picture submitted complies with the rules herein stated.

3. Photographs must be within one day's drive of Los Angeles by automobile.

4. Photographs must have been taken during 1930.

5. Contestants must submit:

(a) Negative and one print of each photo submitted.

(b) Name and address of person taking picture and others in party.

(c) Date upon which photograph was taken.

(d) Not more than a fifty-word description of scene photographed.

(e) Not more than a fifty-word explanation of how to reach scene by motor car.

6. To the person submitting the best photograph and description as outlined in Section 5 a prize of $20 will be given each weekly contest. The second weekly prize will be $10; third prize, $7.50. In the event of a tie each tying contestant will be given to each tying contestant. Each contest is complete in itself and no photograph submitted during one contest is eligible to compete in a later one.

7. At the close of the series of 10 weekly contests (twenty-five in all) a first prize of $100 and a second prize of $50 will be awarded to the persons whose photographs and descriptions are judged the best of the entire list submitted during the ten weeks. The first contest commences on (Monday) and closes (Monday), June 30. The second weekly contest closes at midnight, Monday, July 7; the third, midnight, July 14, and so on. Entries intended for any particular contest must be postmarked before midnight of that contest. If postmarked after midnight of that contest, or if postmarked after it expiration, they will be automatically entered in the contest next following. The lists and last contest will close at midnight, September 8, and no entry will be received after that time.

8. Any contestant or member of his family or motor party shall be ineligible to win more than one first prize, one second prize and one third prize in the ten weekly contests and not more than one of the two perpetual prizes.

9. An entry with insufficient postage will not be accepted and The Times cannot be responsible for delay, loss or non-delivery of entries.

10. All entries must be sent by mail.

11. All prize-winning negatives and prints submitted in the contest become the property of The Times and may be used without compensation by The Times other than that awarded as prize money. No other negatives or prints will be returned unless a stamped, self-addressed envelope is provided therefor.

12. Two judges will be committee, appointed by the Times, and their decision will be final. Announcement of winners will be made in The Times in time for the close of each weekly contest and the close of the entire contest as possible. Acceptance of these rules is an express condition of entry. The Times cannot engage in correspondence on the matter.

13. Two or more people may co-operate in submitting any motoring, but only one prize will be given to any one household or to any one group.

14. Negatives and prints may be of any size desired. Descriptions may be submitted in any form desired, though preferably on white paper, size 8½x11 inches. Write on one side of paper only. Neatness will be a factor.

15. Entries will be judged thus:

(a) Fifty per cent for the subject photographed, its uniqueness, scenic or historic interest.

(b) Twenty-five per cent for clarity and accuracy of description of the scene and directions for motorists to it.

(c) Twenty-five per cent for photographic quality.

17. Subjects photographed must be of such a character that, by following the directions given therewith, other motorists may visit and see them substantially as pictured and described.

DUST SUCKED IN CAR

The reason the back of the car gets so dirty under average circumstances, and especially when driving fast as on a tour, is that a vacuum is created behind it which pulls the dust and mud onto the body.

Lomax Beech, (new); Philo H. Rouse, H. D. Rader, Alhambra (new.)

Alain Campbell White of Litchfield, Ct., world's leading problem authority, was born at Cannes, France, of American parents, March 3, 1880. Problemists the world over recently celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his birth. He is most modest, a true sign of genuine greatness, and is always reluctant about giving information for a "write-up," but from his "Memories of my Chessboard" we lift the following: "My father was the late John Jay White, a keen and thorough solver, and my ideas of chess strategy were picked up over the back of his chair. Thus I learned to solve problems early in 1891 at the age of 11." His chessboard has traveled with him to Russia, Italy, Egypt, Canada, etc., and has made five trips across the Atlantic. He received his Harvard A. B. in 1902, and later attended Columbia University. He initiated and built up the Alain C. White chess problem collection, now totaling about 140,000 positions accurately catalogued. This remarkable chess anthologist is now in Nottingham, Eng., with G. Hume acting as Honorary Curator of same. For several months Mr. White has been traveling for his health. All problemists owe him a great debt of gratitude.

Correspondence chess is "old stuff." W. B. Tudor of Los Angeles and Elmer Ferguson of Sioux City, Iowa, are playing a game by air mail. And they are running a race, with several others, to get on our solvers' list every week in 1930.

The idea of a Beverly Hills Chess Club was first conceived at the Los Angeles club in conversation between Harry MacMahon and the writer. A notice was put in our Times column. Richard Schayer, M.-G.-M. screen writer, condescended to have a first meeting at his home. Several who saw our notice, and several who had been notified from the writer's mailing list, attended. At the second meeting the writer acted as temporary chairman and officers were elected. (We wish it known that the Times column deserves some credit for the promotion of new chess centers and activities.)

Likewise the Pasadena Club. The writer was the dinner guest at the Huntington Hotel of S. M. Kuhns, president of the National Chess Federation, when arrangements were made for a meeting of players in that city, the writer furnishing a mailing list. Preliminary notices were put in our column. And today there is no finer class of fans in the State than at the Pasadena Club. The writer is proud of his honorary life membership in this organization.

Many have mentioned the idea of a club in the Westlake Park district. Also in Hollywood. We'd like to hear from those interested in either of these locations, or any other location.

The writer has been invited to sit in one of the regular monthly meetings of the Los Angeles Playground Committee to discuss the promotion of new chess centers. If your neighborhood park or playground deserves a chess club, let's hear from you.

In the recent San Francisco-Los Angeles team match our local champ, George Patterson, met a big suprise in John Tippin, 16-year old high school champ of the northern metropolis. The San Francisco Chronicle column comments, "Patterson opened irregularly, probably to put Tippin 'on his own.' But the latter secured a good development and after 43 moves had Patterson at his mercy."

AID STATIONS ON MAIN ROAD

the highways where accidents have been frequent, James L. Fieser, vice-chairman in charge of domestic operations, announced.

Wayside stores, community centers, suburban stations of State police, etc., are suggested as locations. Local chapters are to assume responsibility for chains of these emergency stations at convenient intervals, along the important roads within their jurisdiction.

Each emergency station will keep on hand a complete kit of first aid supplies. An essential of the service to the injured, will be a telephone directory of physicians, hospitals and ambulance services in the immediate vicinity, approved by the local medical society.

At least one person trained in Red Cross first aid will always be on hand. Many are available already in every community, particularly employees of telephone companies and other public utilities, municipal and State police, firemen, Boy Scout executives and leaders.

Chapters are instructed to have volunteer automobile transportation for the injured, where necessary. Road markers, displaying the Red Cross symbol, and designating the distance to the first aid station are to be placed, if possible, at one-half mile from each station.

The service to be rendered the injured motorist is a purely volunteer, humanitarian one. It comprises binding of wounds by those with a knowledge of Red Cross first aid, calling a doctor, and otherwise providing the injured with prompt assistance, which may save his life. No financial remuneration will be accepted for the service, and on the other hand the volunteers at the emergency first aid stations cannot assume responsibility for doctor's charges, nor for ambulance or hospital costs, or similar financing of the injured.

Sand Bars on River Removed

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21. (Exclusive)—The Navarro River in Mendocino county will soon be insured against sand bars during the spawning season in the fall, it was announced yesterday by John L. Farley, executive officer of the Division of Fish and Game.

These sand bars often form at the mouth of the river and prevent the salmon and steelhead from gaining entrance at the proper season. Engineers, after making a survey of the river, recommended that a rock jetty be constructed. This jetty will cause the water to run through a smaller and swifter channel and thus carry the sand far out into deep water.

GLIDERS WILL TEACH AVIATION FUNDAMENTALS

BY THEODORE A. WOOLSEY

The fundamentals of aviation and the preparation for power flight training are in a very short time going to be accomplished by the use of the primary glider as the first step in air work. Several of the leading flying schools throughout the country have experimented with this preliminary type of instruction with a great degree of satisfaction. The "feel of the air" and the technique acquired at the controls which operate identical to those of a powered aircraft is developed much quicker, easier and with more satisfaction because the student soles from the first. The cost of a primary glider is less than one-tenth of that of a training airplane and there is no motor upkeep. This item too is an encouragement.

JUST A GLIDER

The primary glider owes its appearance into this new phase of flight training to the developement of powerless flight. In the pioneer days of gliding only a few years ago a glider was just a glider.

The enthusiasm of the glider pilots to establish and break records led to the refinement in design. They tried to fly a bit farther, remain in the air a little longer and sail in the updrafts over the irregularities of the earth and finally to fly across country at high elevations by being carried up by convection currents and hanging under certain forms of clouds. Thus the different types of gliders were born, naimely: the "primary trainer," the "secondary glider," and the two types of sail plane; one for endurance and the other for cross-country soaring.

FLIGHT TRAINING

The primary glider is flown in many ways. One very satisfactory method of giving the student his first air work is to tow him behind an automobile. This glider is fitted with a pair of wheels and a tail skid. The instructor rides in the automobile and can control the speed of flight. First, the student runs along the ground until he is familiar with the controls. Then little by little the speed of the automobile is increased and the student gets farther and farther away from the ground. This is an excellent form of flight instruction.

Another method equally as good is to use a long piece of shock chord or elastic rope for launching power. One or two men hold the glider back while three or four men at each end pull in "V" formation with the glider hooked in the middle. The men walk away from the glider until the rubber is stretched to the limit. Then with a signal from the instructor the men on the tail let go and up goes the glider. The speed here is varied with the amount of tension in the rubber rope. If the student is competent the instructor has the men in the formation run at the same time that the glider is released. This adds to the initial tension on the rubber rope and shoots the glider up fifty or seventy-five feet at the will of the pilot.

AUTO USED ON SLOPE

Sometimes an automobile is used in place of the "V" formation of men in launching primary gliders on hill slopes.

In hill-slope gliding it is ideal to find a hill with the same slope as the gliding angle of the glider or about one foot drop to ten feet in distance. The down slope should extend in the direction of the prevailing wind. An increase in wind velocity will increase the duration, and distance of the flight. This kind of gliding is great sport as well as instructive. The student after a little practice can make wide turns and watch for up-drafts over the small hills which will give him another boost. When landing he flies just above the ground and settles on one central skid at about the speed that a man can run.

A FEW CHARACTERISTICS

The important features in the design of an elementary glider are: First, ruggedness, second, ease of control, and third, good dynamic characteristics. All of these are fairly easy to put into a conventional design. A high wing monoplane type with a low center of gravity is the most ideal arrangement because it offers good stability.

The monoplane type is preferred rather than the biplane for glider design because of greater efficiency, stability and less cost. The aspect ratio (the span divided by the chord) of a biplane can be made greater than that of a monoplane but a high aspect ratio for a primary glider is not an advantage. An aspect ratio of around six will be found to be very satisfactory. The wing area will vary between 150 and 200 square feet, depending upon the gross weight of the machine and the loading desired. The gross wing loading for this type of craft should be between two and two and one-half pounds per square foot. If a good conventional design practice is carried out throughout the structure, the empty weight will be found to be about 200 pounds and with a 176-pound pilot, the gross weight will then be around 370 pounds.

WING SPAN COUNTS

Wing span is an important item in design and a maximum span of thirty-five feet has been accepted for this type of glider.

It is very desirable to choose a deep wing section with a high lift at low speeds. The maximum lift should hold over a fairly large change in the angle of attack, thus approaching the burble point with a less chance to stall suddenly. The Goett 441 and U.S.A. 35 are two of the best sections used in primary gliders for they have excellent dynamic characteristics. There are several other sections that show good wind-tunnel results. Performance at low speed is the important item in selecting a good wing section.

The length of the tail of a longitudinally stable primary glider is from 2.4 to 2.6 chord lengths from the center of gravity to the elevator hinges. The tail surfaces should be in the following relation of the main lifting surface: Stabilizer, 8 3-4 per cent; elevator, 8 3-4 per cent; rudder, 10 per cent, and fin, 4 per cent. The ailerons should be about 17½ per cent of the total wing area if conventionally designed.

Half Old Auto Motor Supplies Airplane Power

Half of an old air-cooled automobile engine is flying an airplane in California.

Jack Rabe, an aviation enthusiast of Stinson Beach, Marin county, bought a 1914 Franklin touring car after it had been driven 100,000 miles. He wanted to use the engine in his plane.

Rabe immediately cut the engine in half so he could use the three front cylinders. As there was no water jacket to contend with, this did not prove much of a job. He sealed the cut end of the crankcase and had a three-cylinder valve-in-head motor.

He redesigned the ignition system, adapting it to the three cylinders and moved the oil pump forward to a new position, built the plane himself, installed the cut-down motor and has been flying with it since.

AMPHIBIANS TO BE USED

Fokker amphibians are to be installed on the air line that carries more passengers than any other in the world, that of Air Ferries, Inc., between San Francisco and Oakland. Announcement of the placing of the first amphibian in service and of an order for more, the number to be determined by the growth of the service, has been made.

Spectacular Flight Made by Student

That the day of the OX-5 motor is far from over has just been indicated in the spectacular flight made between Los Angeles and Denver over the rugged Rocky Mountains by a student of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service School, according to W. W. Wright, in charge of the company's aircraft sales.

Flying a standard Curtiss Robin plane equipped with an OX-5 motor, James P. Gaskill made the 1200-mile trip in twelve hours and fifty-six minutes flying time. Although generally considered far too high an altitude for a ship and motor of that type, Gaskill flew the Robin over the Rockies, reaching a height in excess of 10,000 feet when crossing Raton Pass between Albuquerque and Pueblo.

The airways in Colorado, including that over which Gaskill piloted the Robin, are generally conceded to be the most difficult in the country, and are usually flown with special high-altitude equipment.

Gaskill made the trip to deliver the plane from Curtiss-Wright's local field at Los Angeles Airport Inglewood, to the company's Denver base, where it will be used for instruction and commercial operation. The student pilot made an overnight stop at Albuquerque on the trip.

Gaskill's record trip is but one of the dozen recent spectacular flights made by students of the school. One fledgling airman made a solo trip to St. Louis, another to Kansas City, one to El Paso, one to Houston, and there have been numerous trips to San Francisco.

CONNECTION MAY BE BAD

Driving to the nearest service station undoubtedly is a good idea when a headlight bulb burns out. An idea that should precede it, however, is to get out and check the connection at the base of the lamp. Vibration may have shaken it loose. Frequently this fact is not discovered until a new bulb is installed and it also fails to burn.

PLANE MAKER COMING H

VISALIA, June 21. (Exclusive)—Jess Clark, local mechanic, who sold his home-made monoplane to General Western Aero Corporation of Los Angeles, expects to leave at an early date to take charge of the shop department of the corporation in Los Angeles, which plans construction of his plane on a commercial basis.

Clark, together with the late Delmar Wood, built the plane in the aeronautical department of the local high school, [illegible] for more than a year, which is powered with a horsepower motor capable of attaining a speed of [illegible] per hour.

This same [illegible] recently purchased the motor invested by [illegible] era, also a [illegible]. Weathers is now in charge supervising [illegible] motor for the [illegible] he is a director.

Gliders Get Safe Tow Rope

To make gliding safer Robert Jellison of the glider division of Varney Air Services, has developed and patented a new tow rope releasing device. Releasing mechanism is placed at each end of the tow rope, the top release is operated by the student, the lower by the instructor in the tow car. Thus in case the glider tends to get out of the control of the student take off, Jellison explains, the instructor may cut the craft loose before any damage is done.

Planes to H... Open C...

To settle an argument standing, the Rosecrans company is building a [illegible] port with an open [illegible] lots.

Present plans [illegible] service between [illegible] cago have stirred [illegible] pilots, the new [illegible] pilots' contest [illegible] that full vision [illegible] is provided. Added [illegible] tions then will [illegible] most points as to [illegible] best for the pilot.

comfortable, carefree motoring. Its performance is particularly satisfying—its acceleration, its speed, its power, its full-range smoothness. The style of its Fisher-built bodies is soundly based on the fundamentals of good design. Its comfort is worthy of cars much higher in price. And its year-after-year dependability is so well known that it scarcely needs mention.

The Viking Eight, priced from $1695 to $1855, according to equipment, is a smart, roomy, luxurious car—typical in every respect of the faithfulness of Olds Motor Works manufacturing. It provides the smoothness and luxury of 90° V-eight performance. It offers engineering advancements that contribute in large measure to dependability, economy, and long life.

There is a body type to please you in these two great lines of cars. Come in and see them. Judge their merits for yourself. And be assured that whichever car you select—Oldsmobile or Viking—you are getting value that meets the same high standard.

Unless you want a car of the very lowest or very highest price, there is a type or model in the Oldsmobile-Viking line which will exactly suit your requirements. For the Oldsmobile-Viking price range extends from $895 to $1855—with a wide choice of models at intermediate prices.

The Oldsmobile Six, priced from $895 to $1190, provides every requisite to

REA OUT AGAIN AND BACK AGAIN

Riverside County Robber in Getaway at Fresno

Strikes Down Deputy Sheriff Taking Him to Prison

Sheriff Sweeters Once More Puts Him in Custody

RIVERSIDE, June 21.—A desperate effort by Lawrence Rea, dapper 25-year-old Riverside county robber, to escape life imprisonment to which he recently was sentenced by the Riverside Superior Court, resulted early today in three hours of liberty, after he made a bold dash from the custody of Sheriff Clem Sweeters and Deputy Sheriff Lester Graham in Fresno.

Sweeters and Graham stopped at an oil station there about 1:30 a.m. to get gasoline and oil with which to continue their trip to San Quentin, where they were taking Rea.

As Sweeters was checking the needs of their car, Rea struck Graham with the heavy chain with which he had been shackled, and before the officers realised what had happened, their prisoner had escaped into an alley.

Calling upon Fresno police and deputy sheriffs for aid, the local officers combed the city, and about three hours later Sweeters and Undersheriff George Overholt of Fresno county captured him, minus handcuffs, approximately a half-mile from the scene of the escape.

Rea told Sweeters that he had freed himself from the handcuffs with a key which he had made while incarcerated in the local jail. He offered no resistance when Sweeters approached him with a shotgun and ordered him to put up his hands.

He had the handcuffs in his pocket, which he surrendered to his captors, and with which he again was manacled while being taken to the County Jail for safe keeping until daylight.

Santa Barbara County Enriched by Oil Fields

SANTA BARBARA, June 21.—The Elwood oil field will return to Santa Barbara county approximately $800,000 in taxes this year, according to County Assessor Charles Tomlinson. The field is assessed at approximately $13,000,000.

Seven companies in the field are credited as being owners of the oil production. Three companies yesterday made the first payment on their mineral tax totaling $266,000. The Barnsdall-Rio Grande combination will pay the greatest tax.

The assessor estimated that Barnsdall and Rio Grande, codiscoverers of the field, would pay about $250,000 in taxes. The Elwood Exploration and Seward Oil companies also made a part payment on their mineral taxes to the assessor yesterday. An additional 25 per cent of the total mineral tax will be paid this fall.

Before oil was discovered in Elwood, nearly three years ago, the property now assessed for $13,000,000 was assessed for only $302,000.

Council Meeting Time Change to be Voted Upon

REDONDO BEACH, June 21.—A referendum petition bearing 410 names, and asking a special election to revoke the city ordinance under which City Council meetings are held in the afternoons, was filed with the City Clerk here yesterday.

The petition, if found sufficient, will make an election mandatory, unless the ordinance is voluntarily revoked by the Council. Three hundred and seventy of the names on the petition must be of bona fide voters to make the document legal, it is understood.

ROSE BOWL WOODEN SEATS USED NO MORE

PASADENA, June 21.—Pasadenans sat for the last time on the old wooden seats of the Rose Bowl last night during the annual Pasadena Junior College, Muir Technical High School commencement exercises. Reconstruction of the stadium, which had been delayed to permit the outdoor festival to be held, will be started at once. Concrete will replace the wooden portion of the structure, and the seating capacity will be increased to approximately 80,000.

NEW TIES BIND VALLEY CITIES

Opening of Espee Line Celebrated

Thrown Switch Opens Last Section of Loop

It connects Holtville and Sandia. Left to right—Bobbie Setron unlocking switch; Sam Webb, Mayor of Holtville, throwing switch; behind switch, R. B. Whitelaw, president El Centro Chamber of Commerce; behind Mr. Webb, H. W. Fawcett, Mayor of El Centro; Robert Hayes, secretary of El Centro Chamber of Commerce; J. R. Snyder, president, Holtville Chamber of Commerce; W. H. Kirby, secretary, Holtville Chamber of Commerce; J. W. Donahue, district freight and passenger agent at El Centro of the Southern Pacific Company.

HOLTVILLE, June 21.—Opening of the new Southern Pacific line between this city and Sandia was marked here today by a celebration which brought visitors from Los Angeles and from every part of the Imperial Valley.

More than 1500 persons attended the dedication services. The new line taps thousands of acres of the most productive land in the valley. It completes a loop starting at El Centro, running through Holtville and Sandia, and rejoining the main line at Calipatria.

As a facility for the heavy annual movement of Imperial Valley perishable crops to eastern markets, the new line is of standard branch-line construction and laid with ninety-pound rail. The construction work was done under the direction of Southern Pacific's chief engineer, George W. Boschke.

A large delegation of business men attended from El Centro, headed by Mayor H. W. Fawcett and R. B. Whitelaw, president of the El Centro Chamber of Commerce. The program and entertainment were under the chairmanship of Mayor Sam Webb of Holtville.

BOY SCOUT MISSING AT IDYLLWILD

Harold Johnson, Son of Corona Postmaster, Sought in Tahquitz Peak Vicinity

CORONA, June 21.—Harold, the 13-year-old son of Postmaster and Mrs. Roscoe Johnson, is being sought by more than 100 men and boys in the vicinity of Tahquitz Peak, Idyllwild.

About a week ago the Boy Scouts of the Methodist Church went to Idyllwild where they were enjoying a week's outing under the supervision of Scoutmaster Raymond King, Frank Ware and Harry L. C. Whitcomb.

When roll call was made at 6 a.m. Friday, Harold was present. A short time later the Scouts started on a hike to the peak and upon their arrival search failed to show where he might have gone. Word was sent to his parents, and friends accompanied them to the camp where an organized posse on foot and horseback is combing every foot of the mountains.

The Johnson boy had reached the top of San Jacinto Peak, where he had gone with the other Scouts to see the sunrise Friday morning. They were camped in Round Valley, from which point they made the hike to the summit. While on the peak he strayed from the party unnoticed and all efforts to locate him failed. He carried no rations with him, it is stated. The boys had made the hike before breakfast with the intention of making the trip to the peak and return to Round Valley for breakfast.

On the desert side of San Jacinto Peak the mountain is steep and treacherous, and it is feared the missing boy may have fallen over a precipice, otherwise his training in that organization would have enabled him to care for himself and get back to camp.

Pete Hibbard and Buell Vaughn, forest rangers, and eight residents of Idyllwild, mounted on horses, again took up the search at daybreak, while more of the Boy Scouts have joined in the hunt.

CEMETERY NOT WANTED

SOUTH GATE, June 21.—An application has been made by H. G. Wittier for permission to establish a mausoleum and cemetery here. The application, appearing before the City Council, has been denied, the City Attorney being instructed to inform the applicant that there is an ordinance prohibiting the burial of human bodies within the city limits.

Flag-Raising Ceremony Held on School Site

NEWPORT BEACH, June 21.—A flag-raising ceremony and celebration, honoring the starting of work on the $410,000 Newport Harbor Union High School, the Boy Scouts of the district officiating, was held on the site of the school at Fifteenth and Irvine streets, Newport Heights, yesterday afternoon. The event was inaugurated by the members of the school board, and the Costa Mesa and Newport Harbor chambers of commerce.

Following the services a banquet at which 150 persons were seated was held in the Costa Mesa Woman's Friday Afternoon clubhouse. R. P. Mitchell, County Superintendent of Schools, Santa Ana; Senator Nelson E. Edwards, Orange; Ted Craig, Assemblyman of Brea, and Sydney H. Davidson, principal of the new high school, were the speakers of the evening. LeRoy P. Anderson, president of the new school board, served as chairman.

The flag-raising ceremony was planned because of delay in the ground breaking. Work will start at once on the construction of the administration building that classrooms may be ready for occupancy in the fall. J. W. Shirley, Los Angeles, is the general contractor.

Bids on the Manual Arts building and the gymnasium will be opened at a meeting of the school board early in July.

WEDDING OF LONG AGO CELEBRATED

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, June 21. Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Whitcher of 11008 Hester today are celebrating their sixty-first wedding anniversary. Mr. Whitcher's family has been in this country for six generations. He is 80 years of age. Mrs. Whitcher is one of the few remaining persons who came to California by covered ox wagon. She states she walked almost all the way from North Augusta, Iowa, swinging a whip over the heads of the long oxen team. The couple were married in Monterey, in 1869. Later they went to Iowa and then returned to California twenty-five years later. John L. Whitcher, a turnkey at the Los Angeles City Jail, is a son. Mrs. Allen Baldridge and Mrs. Florence Bancroft are daughters.

BOY PARALYSIS VICTIM

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, June 21. Services were conducted today for Allen David Naylor, 6 years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Naylor of 10917 Landale street. The little boy was a victim of infantile paralysis. Interment was in Valhalla Cemetery.

THEATERS TAKE UP GOLF

Possibility of Acquiring Large Numbers of Miniature Courses Seen in West Coast Glendale Purchase

GLENDALE, June 21.—Possibility that many of the miniature golf courses in Southern California may be brought under the control of Fox West Coast Theaters is seen in the purchase here today of a local bantam course at Brand Boulevard and California street. The golf course, half a block north of the Alexander Theater, the largest of the Fox West Coast string here, was taken over from W. O. Parker, its owner, but neither Parker nor Murray A. Pennock, manager of the theater, would reveal any of the details.

Information that has leaked out relates is said to have resulted from a study of the amusement possibilities and the financial returns from these small golf courses and especially from the angle of their possible competition with the films.

If the three courses already acquired show a profit, it is intimated that the theater chain may acquire additional sites or courses near the larger centers of population.

The move by the theater magnates is said to have resulted from here is to the effect that two more bantam courses, one on Wilshire Boulevard and another on Whittier Boulevard, both of them near Fox West Coast theaters, have been acquired by the theatrical organization, as a preliminary step toward a study of the miniature-golf situation from the inside.

DRILLING LAW HAS OPPOSITION

Huntington Beach Ordinance Faces Referendum

Special Election Sought on Council's Measure

Steel-Derrick Requirement and High Bond Fought

HUNTINGTON BEACH, June 21. Voters of this city are facing the first referendum vote ever to be brought before them in the history of the city. Since the recent adoption of the city ordinance regulating drilling within the city, opponents have held several meetings and are preparing a referendum to be circulated and presented to the City Council asking that the ordinance be placed before the voters at a specially called election.

The ordinance is objectionable to oil operators, property owners and the lumber interests. At the recent Council meeting, J. E. Mackie, structural engineer for the National Lumbermen's Association, represented the lumber industry and opposed the Council passing an ordinance calling for the construction of steel derricks in the city limits. Mackie stated that the lumber industry would take the matter to the courts.

The object of the City Council which passed the ordinance unanimously was to give better fire protection, practically prohibiting the construction of anything but steel derricks within the city limits, as it provides that no wooden derrick may be constructed within 150 feet of another derrick, building or street.

Property owners calling the referendum are opposed to the ordinance requiring oil companies to post a $5000 bond to insure fearing down of the rig, filling in of sump hole and clearing up the property when the well is abandoned. P. E. Wells, leader of the citizen group, declares that the bond is too large to ask of the small operator, and that it is difficult to obtain a bond of this nature.

The ordinance requires oil companies to file papers showing a financial statement which will be treated in confidence by the City Clerk and City Council, also that the oil companies make a showing that they have arranged to take care of the waste water and rotary mud.

Bids for $122,000 for repair to the municipal pier and for a 500-foot extension to the pier will be called for on Monday evening.

FIREMEN TO CONVENE IN GLENDALE

Smoke Eaters from Cities of Southwest Will Gather There on Monday

GLENDALE, June 21. — Firefighters from the Southwestern States will be officially welcomed to Glendale Monday, and will be given an opportunity to inspect the equipment and the alarm system that have recently been installed by the city.

The delegation will include Chief Ralph Scott of Los Angeles, and those in charge of the Fire College, including Chief Samuel Dodd, Capt. J. L. Gowell and W. Tebbetts, and Instructor J. F. Baker. Cars, driven by uniformed firemen will pick up the visitors in Los Angeles and bring them to Glendale, where they will be welcomed by Mayor C. E. Kimlin and members of the city administration.

After a tour of the city by automobile the guests will be taken aloft in T.A.T. planes for a flight over the district. Inspection of a number of industrial plants is also scheduled, and the freedom of the Y.M.C.A. plunge has been offered the firemen by the "Y" officials. Luncheon will be served at the Central Fire Station on South Orange avenue.

Redondo Names James H. Dalton Its Secretary

REDONDO BEACH, June 21—James H. Dalton, secretary of the Inglewood Chamber of Commerce, will assume the post of secretary of the local chamber on July 1, it was made known by President C. W. Kolner.

Employment of a full-time secretary is made a part of the plan by which the organization is to receive a fund of $5000 from the city, to be used in advertising and development.

SUN BATHERS COWED BY STEER

Throng on Cabrillo Beach Deserts Sands for Surf and Impromptu Rodeo Follows Escape from Schooner by Bovine Which Trees Officer Before Capture

SANTA BARBARA, June 21. Steer chasing in Santa Barbara streets fifty years ago was not such an uncommon occurrence, but the escape of a wild steer from a shipment being taken off the schooner Santa Cruz on Stearns Wharf created a panic today among bathers on West Cabrillo Beach and residents, business men and motorists on Chapala street. But some fancy motorcycle riding and foot racing by traffic officers, with the assistance of amateur ropers, brought the animal to submission after an hour's rodeo.

Officer Leavitt first sighted the animal charging down the wharf, whence it headed into the beach where a hundred sunbathers took to the surf to escape the frightened animal. Officer Leavitt dashed up the beach boulevard on his motorcycle in an attempt to corner the horned beast near the bathhouse. The animal escaped and ran to Montecito street. The chase up Montecito street continued. The steer had treed Officer Leavitt. Rampaging over several backyards and used-car lots, the steer escaped and ran up Chapala street, only to be lassoed by an amateur roper. It was finally loaded on a truck and taken to the slaughter house after it had kicked the backboard out of the motor carrier.

GIRL WILL ENTER COLLEGE WHEN 14

Henrietta P. McKalip

MYRA MARCELLA HAMANN

ALHAMBRA, June 21.—Among the 233 members of the Alhambra High School graduating class this week, the largest class in the history of the school, were two girls whose graduation carried with it unusual and distinctive honors. They were Henrietta P. McKalip and Myra Marcella Hamann. The former ended her senior year with honors at the age of 14 years. Miss Hamann completed her high school career with the record of never having missed a day of school nor ever having been tardy since starting her studies in the first grade.

Miss McKalip is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. McKalip of 1600 Campus Road, Los Angeles. Until August of last year the family lived at 515 North Electric avenue, Alhambra. She was born on February 11, 1916. Her high school course was completed in three and a half years and she was one of eleven students to receive a life membership in the California Scholarship Federation. She is especially interested in music and plans to continue her study of piano, along with other subjects, at Occidental College in the fall, having been granted special permission for registration at the age of 14 because of her scholarship record. Her present ambition is to fit herself for teaching. Her father is a school engineer at Occidental.

Miss Hamann, 18 years of age, is the daughter of Mrs. Emma O. Hamann of 1114 North Rosemont Boulevard, San Gabriel. Her school days began in Bozeman, Mont., where she was born and where she lived until coming to California seven years ago. Like Miss McKalip, she is interested in music and is an accomplished pianist. She was a member of the Piano Club, the Home Economics Club and the Light and Shadow Club, a dramatic organization, in high school. She plans to begin earning her living at once, preferably by means of her ability in music.

Wiker Heads Ventura County Commerce Body

VENTURA, June 21.—Edgar E. Wiker, Ventura Mortgage Loan Company executive, is the new president of the Ventura County Chamber of Commerce.

Arthur Walden, Santa Paula banker, is vice-president. W. W. Bristol of Ojai starts his third term as secretary and treasurer.

The three, comprising the only slate prepared by the nominating committee, were elected unanimously last night at the June meeting of the county chamber at a barbecue at the Ventura County Country Club at Saticoy.

The new officers will be installed at the July meeting.

KIWANIANS TO SING AT PARK BOWL PROGRAM

VENTURA, June 21.—Sixteen local singers, comprising the Kiwanis Glee Club, are to appear in concert at the weekly Foster Park Bowl community sing tomorrow afternoon. Sunday will be the third Ventura Day of the current community-sing season. The Kiwanians will give a twenty-minute program, and the remainder of the hour will be turned over to community singing, with Rev. W. C. Cheverton of this city acting as leader.

CHILDREN GIVEN SWIMMING POOL

Miss Ellen Browning Scripps Makes Bountiful Gift

Only Plunge of Its Kind in World for La Jolla

Nearly Two Acres of Ocean Will be Inclosed

LA JOLLA, June 21.—Miss Ellen Browning Scripps, philanthropist, today announced through City Hydraulic Engineer H. N. Savage that she soon will build a $50,000 children's ocean swimming pool here, the only pool of its kind in the world. The gift will be deeded in perpetuity to "all children now and hereafter."

A feature of the project, Engineer Savage explained, will be a 300-foot breakwater of reinforced concrete. On one side the breakwater, which will rise twenty-five feet above the water at low tide, will be curved to turn back the sea waves. On the other it will be terraced with eight-inch steps so that bathers may go out on the breakwater and walk down into the water from any point.

The pool to be created by the breakwater will be on the ocean front below the Casa De Manana Hotel within the La Jolla City Park boundaries. A ramp walk will be used by bathers in getting down to the pool. This walk will lead down to a concrete structure which will be divided into dressing stalls. The pool will be about 300 feet across. At low tide it will provide an area of nearly two acres in which the smallest children may swim with safety. At high tide the outward end of the pool will be about six feet deep, but the shore end will still be very shallow.

The pool will be inclosed with a cable and a mesh to prevent anyone from being washed out to sea. An interesting feature of the pool will be sluice gates built into the breakwater. By means of these gates the sand drift into the channel may be controlled and the pool kept clear and the breaking of rough water can be checked.

The pool will be built "right away," Engineer Savage said today. "Plans and specifications have already been completed and bids will be called for at once." Savage has donated his services as consulting and supervising engineer of the project.

The pool will be but another in a long list of benefactions principally for children and young women given by Miss Scripps.

PLAYMATE SAYS BOY SHOT HIM

Joe Brown in Custody of Juvenile Court Following Wounding of Carvis Lad

REDLANDS, June 21. — Joe Brown, 13 years of age, was turned over to Probation Officer George Larmore last night, charged with firing the shot that wounded his 11-year-old playmate, Theodore Carvis. Local police surrendered Brown to the Juvenile Court officials after an all-day investigation of the incident, which occurred at Brown's Brookside-avenue home last Thursday.

Meanwhile, young Carvis is nursing a wound in his right hip, from which surgeons may find it necessary to extract a .22-caliber bullet. He was at his home, 134 Norwood street, last night. Brown's accusers are Carvis and his 13-year-old companion, Gordon Reynolds, of 712 West Olive avenue. They tell similar stories of having gone to the Brown residence Thursday afternoon to pick blackberries from the borders of a storm ditch.

"Joe told us we could pick berries there," the victim told Patrolman John M. Stocker. "As soon as we arrived and started picking, though, Joe went into his house and came out again with a rifle. He ordered us to leave and when we turned to go he shot me."

The bullet, which is a pellet of tiny dimensions designed for shooting birds and targets, was deeply embedded in the flesh behind the boy's right hip. Dr. H. G. Hill treated the wound but had not extracted the bullet last night. If the wound heals satisfactory, it may be found unnecessary to remove the lead.

Torrance Fetes Operatic Singer

TORRANCE, June 21. — In a unique celebration, civic leaders and city officials joined in sponsoring an elaborate concert and festival honoring Wanda Stachowicz, local girl who is at home from an operatic career abroad, last night.

The concert, held in the high school auditorium, was in charge of Elsie Teal, pianist, with Mrs. Frank Sammons as reception chairman.

An Italian fete, in the patio of the school, followed the entertainment program.

PLAYGROUND MAN CHOSEN

HUNTINGTON PARK, June 21. R. E. (Pop) Squires of the Huntington Park Union High School has been selected as supervisor of the playgrounds of the district, the selection being made by the Southeast Communities Playground Commission. The summer program, which will be given at the various school yards in the district, will be in readiness for starting the 30th inst. Squires will have two full-time directors and seven part-time directors under his supervision. The full-time directors will be stationed at the two community parks, one on Miles avenue here and the other at the State-street school grounds in South Gate. There will be morning and afternoon hours and also in the evenings from 6 to 8:30 o'clock.

AGED CONFEDERATE QUOTES SHERMAN

[P. & A.]

Gen. J. D. Dowling

SAN DIEGO, June 21.—Gen. J. D. Dowling, 85 years of age, high officer of the Confederate Army, and who still proudly wears his uniform of gray on occasions, today quoted Gen. Sherman as saying: "War is hell, and the more hell the better," in referring to his famous march through Georgia to the sea.

"Historians have deleted the second part of that 'war is hell,' saying," Gen. Dowling declared, and added, "but I know what Sherman really said, because I heard him say it."

The former Confederate soldier leader confided that he is still looking for a wife. "She must know the Lord's Prayer," he declared, "for if she knows that I reckon she'll be pleasant to get along with."

Testimony of Friend to Hold Man for Trial

SAN BERNARDINO, June 21.—The admissions of W. C. Black, Riverside automobile dealer, to a friend on the day following the death of Mrs. Florence Minear, that he "had struck a woman," but was afraid to stop, constitute sufficient testimony to warrant his being held for trial on a charge of manslaughter. This was the ruling today of Superior Judge Charles L. Allison in denying Black's petition for a writ of habeas corpus on which he asked freedom.

Black's counsel contended that the State's charge that he is the hit-and-run driver who killed Mrs. Minear two weeks ago is not supported by the evidence at a preliminary hearing after which he was held for trial.

Judge Allison ruled that the testimony of Fred Harris, a friend of Black, is directly relevant to the issue. Black admitted to Harris, the latter testified, that he (Black) hit "a woman" but was afraid to stop because he had had a drink and feared that he would be charged with driving while intoxicated.

Black's abandoned car was found in Colton on the morning after the crash. Black contends that the car was stolen. He did not surrender to the police for nearly a week after the accident happened. Black is still held in the County Jail unable to raise $50,000 bail.

JUNIOR OLYMPIC WINNERS

AND SOME AWARDS OF MERIT

NEXT Sunday, four boys, the Southland winners in the greatest athletic carnival of modern times, the Junior Olympic Games, will leave Los Angeles on a trip that will carry them to Atlantic City for the national finals, July 7-12, inclusive, thence to New York for embarkation on the liner Venezuela, of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, for a never-to-be-forgotten voyage home by way of the Panama Canal, touching at seven Latin-American countries en route. This voyage is an added reward by the Los Angeles Times, which sponsors the Junior Olympic Games in the nine Southern California counties, for the four boys, pictured on this page, who emerged victorious in a modern pentathlon which, for some months past, has held the attention of 49,000 upstanding Southland boys, who may be our Olympic heroes of tomorrow.

IF YOU COULD BUILD YOUR SECOND HOME FIRST ...YOU WOULDN'T CONSIDER ANYTHING BUT THE FINEST PLUMBING

A PLENTIFUL SUPPLY of pure water is the life-blood of the home. Every detail of the system is a vital detail. Some people might give up the finer design and finish of the best fixtures and fittings—but no one would knowingly sacrifice their far better and longer service . . . their added safety . . . their actual money saving!

The furnishings of the bathroom tell the character of the whole home. Kohler craftsmen have always put that idea into their work. Architects, builders and plumbers will tell you that Kohler fixtures are fine through and through . . . that their beauty is built in . . . that their extra quality means many years of extra comfort and security.

Kohler vitreous china has the hardness and smoothness of polished glass. Kohler enamel is made by a special formula and fused to the metal core in an everlasting bond. If you like colors, there are clear, soft shades in addition to black and white—shades that blend gracefully into your own decorative scheme. And Kohler white is the immaculate white of fine linen. Any one can see the difference.

● Kohler fixtures deserve Kohler fittings

Properly functioning metal parts—faucets, valves, drains and traps—are absolute necessities. Often health itself depends on their precision. So Kohler fittings are engineered to new standards of efficiency . . . made of the finest brass, lastingly plated with chromium, nickel or gold . . . built for positive and silent action for the life of the home.

Examine some of the pieces in detail and note their simple, substantial construction, their accurate machine work. You will find among them many new ideas that make housework faster and easier.

Vitreous china STANDISH lavatory with combination fitting. Enameled VICEROY bath with silent supply and overflow. Chromium-plated DYNAMIC fittings throughout.

● Kohler plumbing prevents trouble

Those who are trained to ideals of true hygiene welcome Kohler plumbing fixtures and fittings most. Years after their installation they are still beautiful and efficient. The handles stay tight-fitting . . . the drains are still noiseless and rapid . . . original beauty remains.

When you build for yourself you will wish to have the advantages of these positive operating and sanitary fixtures. All-Kohler bathrooms, kitchens and laundries make the finest "water works" a home can have—most advanced in design and finish, most precise in operation. The Kohler mark on each piece advertises to every caller the character of your house—and is your own constant reassurance of safety and service.

● Kohler quality costs no more

All-Kohler installations offer money saving over the years, besides paying dividends of ease and well-being. You will find the finest plumbing just as practical—and just as important—in the modest home as in the mansion. A visit to the nearest Kohler showroom will give you many new ideas and ideals. Discuss the fine points with your architect and plumbing contractor. Meanwhile, write for Booklet E-6 which illustrates attractive groupings and suggests modern ideas about home plumbing . . . ELEVEN IMPORTANT POINTS ABOUT PLUMBING

1 Kohler designs are decorative, purposeful, correct.
2 Kohler enamel is made by an exclusive formula, fused with an everlasting bond and keeps its smooth, glistening surface.
3 Vitreous china pieces are sculptured for beauty and service . . . thoroughly vitrified at high temperatures and armored with a smooth, lustrous, lasting glaze.
4 Kohler colors are soft, livable pastels . . . the white is a perfect white.
5 Kohler metal fittings are engineered for efficiency . . . heavily plated with chromium, nickel or gold. They match the fixtures in style, character and quality.
6 Materials are the finest—manufacture is most particular. All Kohler products show craftsmanship and care.
7 This company pioneered many of the big advances in plumbing. This year's Kohler products are next year's new ideas.
8 Kohler quality extends to the kitchen and laundry —for every plumbing need.
9 Kohler quality costs no more . . . and saves money later.
10 Kohler fixtures and fittings are handled and installed by qualified plumbers.
11 Back of the Kohler trade-marks are the traditions and spirit of an entire community . . . beautiful Kohler Village.

"Clever Youngsters!" They deserve that name. Talkies require so much more of children than did the silent pictures. The difficulties attending their making a success have consequently increased greatly. The voices of all of those here represented have been heard except Jackie Coogan's. He is making his debut in "Tom Sawyer." The others have received most favorable attention for their talents, and as doubtless will also Master Coogan.

Anita Louise's stage training stood her in good stead when the films became vocal. From mere child roles she has graduated to leading lady in Tiffany's "Little Bit O' Heaven."

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Harry Langdon's party is a joyous affair.

...y Langdon in his latest comic characterization, the dough-...face of Warner Brothers' ..."Long Eared." The comic is as ...ruthless a host as he is funster.

By GRACE KINGSLEY

WELL, I think that when anybody who has given as much joy to the world as Harry Langdon has done, his birthday ought to be celebrated, and I'm glad his wife feels that way about it," remarked Stella, who had just been reading an invitation to us from Mrs. Elaine Langdon, to attend his birthday party.

"And it's the ventriloquial dummy's birthday party, too—you know, Joe and Pristine," Stella went on. "They were given as a present to Harry two or three years ago. Of course, they won't be what you'd call exactly expansive as hosts, but think what perfect guests they'll make. They won't spill anything on the carpet nor leave cigarette ashes on the tapestry table cover, they won't deplete the supper table, nor will Harry permit them to tell indiscreet jokes."

Evidently a lot of other people thought that Harry should be cheered on his way through life, too, as we found many present when we arrived.

GLENN TRYON and his pretty wife, Lillian, were among the first arrivals, and Glenn, as one comedian to another, brought Harry a gift of some serious books on philosophy.

Victor Halperin and his charming, quiet little wife were there, and Renaud Hoffman and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Barker, Mrs. Victor Schertzinger—Victor is still in New York, directing a picture, and very homesick, she said—the handsome Connie Keefe, Lucien Littlefield and his wife—Mrs. Littlefield is a lovely young lady—Mrs. Elmer Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Brewster, Hazel Hayes and others.

THELMA TODD arrived with Harry Priester, Thelma looking radiantly lovely. She may go back to New York and go on the stage, as she has an offer.

"But before, I go I'm planning something," she smiled mischievously. "That is, I'm planning it with two other girls. Lina Basquette, Katherine Givney and I mean to ride on bicycles to the opening of 'The Florodora Girl'!"

Renaud Hoffman told us about meeting Betty Blythe in New York, of how lovely she is looking, and how she is still searching for a suitable play, in which A. H. Woods is going to star her when she finds just the right one. He told us, too, an amusing story of an Englishman she met at a party, who asked if he might escort her home; then asked if he might come in and sit down; how he sat on a divan, discreetly at the other side of the room, and then, after telling Betty how charming she was, had drawled calmly that he would love to kiss her!

"Naturally, I reminded him I had a nice husband, but isn't that an Englishman's idea of sweeping 'you off your feet!'" Betty had demanded, in relating the incident to Mr. Hoffman.

LLOYD HUGHES and his beautiful wife, Gloria, came in just then, and next moment we heard the wild rush of an automobile, the creaking of brakes, and in dashed Vivian Duncan. She was wearing sport clothes, having just come from her matinee at Philharmonic Auditorium, and she explained that Rosetta would be there, but Rosetta had suddenly become formal and had rushed home to Santa Monica to don evening clothes!

Vivian informed us, while the hors d'oeuvres were being passed around, that she is going to build a house at Malibu, and that, until it is finished, she is going to live thriftily in the garage which is nearly finished.

"And will you all come to my garage warming?" she invited, with her cute little grin.

Then she told us what an awful time she had had during the performance that afternoon, because she forgot some lines.

"Whenever I forget a line, Rosetta gets even with me. She breaks me up by turning her back to the audience and crossing her eyes as she looks at me."

And there was presently another rush of an auto, and in stepped Rosetta.

We heard the laughing before we caught sight of her. She wore a sumptuous white chiffon beaded evening gown and an ermine wrap, but on her face and head she wore the Florodora make-up—red wig, false mustache and all!

Virginia Langdon came in, then, looking sweet in a pink evening gown, and wearing such an array of fraternity pins that it was hard to believe our eyes! She is evidently the belle of her school, but Connie Keefe lost no time in proposing, and making her promise to be his blushing bride.

The Langdons' little adopted daughter, Edith, was there, too, sweet and pretty.

Jean Hersholt and his wife came, rather late, Mrs. Hersholt looking pretty as ever.

Duci de Kerekjarto, noted violinist, was among the guests, as was also the concert pianist, Jack Crown; and John M. Bowen, the attorney, and his wife shortly arrived.

"You needn't think you're going to have all the glory," Lloyd Hughes said to Harry, "where are the dummies?"

They were, it seems, obligingly at rest in their boxes until such time as their services were wanted.

WE LEARNED from Vivian Duncan, who is still engaged to Nils, that that young man is quite a changed person—that he has grown quite genial socially, and has overcome his shyness to the extent of entertaining occasionally at his beach house.

Hazel Hayes told us that she is shortly to broadcast the leading feminine role in "Il Trovatore," and so we are surely going to listen in on that evening.

SUPPER was served on little tables, after which there was, as always at the Langdon parties, some excellent impromptu entertainment.

Duci de Kerekjarto played the violin, including some of his own compositions, and Jack Crown accompanied him, after which Crown played a piano solo; the Duncan sisters gave some of their famous burlesques, Harry Langdon trotted out the dummies, Hasel Schertzinger Webster played her harp, and there was a colored entertainer, too, very clever.

We were congratulating Miss Hayes on her lovely voice, and she said that William Thorner, who has trained so many operatic stars, was her teacher.

"And what I like about him," Miss Hayes told us, "is that he is so thoroughly honest with his pupils. One girl had worked up in Canada, saving all her earnings to come down to Los Angeles and study. He tried out her voice, but told her that it was of no use—that her voice, while charming enough, was not worth spending time and money on, and she went home, a sadder but wiser child."

JEAN HERSHOLT was wearing his own sincere whiskers, which he is raising for a picture called "Come Easy," but he said that title didn't apply to the whiskers!

Myrtle Stedman and her son, Lincoln, came in late, and we confidentially voted Myrtle one of the loveliest ladies present, while Link has become a grown-up sheik.

ROSETTA DUNCAN came over to tell us that she had hurt her foot slightly riding horseback.

"Vivian's horse was mad at my horse, and shied," she explained.

Anyway, Rosetta said, she and Vivian never could ride horseback together, because they always got to laughing so much that they fell off.

Somebody asked Vivian about her law suits, and she said, "Oh, everybody is suing me except Coolidge, and I expect him to come in pretty soon."

Vivian played one of her compositions on the piano, and Jean Hersholt said, "Why, I didn't know you wrote music! I take off my beard to you!"

"Why," Stella put in, "she writes orchestrations!"

"Now I don't know what to take off to you!" Jean remarked.

VIVIAN told us about the operation on her throat, and said that she had her tonsils in a bottle.

"All right," said Harry Langdon, "we'll get up a charity bazaar, and you can bring them and exhibit them for money!"

Jean related something awfully interesting about Polly Walker's father. He had been a circus performer, and some crank killed him right in the circus because he wore Scottish kilts to work in.

Lincoln Stedman told about the time when, as a very young boy just going to his first parties, he had wanted a new Tuxedo; how an actor had told him that if he would lick that giant, the late George Siegman, he would buy him one, and how he had undertaken to do it.

"I got licked instead," said Link, "but the actor was a good sport—he gave me the Tux anyhow."

BESS MEREDITH and Michael Curtis were among the late comers, and as usual Bess was bubbling. She told how her son, ten years old, had fallen madly in love with Joan Crawford.

"Don't kill young Doug Fairbanks!" Bess said she had admonished her son. "Don't be silly, mother," son had said, "I won't!"

Vivian rang the bell with the remark that Harry Lauder's theme song was, "I'd Give a Thousand Dollars to be a Millionaire!"

Very, very late the party broke up, everybody most sincerely wishing our host many happy returns.

"OH! FOR THE WINGS OF AN ANGEL!"

LIFE behind the grim, gray walls of the penitentiary, stark, realistic—that's M-G-M's production of "The Big House," which opens June 25, at the Criterion Theater. Much time has been expended by studio officials in making the picture ring true, and some inkling may be gleaned, after its showing, of conditions that exist and the drama that transpires in the "big house." Chester Morris, Wallace Beery and Robert Montgomery portray the three principal roles—as convicts—and a strong supporting cast adds to the general excellence of the film. George Hill directed.

Lewis Stone (left) proves sympathetic in his character of the warden, while De-Witt Jannings portrays the relentless yard-master.

Wallace Beery (left) leads the revolt against prison guards and officials, leaving havoc and destruction in the wake of the rioters.

Chester Morris (left), Robert Montgomery and Wallace Beery are the pivotal figures in this story of prison life.

Tanks are called to crash down prison gates and enter cell houses to quell the rioting convicts. One of the spectacular scenes.

One Starves
And Stays Fat

One Eats
And Keeps Thin

YOU see that everywhere. Most fat people are careful of their diet. Many are active. Yet they see plenty who stay slender while eating what they wish.

Some years ago, science found the reason in an under-active gland. That gland largely controls nutrition. Since then, physicians the world over have fed that gland substance in treating obesity.

Marmola prescription tablets, prepared by a famous laboratory, contain that factor at its best. People have used them for 22 years—millions of boxes of them. All can see in every circle how conditions have changed in that time. Only a small percentage now stay over-fat.

Marmola is not secret. Each box contains the formula and the reasons for results. Users know why this is the right way. No starvation is required, though moderation helps.

Perhaps you have found that self-denial fails to make you slender. If so, try Marmola, which has done so much for so many, for so long. Watch the results. They will quickly tell you if this is what you need. Then go on until you reach the normal weight desired. For your own sake, start today.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 a box. Any druggist who is out will gladly order for you.

CITY MEN DON RURAL ATTIRE AND DIG IN TO REACH CITRUS SUCCESS

By Ernest Douglas

TO take a run-down navel orange grove that is almost off production entirely, and in four years bring it up to good commercial standing, would be an achievement in which the cleverest and most experienced citriculturist could feel pride. But when two city men, rank "tenderfeet," without experience or knowledge of agriculture in any of its branches, do just that—then it becomes something to marvel over.

L. C. Smith and E. C. Rabenstein are former St. Louis business men who, since the spring of 1926, have transformed Salt River Valley's largest orange grove from a ragged money loser into a heavy dividend payer; have made it a beautiful, thrifty, marvelously well-kept "show place" to which scores of sightseers are escorted every week by real estate man and tour leaders; and have themselves become recognized experts whose words are listened to with respect in any gathering of citrus men.

Starting as novices, but aware of their ignorance and with receptive minds, they have learned how to bring neglected trees to profitable fruitfulness; how to fertilize and plow and lay concrete pipe lines and perform a thousand other tasks connected with orchard operation; how to bud and grow nursery stock for which growers who have been in the business five times as long are glad to pay above the market price.

Messrs. Smith and Rabenstein came as tourists in the winter of 1925-26, with no other idea than to enjoy a little Arizona sunshine and hurry back to their affairs in St. Louis. But after they had made a few trips about the district, they became deeply interested in citrus. The idea of picking golden oranges and yellow grapefruit from their own trees appeared to their romantic side, and when they inquired into the returns that producers were banking, their pocketbook side, too.

They did go back to St. Louis, but imbued with an overpowering ambition to own and run a certain eighty-acre navel grove of 11 and 12-year-old trees, eight miles northeast of Mesa. They knew that it wasn't paying expenses, that it was bearing very light crops. They had been told authoritatively that navels simply would not bear well in Arizona, but they were convinced that proper care would make them produce.

They talked so convincingly that Henry E. Pauk, a St. Louis friend, agreed to go in with them and become a silent partner in Val Vista Grove, Inc. As soon as possible they sold their business and property. Mr. Smith returned and bought the grove; Mr. Rabenstein followed a little later.

Undaunted by their total lack of experience and by the certain prospect of grinding toil such as they had never before thought of attempting, these city chaps shucked their white collars and sailed into what looked like a hopeless undertaking.

Thousands of dollars were invested in tractors and implements. The soil was given the first thorough stirring it had had in a long time; a jungle of weeds, that in some places stood as high as a man's head, was turned under. Heavy orders were placed for barnyard manure and commercial fertilizer, and hundreds of tons were applied.

From what they read, and what they were told by University of Arizona specialists, they decided that the main thing those Val Vista trees needed was nitrogen. They placed their trees on an annual nitrogen ration of three pounds apiece, and that program has been followed religiously.

The crop for 1926 had set when they took hold in the spring of that year, and in the fall they picked less than a quarter of a box to the tree—some didn't bear a single orange. But in 1927 the yield leaped, and leaped again in 1928. Quality was also improved, although the grove never had deteriorated so far in that respect as it had in quantity of production.

The Val Vista Company derives a tidy income from its grapefruit, tangerines, and sour orange trees scattered about the place.

A twenty-two-acre Valencia grove was set out this spring. This takes about all the room that is not needed for buildings, for the nursery, and for a citrus experimental plot that is being planted.

Producing nursery stock is a tedious and complicated process, but at this the two amateurs have been just as successful as in managing their grove. They sell hundreds of thousands of seedlings every year and tens of thousands of budded trees. The nursery, they say, has gone a long way toward paying the heavy cost of bringing Val-Vista into real production. And they have done practically all the work themselves.

Seeing these two grinning, sunburned, muscular fellows working about the grove, cutting buds or running a tractor or wielding a pruning knife or spreading fertilizer, one would never suspect that so recently as four years ago they were typical city dwellers whose idea of a good time was to bundle up in fur overcoats and toddle out to a night club. In fact, they hardly believe it themselves.

City Folk Crave Farm Life

By Marshall Breeden

Snider, the poodle, has his home under one of the fine old Albright trees.

THE soil is abundantly rich. Indeed, it is so prolific of growth that Mrs. Mary Albright of Watts indicated fully fifteen apricot seedlings growing in helter-skelter places. She pointed to another tree fully twelve feet high and said that it, too, was a seedling, grown in the past five or six years. "But," she added, "it does not produce very well nor very good fruit." Of course it cannot, because while seedling 'cots will grow into mature trees, unless they are properly grafted early in life they are seldom good producers of the fruit with the sunshine in it. All of the apricot trees are seedlings, like Topsy and 'just growed' when the pits were thrown upon the ground."

It is all very well to have a grove of fruit trees, but, as Mrs. Albright remarked, "It's better to have the trees in the home garden arranged in proper rows." And to make good they have several planted in "proper roses, pansies, hollyhocks, nasturtiums, and vegetables and many flowers, including roses, pansies, hollyhock, nasturtiums, and the front porch is almost completely covered with honeysuckle.

The Albrights are what you might call city farmers. They do not attempt to make a living from their yard-growth The space which contains house and garden is 75x150 feet. It is all level sandy loam. Gosh, how I envy them that soil! Directly in the rear, guarding the back entrance, is a gigantic eucalyptus, and right smack in front of the house is a gnarled old grand dame of a Monterey cypress. The front walk is bordered by shrubs and low flowers.

Since Mr. Albright is engaged in business, most of the upkeep of the yard depends upon the lady of the house and her little poodle, Snider. I think that is the name.

A unique feature is the front space. It has been sown to wild flowers and they appear in great profusion and like Joseph's coat, are of many colors. This flowery carpet is broken by the walk and the old trees.

Like so many city folks, the Albrights have visions of future agricultural bliss. To this end they have homesteaded some 160 acres in Lucerne Valley, southwest of Victorville.

"Some happy day," said the man of the house," we are going to pack up and git to the valley. We have our house and garage ready and are working now on the chicken runs and outbuildings. When they are finished, watch mother and me."

Making Trade Friends

IT ISN'T difficult to understand why South and Central American countries have regarded the United States with suspicion and fear. They have seen small nations elsewhere overborne and swallowed by bigger ones close by them. It is something like a small boy at school—the big boys have the strength to make his life a burden to him, and sometimes they do. Our neighbors to the south have not fully grasped the fact that the United States is not a warlike country; that its metier is not greed for other people's land—it has enough of its own still. Its thoughts are not of aggressive war. It is satisfied (some think too much so) with itself.

However, gradually the realization is percolating that the United States is a great trader. It likes to market its great excesses of production and, what hasn't been quite so plain, perhaps, it likes to buy abroad the products of other lands, and it is perfectly willing to pay for them.

No other instrumentality has been more potent to rid the minds of our smaller neighbors of their suspicion than trade. We have sought to find markets, not domination, for what our farmers grow, and, in turn, we are just as eager to provide for what they may have, if it is different, or better, or cheaper than what we can produce ourselves. And whatever else may be said of us, we are mighty good friends of our friends.

We have had a number of trade conferences with Latin-American countries and each one has advanced us and them a little in that feeling of friendship that good neighbors ought to have. And so we believe that Pan-American Reciprocal Trade Conference which will be held in Sacramento in August should be of especial value to all the parties concerned.

Twenty-two American nations will be represented by agricultural, civic and business leaders, and here on the west coast, where the need of co-operation and friendly feeling is keenest. Along the Atlantic seaboard, trade is of long standing, but here the field of mutual business relations has not been developed as much as it ought to be, as much as it can be or as much as it is going to be.

In this particular conference the response to invitations to attend has been prompt, Mexico sending in the first official acceptance and ten other countries following closely. Farmers in particular, leaders in their fields, will, with business men, make up the largest part of the attendance. Predictions are made that marketing fields may be enlarged very considerably.

Round-table discussions will be the rule, and this will be the first time that this open method will have been tried to stimulate trade. Heretofore the topics of the most vital interest have been placed in the hands of instructed delegates to official parleys to be settled after diplomatic precedent.

This Sacramento meeting is an experimental one. It looks as though it may be an extremely valuable one.

We believe in trade expansion for our products in the Far East, but that does not prevent us from developing what might be termed the Near West, too.

Gov. Baldridge of Idaho, in commenting on this conference, has said:

"If the ideals expressed by the leaders in this reciprocal trade movement are followed closely, the Pan-American Conference will become an economic factor in the prgress of the West. Rubbing elbows with representative leaders of neighboring countries, we will become more familiar with their ways of doing business. The round-table discussions on all matters pertaining to trade cannot help but result in a better understanding and trade stimulation."

Another Opportunity

A GOOD many people think that all the opportunities are used up and there isn't much left for them to develop for themselves. Probably there was never a period in the history of mankind when there were as many opportunities as there are today, when anything really worth while is so welcome and supported by the world.

One of these is seed growing; not that many people are not engaged in it, already, but because this is a field not entirely filled and one capable of a great deal of development to the benefit of the grower and the public as well.

It might be almost considered an axiom that you will find good farmers and good farming wherever seed growing is conducted commercially. That isn't all of it, of course. Certain soils and climates and other natural conditions must be present for the production of seed, and these vary with the sort of seed produced. But, given the right natural condition, seed growing demands, a particular sort of farmer and a particular sort of treatment. The procedure is different to grow a field of alfalfa for hay and a field for alfalfa seed. The same is true of every other seed. Success in seed production depends on climate, soil and environment plus meticulous care in choice of stock, rigid pains in excluding anything that will mix strains, and absolute accuracy in threshing, cleaning, sacking, sampling, testing, tagging and storing.

The man who can do these things right and who has a taste for attention to details, who grows fields of superior quality, presently finds himself offered a contract with a seed organization, and the better he does his work, the greater his financial returns and the bigger the seed house that buys his product.

Of course it does not mean that a man is not a particularly good farmer, merely because he does not grow seed. Many prefer to minister to the ultimate consumer and not bother about seed growing, or perhaps their land does not lie in a place favorable for seed production.

Southern California is peculiarly gifted in its natural advantages for seed growing of many sorts. And it has a considerable number of seed producers who measure up to the qualifications necessary for this branch of agriculture.

George C. Edler, author of a new Farmers' Bulletin, 1232-F, on seed marketing hints for the farmer, says that farmers obtain seeds from three sources, their own farms, from other farmers and from dealers. The seed grower may sell to neighbors, to local dealers or shippers, to traveling seed buyers, to distant seedsmen, or by advance growing contracts. There is nearly always a good demand for fancy quality and superior strains.

Such a bulletin as this should be of great interest to present or prospective seed producers and it may be obtained free by writing to the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. In view of the fact that, more and more, California is becoming the seed source of the nation, more seed growers are going to be needed—men who are willing to take more pains than are necessary in field production. There is room for the right sort of growers, particularly in the Southwest.

Asian Weeds

The recent finding of infestations of hoarycress and Russian knapweed in alfalfa fields in Antelope Valley emphasizes the importance of seed inspections. Deputy Agricultural Commissioner K. L. Wolff states that there is evidence that the seed of these two weeds entered the valley in alfalfa seed used in 1913 which is known to have been imported from Asia through Germany. Practically all known infestations of these two weeds in this State, as well as those of camel's thorn, can be traced back to the bringing in of alfalfa and beet seed from Turkestan, according to Mr. Wolff. New laws have made present-day inspections of seed shipments more rigid than has been possible in the past, thus minimizing the danger of future similar introductions.

Selling Faster than Other Orchard Lands

. . . for nine reasons

VISTA'S unusual combination of attractions has made it the fastest selling and developing orchard-income district in Southern California. Population has multiplied three times in three years...carlot shipments more than twenty times. Here are some of the specific reasons:

1. Location: On paved Inland Highway, 100 miles south of Los Angeles, 50 miles north of San Diego and 8 miles from Oceanside. Served by Santa Fe Railway and daily bus service.

2. Climate: Elevation and sea breezes provide a gentle, equable climate, unsurpassed in Southern California, both for personal comfort and for growing avocados, citrus fruits and out-of-season vegetables. Even bananas have been successfully grown out of doors in this section.

3. Soil: Mainly Sierra Sandy Loam of remarkable fertility.

4. Water: Ample supply from Lake Henshaw, largest impounding reservoir in Southern California...at reasonable cost.

5. People: Finest type of neighbors. In addition to Southern Californians, you'll find homes of a New York manufacturer, retired Philadelphia business man, retired Indiana capitalist, Vista phone technical engineer, former government soil expert, Cleveland capitalist, Chicago dentist, former U. S. government representative in Shanghai, China, and many others. 400 purchasers to date.

6. Scenic Beauties: With the picturesque Palomar Mountains as background, Vista's rolling hills, and colorful panoramas provide some of the most beautiful scenic homesites to be found anywhere.

Typical Villa Buys

This 13.20-acre property is close to business center, good soil and climatic conditions for avocado or citrus orchard, and has scenic view homesite. Faces on main boulevard. Price $825 per acre.

This 4.79-acre property is as good as best in the district. Close in, adjoins fine orchard and home developments. Close to school. Price $725 per acre.

Home Advantages: Modern thriving Vista close-by, provides splendid school, church services, bank, newspaper, woman's clubhouse, etc.

Price: Costs are surprisingly moderate, ranging from $450 to $900 an acre. Size of properties from 2 to 40 acres. Easy terms if desired.

Hart Company Service: Edwin G. Hart, Inc. is Southern California's oldest and most successful orchard-income land development company. Our experts will put in trees, develop property for you, if you wish. The Poultry Yard

The left-hand picture shows Orange county walnut growers "getting the low-down on pest control at demonstrations held by the University Extension Service and County Agricultural Commissioner's office. Pest control has a bearing on quality and quantity, too. The harvest is depicted at the right. Costs of harvesting have varied in the Orange county studies from 1.6 cents to 3.8 cents per pound. Fifty-seven per cent of th etotal labor costs of the walnut man are represented by harvesting.

Efficiency on Farm

The following table gives yield, grade and income per acre:

	Low	High	Ave.
Total yield per acre	2282	1657	1930
Buds
Diamonds, per acre	711	20	327
Emeralds, per acre	85	141	167
Seedlings
Diamonds, per acre	326	80	188
Emeralds, per acre	609	603	606
Californias, per acre	60	273	180
Babies, per acre	119	105	111
Culls, per acre	392	426	411
Total income per acre	$326.92	$304.23	$257.86

In the coastal group reporting in 1929, 17 per cent of the production graded "diamond buds" at 19.4 cents per pound; 9.7 per cent "diamond seeds" at 18.5 cents; 5.6 per cent "emerald buds" at 16 cents; 31.5 per cent "emerald seeds" at 15.3 cents; 9.3 per cent "California seeds" at 13.4 cents; 5.7 per cent " babies" at 12.2 cents; 78.8 per cent merchantable, averaging 16 cents; 21.2 per cent culls, estimated at 3.5 cents.

The hot weather in August and September, 1929, caused a considerable lowering of quality.

Costs Per Pound

	High	Low	Ave.
Harvesting	1.8	2.5	2.1
Labor	3.1	4.0	3.5
Material	1.5	1.9	1.7
Cash overhead	1.7	1.7	1.7
Int. and dep.	5.8	6.9	6.4
Total Costs	13.9	17.0	15.4

Efficiency Factors

A review of the individual records in the coastal area shows that harvesting costs varied from 1.6 cents per pound to 3.8 cents per pound. There is much evidence that more efficient harvesting methods can be employed at a considerable saving to the grower without reducing the quality of the product.

Irrigation

The amount of water used by this group varied from 14.6 acre inches to 58 acre inches. When all the orchards are tabulated in order of the amount of water used, there is no significant correlation with yield per acre. It appears from the data submitted by the coastal growers that those using over thirty acre inches of water could make a substantial saving in water costs. One grower, for instance, who used fifty-eight acre inches could have saved the cost of twenty-eight acre inches, which would amount to $14 per acre at the average price of water in Orange county last year. The highest yielding orchard, reporting 2895 pounds per acre, used twenty-six acre inches of water in 1929. Other orchards reporting over a ton of nuts to the acre got along with twenty-two to twenty-seven acre inches of irrigation water even during the dry seasons of 1929.

Cultivation Costs

Mr. Kimball has made an exhaustive study of cultivation costs in relation to yield of walnuts and has found no correlation. Some of the highest producing orchards had low cultivation costs and others had comparatively high costs for cultivation. The same is true of the low yielding orchards. The highest yielding orchard spent $10.74 per acre for cultivation. Other high yielding orchards spent $8.12, $3.51, $11.26 and $11.14 per acre, respectively, for cultivation.

Several growers reported cultivation costs exceeding $15 and $20 per acre. It appears that a saving can be effected in this operation alone where the cost is over $8 or $10 per acre.

Other tendencies noted in the analysis of the coastal group were that more money was spent for pest control by the high group than by the low group. Quality is influenced by the control of insect pests, codling moth and aphis particularly. Deep medium loam soils predominated in the high-yielding groves. The coastal area reports the highest average yields in comparism with the interior areas.

The foregoing is submitted as a progress report. The study in Orange county will continue for years more, in which time all variations of cultural and marketing factors may be reflected. The 1929 figures for Orange county are included in a tricounty report embracing Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Orange counties. A most interesting comparison of the three areas in Southern California has been compiled by Mr. Kimball and is available at the farm adviser's office in any one of the three counties.

Fight Apple Pest

Deadwood to Be Destroyed in Yucaipa "Bug War"

YUCAIPA.—Orchardists in this district have banded together in drafting a resolution soliciting every possible aid of both the local agricultural inspector and agricultural commissioner, and pledging their own co-operation in removing apple wood from orchards that have been pulled up. Shothole borers are leaving this deadwood and brush and migrating to other orchards, doing much damage to trees, and the menace will increase rapidly unless stringent method are adoped, it is declared.

It is reported that some growers have already lost some valuable trees as a result of this new infestation, and those whose orchards are not yet threatened are also eager to curb the spread of the borers over the valley.

Low temperatures on the higher elevations in the Oak Glen district have been reported to be the cause of much damage to the 1930 apple crop, which otherwise had made an exceptionally heavy set. In the hardest hit areas some of the ranches report their entire crop a total loss from frost.

Want Rabbits Tagged

The rabbit producers' department of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau recently selected a committee to investigate shipments of frozen rabbits from Australia to the Los Angeles markets. Such shipments of imported rabbit meat are frequently sold to consumers as locally produced rabbits. The imported shipments are frequently of inferior quality, with poor keeping qualities because of being frozen during shipment. Assistant Farm Adviser L. D. Sanborn says that the rabbit producers in Los Angeles county believe this imported product should be labeled so that the consumers will be able to distinguish the rabbits produced and fattened in Southern California from those shipped in from Australia.

It's a Better Crop Year

Agricultural Conditions in Southern Part of State Progressing Normally, with Most Prospects Satisfactory

By Ross H. Gast
Agricultural Department, Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce

IT'S a pleasure to be the bearer of good tidings. The first of June found agricultural conditions in Southern California progressing normally toward what is expected to be a better crop year than was experienced last season. Field and orchard conditions are generally better than at this time in 1929, due largely to increased soil moisture, and the price level of most crops now being marketed is satisfactory.

The California Valencia orange market closed easier and lower the last week of May after a very satisfactory market during the entire month. Prices are still on a high level, however. The navel crop is now entirely off the market and shipments are being reduced, which will place the marketing of the remaining crop on an orderly basis.

Latest estimates indicate that between 17,000 and 18,000 carloads of Valencias remain for shipment after June 1, as compared with 30,604 cars of oranges shipped after that late last season. These data on supply indicate that the State's Valencia crop occupies a strong statistical position, with resultant optimism on the part of growers and shippers, who foresee a continued strong and healthy market situation throughout the season.

F.O.B. quotations on fancy Valencias, as reported by the Pacific Fruit World on May 31, are on a basis of $5.25 to $5.50 on 100s; $6.25 to $6.40 on 126s; $6.75 to $7 on 150s to 288s; $6 to $6.25 on 324s, and $5.25 to $5.50 on 360s.

The California lemon market is in a satisfactory condition, with f.o.b. quotations on extra choice stock on May 31, according to the Pacific Fruit World, on a basis of $6.50 to $7 on 300s and $6 to $6.50 on 360s.

Present marketing conditions in the avocado industry are very satisfactory to growers. The Calavo Growers of California report the situation as follows: "The season of large sizes is at its peak. The Puerte variety is entirely off the market. Varieties now available are the Lyon, Challenge, Mayapan, Anaheim and Dickinson. As usual, preference is shown for the smaller sizes, although demand is steady for fruit of any size.

"A survey of avocado acreage has just been completed by the Field Department of the Calavo Growers which confirms the estimate previously made of 1000 per cent over the past season's production. Returns to our members average higher than at any previous time in the history of the industry."

Short Walnut Crop

It is now definitely realised that California's 1930 walnut crop will be a comparatively short one. The trees set their foliage and crop very irregularly, and most of the late setting of nuts dropped from the trees prematurely. Without exception, every district in the State is reporting a subnormal crop setting, and without question, the tonnage produced from the 1930 crop will be substantially short of the heavy crop of 1929.

It is still hoped that this year's crop will exceed the very short pack-out of 1928. The probabilities are that the actual outturn will be somewhere between the short '28 crop and the long '29 crop It is still too early to make a close prediction on actual tonnage, but present conditions seem to indicate that 75 per cent of the last year's output would be a maximum.

Deciduous fruit prospects in Southern California are rather spotted, with some districts promising yields and others crops far below normal. Peaches generally are light in the southern counties. Peaches are 40 per cent of normal in the Ontario section, with delayed foliation serious. The Phillips crop is almost a total failure. This is the heaviest producing district in the south. In the Hemet-Nuevo section, where the next largest acreage of peaches is planted, indications are that the tonnage will be about 75 per cent of last year, which was about a capacity crop. Phillips and northern Tuscans are lighter than any other variety. Lower San Joaquin Valley has a rather short crop of peaches.

The apricot situation is different, however. In Ventura county, the largest apricot producing section of the south, a heavy crop is indicated and the soil moisture condition is excellent, which seems to indicate that the quality will be above that of last year. The county-wide condition is reported as 85 per cent of normal by A. H. Call, agricultural commissioner of Ventura.

In the Hemet-Nuevo section, indications are that the apricot crop will also be heavy. Sizes are fair in that district, but it is reported that the long wet and cloudy weather has developed shot-hole fungus to some extent. In San Bernardino county areas, apricots are placed at 60 per cent of normal.

Interest of the entire State is focused on the effort of California grape growers to effect an 85 per cent "sign-up" of vineyardists under the Federal Farm Board's stabilization plan. The campaign has been going on for several weeks and the picture is just now beginning to brighten. The northern section of the State in general has supported the plan, with a large percentage of the growers under signature. The same is true of the south, where the campaign is going forward with little difficulty. Middle San Joaquin Valley, however, has been rather slow, but during the past week the "sign-up" has been accentuated by a realization that the offer of the Federal Farm Board is genuine and is the only apparent solution for the problems which now confront the grape industry.

Vineyard conditions throughout the State are about normal for this time of year, with the crop expected to be larger than that of the past two years.

Field Crops Normal

Field crops are progressing normally throughout the State, with the general condition somewhat above that of last year at this time. Estimates for cotton acreage for California still remain at around 10 to 25 per cent less than last year, when 309,000 acres were planted. The San Joaquin Valley area is about 10 per cent short of last year, with a sharper reduction in the desert valleys of Palo Verde and Imperial. Arizona has a 15 to 20 per cent reduction in cotton acreage. The condition of the crop in the Salt River Valley is about the same as last year at this time, while in the Safford and Yuma sections the condition is much better than that during this period in 1929.

In Lower California it is expected that the cotton acreage will total slightly in excess of 90,000 acres, which is a considerable reduction over last year. The crop is about two weeks later than usual, due to unfavorable weather conditions. It is expected, however, that the per acre yields will average higher, and prospects are for a 60,000 to 65,000 bale crop.

Cotton prices have shown no material change during the month. Growing conditions in alfalfa districts have been more or less spotted with some sections reporting good crop weather and others slow development. The first cutting is generally completed with the exception of Antelope Valley and the second cutting is now well under way. The alfalfa market weakened somewhat during the month and prices are $3 to $6 a ton below those on this date last year.

There has been no check on acreage of lima beans in Southern California as yet, according to R. L. Churchill, secretary-manager of the California Lima Bean Growers' Association, who declares that, because of rains early in the month and cold cloudy weather which extended for several days thereafter, considerable acreage planted just prior to the rains had to be replanted. As a result, the checking of acreage has been deferred until a later date this year.

It is not anticipated that there will be any increase in acreage planted to baby limas in Southern California as compared with last year, but this variety will be increased in the Lompoc and Central California districts. Late rains permitted some increase in the planting of hillside lands to regular limas in the southern counties as compared with last year, but this will, to a con-

The name of Shafter, the district in which they were grown, goes on every sack of potatoes at the ranch of Ed Kolbenstetter. The per acre yield is heavy on this ranch, as is shown by the number of sacks along the rows in the picture on the right.

Spud Men Prosper

By Maude A. Jumper

NEVER in the potato history of Shafter, Kern county, has there been such an enormous yield, or such a good price paid for this commodity. It is estimated the crop will bring in over $750,000. And all of this sum from only 1700 acres! It is the biggest potato story ever told in the Shafter district—and it's true!

With half of the crop harvested, 604 cars have been sent out of Shafter by rail. It is estimated more than 100 truck loads have been taken out of the district.

Ed Kolbenstetter, one of the local growers, reports that he is beating the high general per acre production by a third, the largest yield ever produced here. The price has been exceptionally good. The combination of good prices and good crops has spelled prosperity.

Weather conditions were just right this year for a bumper yield. But that is not all of the story. The Shafter farmers generally fertilized their soil this year with sulphate of ammonia. This is said by the growers to have increased the yield remarkably. This is the first year that the "spuds" in this district have not been affected by a frost. This probably had something to do with the splendid showing and of course good seed played a big part.

There are farmers here who have been planting potatoes every year, taking the bad with the good, and many seasons coming way out on top. Yet never before have so many mortages been paid off. This huge crop of potatoes means an easy winter for Shafter farmers.

Never has Shafter been such a busy spot during the "spud" season. Farmers, business men and truckers are not the only ones sharing in the spoils. "Floating" harvest labor has picked up many a dollar.

Over 1000 cars will have left Shafter with the completion of the season. That is "some" crop from 1700 acres!

Among the prominent growers of the Shafter district are the following; Ed Kolbenstetter, forty acres; Adolph Kirchenman, forty acres; Bender Brothers, fifty; Emanual Mettler, forty; Gus Mettler, fifteen; T. Mettler, twenty; Gene Mettler, twenty; Milton Lohr, twenty; J. H. Arnold, twenty; Bill Handel, thirty; Eckman Brothers, twenty; J. J. Siemens, twenty-eight; Bob Newman, 185; Emil Kirchenman, twenty-five; A. Neufeld, thirty; Sol Camp, twenty; Harry Helsley, twenty; A. Towery, twenty; John Maurer, twenty; A. Plymly, thirty-two; George Isaac, fifteen; J. W. Koop, five; A. M. Dueck, eight; Bill Unruh, ten; Neils Pederson, five; Karp Malofy, five; Ed Schmidt, eight; A. Eddleman, sixty. Other growers are, Harry Schnaidt, A. Friesen, Jacob Desetoff and J. H. Siemans.

The Poultry Yard

Cull 'Em Now

Physical Characteristics Will Betray Poor Layers

If other things about the poultry farm be equal, then an increase in egg production per hen will increase the net profits. Poor layers reduce the average production of the flock and decrease the profit. Poor layers should be culled, and the time to cull is the early part of summer, just when hot days have started cutting into egg-production rather heavily.

Culling of laying hens nowadays is done by considering the physical indications of laying ability, such as type and size of bird, size and texture of comb, condition of abdomen, space between lay bones and end of keel, spread of lay bones, size and color of vent, color of shanks and beak, fleshiness of body, and so on. Extensive tests have proved these indications valuable; Prof. J. E. Dougherty of the University of California assures the State's poultrymen on that point.

By such culling a large percentage of the unprofitable hens can be removed. The percentage of error is sufficiently small to be negligible. The more accurate trapnesting system is more expensive, and hardly pays when applied to market egg layers.

A good layer will have a large comb (breed considered,) soft, red, and pliable during the laying season, while a poor layer is likely to have a small comb of harsh texture.

In all yellow-legged varieties, the yellow pigment is used up according to the number of eggs laid. The first pigment to go is that around the vent and in the skin about the eyes. Then it slowly disappears from the horny beak and shanks, so that these are paler in a bird which has laid many eggs than in one which has laid only a few, provided the feed has been the same. (A bird fed more greens or yellow corn will lose the pigment more slowly.)

A good layer must have abdominal capacity, a long keel, a good spread of the bones about the pelvis, a full and soft abdomen. Hogan was right—the poultryman should be able to lay three fingers, without crowding, between keel and lay bones, two fingers between the pubic or lay bones, which should be straight and reasonably thin and flexible, considering the age of the bird. If the bird conforms to the above, her egg-making machinery is active and well-designed.

This culling system worked out as follows in a recent Petaluma egg-laying contest: The entire contest flock was culled in early July, and separated into three groups, one of 336 putative good layers, 29 medium good, and 70 poor layers. The contest closed the following October. The trapnest records showed that the hens grouped as good layers in July had averaged 173 eggs per hen for the year, those grouped as medium had averaged 126 eggs, and those as poor, 113 eggs.

Another example: The average daily lay of 44,920 hens for the ten-day period prior to being culled by poultry specialists of the State university was 39 per cent. The hens which remained after culling produced, during the first ten days after culling, a daily average of 45 per cent (45 eggs for every 100 hens.) The culls averaged only 11 per cent.

Never taste canned food to see if it is spoiled. Odor and appearance will tell enough without the risk of tasting. When in doubt, throw it out.

Which one of these would you choose? Read the accompanying article on culling and make your choice.

POULTRY NOTES

NO matter where you have your egg-producing farm in California, your general location has little effect upon your net profits. But your location within a given district will have some bearing on the case, because it will involve certain problems of disease. So said F. R. Wilcox, extension service specialist on farm economics, in a talk given at the poultry schools in Arcadia and Van Nuys recently. In a congested area, Mr. Wilcox said, care must be taken to stop the spread of disease, if egg production and mortality are to be kept at normal. The attendance at the schools reached 450, indicating the popularity of the "school which goes to the student."

The average overhead cost, per hen, on the California poultry farm amounts to slightly more than 50 cents, including interest on investment, depreciation, taxes, and insurance, all more or less constant no matter how many birds are kept in the plant. Operating the plant at capacity tends to reduce the overhead per hen, but this cannot be carried to an extreme since the hens would be crowded and would suffer accordingly. About two and one-half square feet of floor space should be provided for each hen, under normal conditions. These figures are furnished by F. R. Wilcox, specialist in farm economics, California Agricultural Extension Service.

Setting up of rules and regulations to govern the poultry department at the 1930 Tulare county fair, and fixing of poultry department premiums, marked a recent session of the poultry department committee of the Tulare County Fair Association. A number of changes were made in the poultry department premium list. Attending the meeting were John W. Thompson, director; F. W. Hunsaker, assistant director; M. A. Lindsay, adviser, and Charles Sturtevant, F. P. Penn, F. J. Huxtable, Lawrence Jones, Faye Sayre, Robert Doris, D. B. Wells and H. W. Perry.

Three Oregonians of considerable note in the poultry world were recent Van Nuys visitors. J. L. Russell, owner of the Russell Poultry Yards of Corvallis, Oregon, and president of Russell Poultry Yards, Van Nuys, was accompanied to Southern California by J. A. Hanson of Corvallis, well-known producer of White Leghorns, and J. L. Gault, vice-president of Benton County State Bank at Corvallis and himself a poultryman. The tourists combined business and pleasure. They were entertained at the home of F. H. Allen, vice-president of the southern Russell organization.

May records of the Southern California Farm Bureau egg laying contest at Pomona for the month show that the pen of ten hens entered by the E. C. Hogsett poultry ranch of this city is maintaining the lead for producing the greatest number of eggs to date, since the start of the contest, with a total record of 1616 eggs. The ten biddies entered by George C. England of Inglewood claim second honors with a total of 1526 eggs to their credit. Howard S. Killian's El Monte pen ranks third with a record of 1392 eggs. H. N. Boyle of Escondido and G. M. Munro of Bell own the pens of ten hens which tied for first honors in quantity egg production during May, 270 eggs having been laid in each pen. The Hogsett ranch pen was second with a total of 266 eggs. A biddy owned by H. N. Boyle laid "an egg a day, for the month of May" thus winning the highest individual laying record. The birds consumed an average of 3.61 pounds of mash duringng May, 3.30 pounds of grain, 1.20 pounds of green feed.

A Successful Woman

Poultry Farm Work Carried On Despite Bereavement

NORTH HOLLYWOOD.—We are living in an age when women enter into business without handicap or hesitation. It seems that no task is too difficult for them to tackle. Mrs. M. Muswick, who operates a model poultry breeding farm at 6937 Belair avenue in this community, is one who has successfully carried on a man's work.

Mrs. Muswick came to San Fernando Valley fifteen years ago with her husband; together they started what is now one of the leading poultry farms of the valley.

Four years ago Mr. Muswick died, leaving his wife to carry on alone. Did she give up and move away to other scenes? That would have been the easier way, but Mrs. Muswick believes in finishing what she starts.

Her chickens are White Leghorns. Now, at what she terms an opportune time, she is going in strongly for Rhode Island Reds.

Plenty of ventilation in the bedroom is essential for restful sleep in summer. Windows on two walls and screens the full length of the windows to allow opening at both top and bottom are helpful.

It costs on the average $8 less to sell a truck load of produce at a market than to furnish containers for rail shipment, a shipping expert declares.

Attend School

Poultrymen Gather at Fontana to Receive Instruction

FONTANA.—The poultry extension school recently held here brought to the breeders a number of the leading authorities in the poultry world. The main topics of discussion for the first evening were cost account records and poultry production costs. F. R. Wilcox, extension service specialist, discussed "The Use of Cost Account Records by Poultrymen," pointing out the value of these records in keeping the poultryman informed as to his operations. J. P. Hertel, assistant farm adviser of San Bernardino county, talked on the work of those poultrymen in his territory who kept production records. These studies brought out in a clear manner the value of higher egg production per hen, lowered mortality, and maintenance of flock size to reduce the overhead cost per bird.

Prof. Edwin C. Voorhies on the second night discussed a few of the most important economic aspects of the poultry industry, pointing out that the poultry industry has cycles of high and low prices, the same as any other business. He was very frank in stating what he thought the trend would be during this year and next. While egg prices may be somewhat lower, the feed cost is also lower and with a higher prorduction there should be a profit in poultry for the efficient producer.

"Sanitation and Disease Control" was the topic discussed by Dr. E. W. Graybill, director of the Poultry Pathological Laboratory in Los Angeles. The main diseases discussed were chicken pox, round worms and tapeworms.

The third evening Dr. W. P. Holst, of the poultry division of the University of California, discussed principles of nutrition, and W. E. Nelson led a discussion on the problems relating to the brooding and feeding of chicks.

"Remedy" Off Market

Drugs added to drinking water will not remove lice from poultry. The Federal government has been insisting that point for some time, and now a Texas jury has spoken. The court imposed a fine and exacted a promise that the manufacture of the supposed remedy be discontinued. The Texas product was composed of commercial lime and sulphur solution, diluted in three times its volume of water. The dose was a teaspoonful to two gallons of water. This would remove lice, mites, blue bugs, and so on, it was claimed. The government tried it, and found it didn't work. The legal action followed. The maker said the sulphur would go into the fowl's system and be deposited on the skin, driving the bugs away. The government said the sulphur would be changed into sulphides in the intestinal tract, and be eliminated as hydrogen sulphide. And, if that didn't clinch the case, the chicken has no sweat glands and eliminates nothing through the skin.

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF AGRICULTURAL ACTIVITIES IN THE SOUTHWEST

Pomona Preliminary preparations for the annual fumigation of citrus groves in the Pomona Valley district are well advanced, although actual operations will not be started against citricola and other scale pests until the latter part of July or early August. All fumigating tents are being carefully overhauled, rents and tears being patched and sewed and other equipment being put in first-class condition for the season's campaign. Manager F. G. Wyman of the Growers' Fumigation and Supply Company, which carries on the scale war for members of the nine associations of the San Antonio Fruit Exchange, will have nine or ten crews in the field, aggregating about a hundred men who will operate over hundreds of valley acres. Although the trees in this district are generally in clean condition by reason of the continuous onslaught waged against the scale and red spider armies, there will be proportionately more fumigating than spraying done here this season. Henry H. Schaper, pioneer fumigator of Pomona, is also making plans to place several fumigating crews in the field.

According to Manager Reginald C. Knox of the San Antonio Fruit Exchange, all of the association packing-house members of the exchange, are working on Valencia orange shipments, forty-one cars having been shipped up to June 10. Although the market is somewhat lower, because seasonal products such as cherries, cantaloupes and other fruits are now being offered in large quantities, it is anticipated the Valencia shipments by the exchange will soon average about twenty-five cars. The quality of the fruit is fine and the oranges are reaching market in splendid condition. The lemon market continues satisfactorily steady and about 200 cars of this fruit have been shipped by the exchange houses since January 1.

Lindsay Shipments of cantaloupes started from Lindsay district the second week in June, about 600 acres coming into bearing. The fruit is being trucked to valley points and to northern markets. Good returns are expected. Beauty plums, packed at the Andrews plant, have brought an average of $3 per crate at eastern auctions. This house is also packing some apricots and will handle Santa Rosa and Climax plums.

Ontario Benton Ballou, chairman of the southern district of the California Vineyard Association, has reported that well over 85 per cent of San Bernardino county grape growers have signed the grape control contract. Under direction of Mr. Ballou, workers are interviewing grape growers in other sections of Southern California in an effort to obtain signatures of 85 per cent or more of them. When 85 per cent of the vineyardists in the State have signed the control contracts, the grape industry will be eligible for support from the Federal Farm Board. Confidence is expressed that San Bernardino county growers will sign up 100 per cent, as all have signified willingness to co-operate.

Riverside Fumigation of citrus orchards in the Riverside county districts to abate insect pests must begin earlier this season, but this is not because of any increase in the amount of infestation. Inspectors report to A. E. Bottel, agricultural commissioner, that the season is more advanced this year. Fumigation for citricola scale will commence about July 1; for both citrocola and black scale a little later than this date; for back scale alone, July 15; for red scale, July, August and September.

Dinuba Plums, apricots and figs have been shipped from the Smith mountain district near here, starting May 19. A carload of plums was shipped from there May 19 by the Biltmore Garage Corporation. Picking of apricots started a few days later and during the last week of May regular shipments got under way.

Visalia May shipments of live stock by the Tulare County Farm Bureau through the California Farm Bureau Marketing Association totaled 229 head, with 178 head of cattle and fifty-one head of sheep included in the shipment. In the shipment out of Tulare, May 26, calves weighing 180 to 250 pounds brought $11.50, cows topped at 7 cents and bulls at 6¼ cents. Ninety-seven head were shipped in this two-car lot. The importance of listing stock is urged upon growers, as it is impossible for the farm bureau to know when shipments can be made unless listed in advance.

Beaumont Southwestern markets are rapidly opening to the Beaumont cherries. Carl E. Mellor, grower and shipper, whose big new warehouse and storage plant on the highway was completed a few weeks ago, has been sending from one and a half to two tons daily to the Arizona and Texas markets, mostly to chain stores and markets. An average of fifty lugs per night has been going to one section of Texas, where a 24-hour run in open express cars is maintained, without injury to the cherries. The advantage over the Los Angeles market is that the price is set in Beaumont instead of at the destination, insuring a better and a more certain return. Next season Mr. Mellor plans shipments in express refrigerator cars to Texas and Arizona markets. By this means, the local fruit can easily be sent as far as Dallas and Fort Worth.

If you're tired looking at pretty girls demonstrating this and that, each with a sweet smile directed toward the camera, take a look at this young fellow holding dad's mushroom crop. His name is Emanuel Martinez, and he is a son of M. Martinez, Culver City.

Hemet The harvesting of the biggest apricot crop in Hemet's history is expected to get under way the last week in June. While some damage has been done to the crop from shot-hole fungus, resulting from the late May rains, there will be about the largest tonnage of first-grade fruit the valley has ever produced. Estimates of the total crop vary even at this late date, running from 12,000 to 20,000 tons. The low figure is the estimate of Agricultural Inspector H. A. Richardson, while the high figure is the estimate of officials of the canneries here. Other experienced fruit men estimate the crop at intermediate tonnages, and the general consensus is that the total will be in the neighborhood of 15,000 or 16,000 tons.

A large share of the crop will be dried this year, according to present indications, as the two canneries here cannot handle more than 2500 to 3000 tons. Both canneries will dry fruit to a larger extent than heretofore, with a total of about 2500 tons being taken care of at their plants. On the basis of a 15,000-ton crop, this will leave about 10,000 tons to be dried on the ranches or sold to outside firms, and it is not expected that a great amount of fruit will be taken by outside canneries.

Woodlake On June 9 the 4-H Club camp at Whitaker Forest, in the mountains of Tulare county, opened for the summer season. Madera county opened the camp, being in possession from June 9 to June 14. Dates for other camps are: June 16-21, Fresno county; June 23-28, Kern county; June 30-July 5, Kern county; July 7-12, farm home department members; July 14-19, Tulare-Kings counties.

Downey Reclamation of black alkali soil, as very successfully attempted by the California Agricultural Extension Service at the Los Angeles County Farm, near here, was the subject of a meeting of growers held during the past week at the test plots. These plots are similar to those first developed at Kearney Experimental Farm, Fresno. Applications include sulphur and manure, sulphur and gypsum, gypsum and manure, and iron sulphate. Last year five cuttings of alfalfa were taken from the plots, and the crop this year will be greater.

Tulare Exceptionally good hog prices were received at the farm bureau auction held in Tulare, June 4. Hogs hit a top of $10.80 on a lot of 197-pounders, while feeders reached $11.80. Five carloads comprised the shipments.

Porterville The first Black Mission figs of the season left Porterville on June 4, two weeks earlier than last year. This first consignment was sent by express to Los Angeles by Louis Berkovich, who expects to ship about 3000 boxes of figs this season. This is considered a large crop. The fruit was of a fine quality and good prices are expected.

One of the largest prune crops reported this season is found on the Rosecrest Farms on the old Poplar road, less than two miles from the city. There are 160 acres in prunes, and it is estimated that 450 tons of the dried fruit will be taken from the place this season. The trees are bending beneath their load and extensive propping is in progress. The fruit is unusually large for this time of the year, and the props are needed to prevent breakage. Other prune growers also report the heaviest prune crop in years, with prospects very favorable for fair prices.

The Rosecrest Fruit exchange closed the Beauty plum shipments on June 4, sending four cars of this variety to European markets. Fruit sent abroad was of extra fancy size and excellent quality. Some apricots were also being shipped early in June by the exchange, which then started packing Santa Rosa, Famosa and Climax plums. Four cars were moving daily by the end of the second week in June. This firm will ship about thirty-five cars of Santa Rosas this season, plums and apricots totaling together around fifty-five cars. Later they will handle grapes and peaches.

Whittier A most prosperous season for the citrus growers of this district is seen in the announcement by Dalton A. Field, manager of the Whittier District Fruit Exchange, that his organization has already paid out to growers who are affiliated with the exchange the sum of $1,000,000. Up to the time of the announcement, 545 cars of oranges and 474 cars of lemons had been shipped. This movement was lighter than normal, but was accompanied by returns which were above the average.

Citrus groves on Beverly Boulevard are being reconditioned in an effort to make the "gateway to Whittier" more attractive to visitors. The A. F. Lapworth citrus ranch, located west of the Leffingwell Rancho, is being worked over. Every other tree is being taken out, and extensive pruning and ground cultivation is being done. Several ranches in that vicinity have been neglected, as construction work on the boulevard delayed orchard work. Two months ago the city planted a row of pine trees on each side of the boulevard, to serve in future years as a line of living Christmas trees.

Mentone Farmers of this section have no reason to believe that good crops and plenty of snakes go together but they appear to this year. Throughout this section reports tell of more snakes than usual. Farmers in the foothill section have real trouble with the plague of snakes, and many of them have not been kind enough to give warning as they are supposed to do. Most every farmhouse now is equipped with adequate means for taking care of snake bites, and they are not depending on something made out of corn. Reports are that few have suffered, for the grain growers and orchardists are wearing leggings that will turn a strike.

Redlands W. O. Cook, agricultural inspector for this district, has just completed an intensive survey and says that the young orange crop is all of 100 per cent normal. Mr. Cook has been over the entire district making an inspection of the amount of fumigation needed and checking up on the condition of the young crop. He says: "We report as we find conditions today, not taking into consideration the drop that always comes in June. There will likely be a heavy drop of fruit this year but the crop is large enough to stand it." Mr. Cook found that the groves generally are clean although there will have to be quite a bit of fumigation done, probably 4000 acres or more.

R. French, president of the society this last year, had a most interesting exhibit of flowering trees and shrubs, many of them natives. Little Farm Homes

Two Families Followed Farm Life Lure— And Won Out

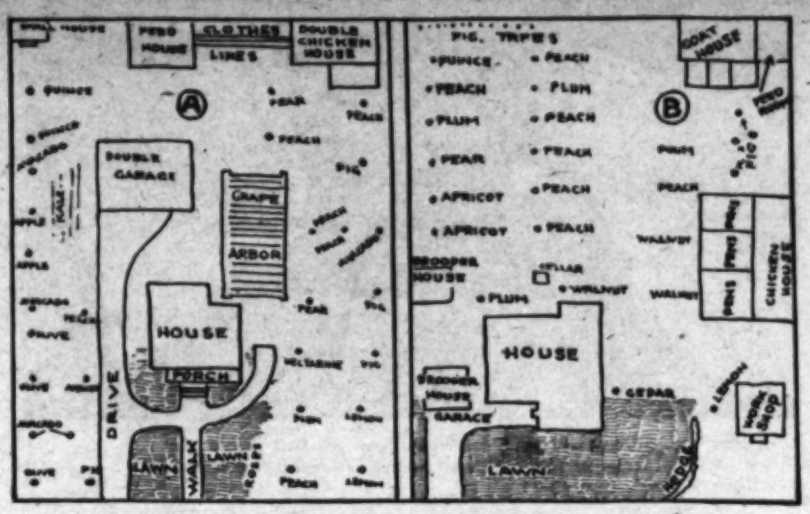
THE desire for the comparatively "wide open spaces" of the suburbs was the lodestone which drew Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Root to their half acre of land at 3215 Lincoln avenue, Inglewood. Mrs. Root found that city environment was not conducive to the health and development of her children, and that many savings in her husband's income could be made by small farm home living. Their little place in Inglewood shows that their objective has been reached.

A letter written by Mrs. Root as one condition of entry in the recent Farm and Garden-Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce small farm home contest follows:

"In looking for a home we wanted more than a lot, so we could have our own chickens, vegetables and fruits as well as flowers and lawn, and more open space for the children to play in, with more freedom away from the crowded, noisy city. We also wanted a place to plant where and what we pleased and to add to and fix the house over to our own liking.

"Accordingly we bought this property. It has given us a chance to grow the vegetables we wanted so they could always be fresh, as well as help cut living expenses. The chickens ate all waste from kitchen and table.

"Chickens not only furnished us with plenty of eggs to eat as well as to sell, but well fed fowls to eat. Having more fruit than we could eat during the season gave me a surplus to can for the winter months and have more than if I had bought from the markets.



Read how a few hens transported the family of J. K. Boswell from a city apartment to the acre home at Roscoe shown in map form on the left. The Inglewood half-acre depicted at the right was developed by Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Root to satisfy a "back-to-the-land" longing.

Several Hours' Work

"The head of the family is at present an oil employee, working at Santa Fe Springs. An average of three to four hours a day are spent working on the place.

"Conveniences we installed include water pipes into each chicken house, with automatic faucets over drinking pans, and lights so wired that they are turned on and off by a switch in the garage regulated by an alarm clock.

"In planting alfalfa and kale for chickens, and vegetables for ourselves, we put them between fruit trees, so one watering would take care of both trees and plants."

Another Follows Lure

Desire for country living was also the lure which took Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Boswell of Roscoe to San Fernando Valley, a move which they say has resulted in not only establishing ideal living conditions, but decided improvement in their economic status. Mr. Boswell's letter, written as one of the conditions of entry of the recent small farm home contest, follows:

"There has been a time when I loved the hurry and bustle of the city and was perfectly content to live in an apartment. My wife liked the country but did not say much about moving, but I noticed that she was awfully well pleased when I bought some Plymouth Rock hens and a rooster. When the rooster crowed, or when they got out and scratched in the neighbors' yards, the neighbors would glare at me with blood in their eyes, so I decided to move out where those chickens would have more freedom, and in 1922 we bought an acre with a small house and chicken houses on Vineland avenue, then a dirt road in Roscoe. The few chickens had plenty of room, as there were only about twenty of them in a house built for about 600.

"My wife was working in Burbank on a newspaper. I was not well and the doctor recommended outdoor work, so I decided to build up a flock of Plymouth Rock chickens. I soon found that this is not a popular breed for California, so ordered 500 White Leghorn baby chicks. Had fairly good luck in breeding them, but about the time they came into full laying the slump in the egg market came and I was forced to sell.

"Then I decided to raise Rhode Island Red breeding stock, and started in a small way. In the meantime the fresh air and sun baths had done much to restore my health. We have always kept goats and the milk has not only kept us strong and well, but has reduced living expenses. In summer we buy no vegetables at all and always find a ready market for the surplus. I had built a small house which I use for rag rug weaving.

"On our acre we have a family orchard of five walnut trees, seven peaches, three apricots, ten figs, five plums, one navel orange, one Valencia, one lemon, one grapefruit, one quince, one pear, twenty grape vines, rhubarb, strawberries and red raspberries. We grow green feed for the goats, and all kinds of vegetables in season. The taxes, interest, and insurance amount to nearly $30 a month, and we feel that it would be impossible to rent a place like that for $30. I feel confident that when I get my pens of Rhode Island Reds built up they will help out substantially with living expenses.

"About three years ago a pigeon came to our home, and later a mate. If we were meat eaters we would have had all the squabs we want from these pigeons. All the fertilizer from goats and chickens is used on orchard and garden. My wife spends about four hours each day working on the place, and I spend all the time I can after weaving and attending to chickens.

"For tools we have two hand plows, hoe, rake, spading fork, spade, shovel and wheelbarrow. We are for all public improvements necessary for the growth of our section; then when property values have increased, and taxes become burdensome, we will move further out. There has been a lot of hard work on this acre, but it developed muscles; there have been bitter disappointments and deprivations, but they have developed character, so I have no fight with the old Plymouth Rock hen for persuading me to buy an acre ranch."

Cause of Die-Back

The excessive die-back this season in walnuts in the El Monte-Puente district, which has been sufficiently noticeable to attract considerable attention, has been traced to seasonable conditions, according to Los Angeles Deputy County Agricultural Commissioner H. H. Wilcomb. The condition seems directly attributable to a general delayed dormancy in the fall of 1929 caused by prolonged warm mild weather and possible late irrigations.

Rare Seed Collector

He Opens the Door to African Flora a Little Way

By Dorothy L. Black

A garden door that leads to an old, old continent, rich in almost untouched fields of plant material, has been opened a little way by Eustace Rush of Burbank, and through the door are coming strange guests to live in the garden. Mr. Rush, who has been in Africa, that vast continent with many strange and beautiful trees, flowers and shrubs, says there are great possibilities of adapting many of these, apparently well-suited to our Southern California climate. Especially promising is the growth native to Kimberly, Mafeking and Bechuanaland, situated about as far south of the equator as we are north, therefore with conditions very similar. He has seen the oddly beautiful "Bird of Paradise lily," the strelitzia regina, already familiar to us as a rather rare plant growing wild in Africa. There are several little known gerberas, in addition to those our hybridists used which are very fine and capable of great development. As wild flowers with small blooms and a limited range of colors, they hinted to him of wonderful new beauty if it were worked out. He is hybridizing these gerberas now and has secured some remarkable results.

The chief difficulty, says Mr. Rush, is the securing of stock from Africa with which to work. Plants cannot be imported, and there are so few collectors to acquire seeds. The territory is vast, in many instances unexplored, yet bewilderingly rich in just the sort of plants we need. Mr. Rush, who has a standing order with seedsmen in Africa to send whatever they secure, says that there is a marvelous opportunity to introduce from Africa, Australia and New Zealand a great variety of beautiful garden material of which we do not dream as yet. As these countries became more settled, an exchange of plant material will take place, adding greatly to garden beauty.

He speaks of the fascination of that country, from which he is constantly importing, as a horticulturist, rare plant, tree and shrub seeds, that we may share some of its loveliness, Australia, New Zealand, India and Mexico, as well, for he imports seeds, particularly palm and other tree seeds, from those countries, too.

He is an Englishman by birth, coming from that horticulturally-minded country which grounds its garden lovers very thoroughly in the fundamentals of plant knowledge, and in the patience to study, learn and develop what is at once their work and their hobby. He is a student of our native plant material, also realizing the worth of the many lovely wild plants and shrubs that fill our hills and canyons with beauty. And he is earnestly concerned with arousing appreciation of our floral possibilities and hopes, though his work, to add something substantial to our world of beauty.

If the lock sticks, try oiling the key and turning it several times.

Hydraulic Farmers

THEY ARE BUSY MAKING CITRUS LAND

By Edwin F. Lindenberger

IN THE pioneer days of California, hydraulic mining was an effective method of washing gold from the hills. Today the same process may be witnessed in operation, but this time golden fruit is the lure.

The hills of East Highland are being washed away to make soil for citrus plantings. East Highland is a citrus district just across the Santa Ana River from Redlands. Among the most extensive citrus growers is J. S. Edwards, head of several organizations, including the East Highland Orange Company, and the Superior Orchard Company. The combined holdings comprise approximately 1600 acres of choice orange plantings.

This year Mr. Edwards estimates that he will harvest about 125,000 boxes of fruit. However, this yield is not nearly so much a matter of pride and satisfaction as was the first real crop, back in 1886, when he sent out eighty-six boxes from the few trees with which he started.

The Edwards ranch is highly improved, with private concrete roads that would do credit to any county, elaborate retaining walls to hold the various tracts in place and model ranch headquarters, shops and mess hall to care for a small army of employes and keep in repair a regular fleet of farm implements. For many years Mr. Edwards has threaded his way about the slopes of his properties, through tortuous paths that dipped into deep gullies, and over high mesas, only to come up short against some big gap in the landscape where a monster rainstorm in days past had gouged out hundreds of cubic yards of soil.

These canyons, cuts, and gullies down the East Highland slopes, besides being supremely ugly, were a rank waste of good land, in the opinion of Mr. Edwards. And so, during the last ten years, he has been gradually filling in. The method is quite unique. Dams are built with dirt-filled sacks across the bottoms of the canyons, and water under high pressure used to cut away the hills and wash the mud down into the check dams. Gradually each year's deposit of hill soil is filling the gullies, and before many more years, the slope will be a continuous plane of high-class orange land, it is hoped.

Such a project naturally is expensive. Water, naturally, would be considered the main cost. In this instance Mr. Edwards owns about all of Plunge Creek, and the water from that source is used for sluicing during the times when no irrigating is being done. One would consider that the cost per acre of such reclaimed land would be so high that the profits would never catch up with the investment. But the land was secured more than forty years ago at a very low price. Worthless land, it was considered, and so it would be even today except that Mr. Edwards has proved it to be valuable for citrus purposes.

"What is the difference what it costs?" says Mr. Edwards. "I didn't like the looks of the place as it was. It was honestly a matter of wanting to make things look better and now each year the sluicing is an important part of our program."

Must Stay in State

Fruit which has been held because of failure to meet the requirements of the California fruit, nut and vegetable standardization law and then released under certificate for by-products purposes must be so used within the State only, according to George D. Hussey, senior agricultural inspector, acting in charge of standardization law enforcement in Los Angeles county.

They are tearing away the hills with a stream of water in the upper left-hand picture, to fill up a canyon to make more land for citrus plantings near East Highlands, a project fathered by J. S. Edwards. At the upper right are check dams which halt the downward course of the dislodged mud and gradually fill the sharp gullies. The lower picture shows a gentle slope which once was a very steep canyon. It is now all ready for tillage and planting.

The up-and-down picture shows sand bags checking muddy water in a canyon. Each year the stone wall is built up to the level of the fill. Eventually, the floor of the canyon will reach the top of the bank, forty feet above it now, where orange trees are growing on each side and then the whole canyon will be flat acreage ready for more orange trees. The other picture shows orange trees which, some time ago, stood on the edge of a steep canyon. The bags rot away after their work is done.

Girls Apt Students

By Albert G. Salter

Assistant Agriculture Teacher, Grossmont Union High School

THE value of connecting agricultural instruction and practice with high school education is a proven fact. In many school districts the school has been a factor in the improvement of farm and community life. To further the factor of student school and community improvement the agriculture department of Grossmont Union High School this year added to its course of study a girls' horticulture class.

The girls of the high school were notified by school and local newspapers of the organization of the course and twenty responded by enrolling. Other girls of the school spoke of their desire to take such a course but the lack of having time for elective subjects prevented them from doing so.

The objective of the course was to bring together all the high-school girls interested in horticulture and landscape gardening so that they might learn the art. After obtaining some knowledge of gardening and landscaping the girls should take home the desire and ability to improve homes and increase happiness.

Soon after the organization of the class, the girls formed a horticultural club which set up for their year's objective the furthering of beautification of the school grounds. At the present time the girls are making drawings of the school ground and new plantings. However, landscaping is not all that is studied by the class. The general foundation of botany was first studied. The second quarter, the girls studied citrus fruits and tree judging. The last two quarters were given over to lapdscaping.

Two judging trips are offered, one to the orange show at San Bernardino and one to the Chaffey Junior Fair at Ontario. On both of these trips the girls enter judging teams, the citrus judging at San Bernardino and citrus and tree judging at Chaffey. Several short trips are taken during the year, one to a San Diego park to study native California trees, and to nurseries to study plant identification.

The girls are asked to have home projects. A project may be defined as that type of work that will help the individual, the home and the community. The slogan, "earning while learning," has appealed to the girls as well as the boys. The girls' projects vary from poultry to horticulture. Most of them have vegetable and flower gardens. One girl has made over $40 so far this year on her project.

The school board and the community are back of this movement in agriculture and the results have been pleasing to all.

This picture shows a portion of the growing grounds, seedling test plots and a strip of rather formal garden which leads into the rose garden at Laurel Center, at Santa Monica and Fairfax avenues, Los Angeles, where the pupils of elementary schools in Wilshire and Hollywood districts have very practical instruction in gardening.

Interesting Garden

Laguna Beach Cottage Has an International Flavor

By H. M. Timerhoff

The pendulum has swung toward small apartments and restricted home life until it has reached the limit and now is ready to swing the other way, toward the delights of home and that which marches with a real home—the garden.

Garden clubs strongly indicate this home-and-flora trend of thought and act. Flower shows, garden exhibits and floral displays in greater numbers each year announce renewed interest in the cultivation of beauty spots about the home; in co-operative work by members of the family for the pleasure of themselves and friends, as well as for those outside the home's radiations, those strangers who welcome a Pageant of Flowers wherever displayed.

In Laguna Beach there is an active garden club, its devotees proving results in their individual garden plots most convincingly. Among these is one of particular interest because of the varied and unique plant life gathered from widely scattered points and deftly harmonized within a small space. It is really an international garden, and is presided over by one versed in propagation and floral lore, Mrs. C. B. Hazlehurst of Pasadena, whose cottage at Laguna Beach shares with the garden, space contained in three beach lots.

All of the family work together in this garden under the wise directorship of Mrs. Hazlehurst, even Mr. Hazlehurst himself, whose official legal toggery is doffed eagerly each week-end in favor of overalls and physical toil; whose books and practice become mere background as he handles hoe, rake and spade in the interests of this garden, where flourish such plants as the Natal plum, all the way from South Africa, and the feijoa, from China, which has a fruit whose taste is most individual and delightful.

Here also is the lemon guava from Yucatan, the yellow guava from Panama, and the cherry guava from Mexico. Dwarf orange, tangerine and persimmon have been garnered from Japan and grow happily. Tea bushes there are from Ceylon, and passion fruit from India, the latter with a fruit that is dark purple in color, larger than a hen's egg, its rich purple interior resembling the yolk of an egg; they say it tastes like cinnamon and sugar.

Very interesting is the bird of paradise flowering tree from Siam; its blossom is like the tail of its name-sponsor, with long waving plumes of red and yellow.

Central America is represented by the copa de oro, "cup of gold" a giant morning glory, whose blossoms of brilliant gold striped with light are a foot long and eleven inches across.

Sumatra of the South Seas has donated something very unique, a meat-eating plant that thrives on a bit of hamburger fed to it twice a week within the petals, which instantly close upon this food and so remain until each morsel is digested.

Forty kinds of gourds thrive within this garden, and friends now and then receive such gifts as a water bottle and six cups, gathered from the "bottle" and "cup" gourds. The "dishrag" gourd is a gift not scorned either, for its spongy self is a good cleanser. The calabash gourd makes a good pipe that colors up like a real Meerschaum.

In the midst of such flowers as the American daisy, the rose, the petunia and hosts of other old favorites, there are lilacs of delphinium blue, delicate as lace, from the rugged mountains of Mexico. Salmon-colored hibiscus are delegates from Honolulu, as also are pineapple slips from that land. Rare irises of a pink and bronze shade from Santa Barbara divide interest with flourishing tobacco plants from Havana. Bougainvillea vines wander over walls and add to the ensemble of colorful beauty.

This garden spot has another appeal which is not to be ignored, and that is its lily pond, and among these flowering plants swim goldfish, their numbers diversified by blackfish from Lake Victoria, Central Africa. These negroid fish are very peculiar, with telescopic eyes that protrude from the ends of horns. Among these "unusuals" is a fish that Mr. Hazlehurst calls "Aunt Emma." A sociable finny which meets him at the edge of the pond from any distance when he arrives and calls "Aunt Emma!" He avers that she comes immediately and floats on top of the water while he performs the gentle rite of scratching or tickling her back.

The boys of the neighborhood are paid for bringing toads to this garden, and at least four pairs are to be found always under the bushes, making their living off the slugs and insects.

No picture could give a really satisfactory impression of the charming rock-garden at Laurel Center. It is tucked unobtrusively around a corner, a casual part of the landscape and full of delightful, fascinating plant treasures.

of the never-ceasing delights, a self-colored marvel.

R. French, president of the society this last year, had a most interesting exhibit of flowering trees and shrubs, many of them natives. Mr. French is a professional gardener yet not in the commercial class. His entry puzzled the judges considerably, it being felt that it truly deserved high recognition, yet actually falling into neither of the specified classes. A special was finally decided upon and another year there will be a special class for entries by professional gardeners.

In the commercial class, J. W. Nelson of Van Nuys took a first for the best three spikes of red glads and another first for the best basket of red varieties.

The amateur groups came out very strong with some entries of more than usual merit. The society's silver cup, going to the best general display in this section, was given to Mrs. Frank Sheldon, Van Nuys, her entry being particularly high in artistic appeal and the range of varieties entered was extensive. She was also given a first for a superb bunch of Madonna lilies.

Second prize for general display went to Mrs. E. Lutermoser, Van Nuys, who had a splendid collection of flowers and plants, and who won awards for her star-flowered phlox, her canterbury bells, her ferns and her pansies, the latter award being a second.

In the class for most artistic basket, Mrs. John Wardlow took first also for best basket of scabiosa and the same for petunias. A. Lorbeer, San Fernando, won a first for his collection of nine varieties of carnations, all in fine condition. Mrs. L. A. Bossi, Van Nuys, took a first for her lovely and rather uncommon Jacobae, for her vase of tamarisk in bloom and her Shasta daisies.

Mrs. Byron Holley, Burbank, ran all contestants a very close race for honors in the general display and in many individual plant groups, carrying off a first for her Rehmania and her digitalis, and a second for scabiosa. She had many specimens of unusual character in her exhibit.

A first was given the entry of the Rock Garden Club, a group within the general organization of the horticultural society. A great variety of the choicer alpines and perennials suitable for such gardens were shown.

The garden section of the Reseda Woman's Club took first prize on the classification for clubs with a very handsome mixed basket against a mirror and black and silver background, all carried out in modernistic design. The garden section of the Van Nuys Woman's Club took second, with Cahuenga Park Woman's Club, third.

Mrs. C. E. Angier, Van Nuys, entered a basket of giant pansies that captured first award. A huge, dull blue jar, filled with statice Perezii, won a special for Olive Chadeayne and a bowl of shirley poppies, exhibited by Mrs. Opal Scarborough, Van Nuys, also received a special.

The school children had a section of their own in this show and the award for best single display was given to the Van Nuys High School. The flowers in the exhibit were particularly good in quality.

I cannot resist commenting on a complimentary display brought in by John Van Barnevelt of Howard & Smith's nursery, who acted as one of the judges. It was a bowlful of this firm's new double gerberas, to be on the market this fall for the first time. Propagation is only possible from root division and it has taken some time to get a quantity of these very lovely flowers on hand. The most extraordinary feature about them is the luscious shades that have been developed, particularly one soft, clear orange.

Other judges for this event were; Mrs. E. E. Harrington, of San Gabriel, who acted in the commercial classes with Mr. Van Barnevelt; Mr. Sanford and Mrs. Helen King, in the amateur section.

cious barbecue pit and plenty of fountain-type niches, make it a delightful spot for jolly school affairs. There is a rock garden, an artistic pool with a rustic bridge over it, all contributing to the charm of the spot as well as to the opportunity for diversified garden practice.

The flower show was held in the gymnasium and was made all the more attractive and worthwhile by the generous displays placed by several commercial nurserymen. These exhibits were carefully named and it was interesting to see the boys and girls group about them, studying unfamiliar plants and making copious notes. It was a generous co-operation on the part of the commercial men, for there was little prospect of business and none of the awards which tempt them into the larger flower shows.

Some of the cleverest work by the students was along the lines of design. There was a class for school organization emblems worked out in flowers that brought many entries. The prize winner was the emblem of the tennis club worked out on a triangle background of small yellow flowers, with the racket in blue, with two tennis balls made of white pansies.

The flowers displayed ranged from delphiniums, coreopsis, gladioli and the like grown in the open garden, to dainty primulas and ferns that had been tenderly nursed along in the glasshouse.

Didn't Sweeten Up

Nine hundred boxes of immature grapefruit held in quarantine in a local citrus-packing house by Los Angeles county standardization inspectors working under the agricultural commissioner's office, have after two weeks failed to show any increase in acid-sugar ratio. When first checked by inspectors in the packing-house they showed an acid-sugar ratio ranging from 4.8 to 1 to 5.3 to 1, whereas the State law requires a minimum ratio of 5.5 to 1. Tests made two weeks later seem to show an increase in acid rather than sugar as the maximum test showed a ratio of 4.7 to 1 which was less than the lowest test made at the first checking.

Great Desert Crop

ALFALFA THRIVES IN INDIAN WELLS VALLEY

By Margaret R. Reid

ALFALFA, that green, succulent and adaptable legume, has had a large part in the winning of the West. It is the staff of life to live stock, and as a soil builder it has few equals. Alfalfa has spelled salvation to many a rancher, and often has he returned to it, after having tried out other more spectacular but less and dependable crops.

The quality of this crop differs acording to climate and soil, but it has long been considered true that good desert alfalfa is perhaps the best of all. The dry air, the long sunny days and freedom from noxious weeds combine to produce a superlative product. And when it is so intelligently marketed that the ranch will return a 6 per cent interest on a land value of $556 an acre, such ranching may be said to be successful.

This monetary return is an actual fact on the Bowman ranch, in Indian Wells Valley, near the eastern border of Kern county, and on the edge of the Mojave desert. On this ranch are 215 acres in alfalfa giving an average yield of eight tons to the acre, over a ten-year period, according to the management. A ten-acre test block cut fourteen tons to the acre, with seven cuttings. The quality is so good that every consumer reorders, and the average price received during all of last year was $18 per ton. The whole crop has been bought for the past three years by a hay and grain company, which hauls it by truck 200 miles to Los Angeles, and delivers most of it direct to dairies.

Some of the special virtues of this Bowman alfalfa are that it is clean and free from weeds; the stalks are thin and leafy, with leaves growing clear to the ground, and the color stays bright because it is grown where there is no dampness or fog. The desert climate makes it possible to dry the crop on the ground until it is ready to bale, and this prevents the falling of leaves.

The success of the Bowman ranch is the result of fifteen years of persistent effort on the part of the senior Bowman, Grant W., now retired, and of his wife and family of sons and daughters. It should be mentioned here that the place was bought this spring by H. U. Helm, a capitalist of Los Angeles, and that the senior Bowman has gone to La Verne to live, while two of his sons, John and Roy, remain on the ranch as managers.

Grant Bowman first saw Indian Wells Valley when sent there by a Los Angeles company to install pumps. The country just suited him, and in 1912 he filed on a homestead, picking his location where the land lay even and level. He moved there in 1913, bringing his wife and children.

All for One

The first years were the usual pioneer struggle for a foothold, with very little money to go on. A well had to go down at once; a house and barn had to be built. The people of the valley are proud of the achievement of the Bowmans, and they enjoy telling of the way they all worked together, both sons and daughters getting jobs outside, part of the time, and bringing back their earnings to build up the home place.

Various crops were tried, for this was virgin country, and no one knew what to plant. Apples were tried, but failed. Watermelons did well, and helped, being hauled on a bed of hay to Randsburg, and other nearby mining towns, where they were eagerly bought by the miners. Three hundred turkeys were raised one year from six hens, and they throve in the desert climate.

But alfalfa did better than any other crop, and soon there was a good acreage planted. From that time on, the plantings have been increased steadily, and the new owner plans to expand the present 215 acres to 600.

The variety grown is smooth Peruvian. The first cutting is made about April 1, and the last in October. No fertilizer is ever used, but, as production begins to decrease slightly after about the sixth year, Mr. Bowman believes that rotation should be practiced every ten years or so. A fifty-acre piece, which had grown alfalfa for sixteen years, was plowing up this year and is now planted to cotton, as an experiment.

Throughout the growing months a staff of fifteen men, many of them college students, is kept busy all the time, attending to the continuous process of mowing, raking, baling and irrigating. The pumps run night and day.

A tractor mower does the cutting efficiently, and three hay presses carry on the good work. In April the hay lies drying for four or five days, and in summer it is baled by the third day. After the first cutting, no hay is shipped until fall, but it is piled up, one hundred tons to a pile, and held until prices are satisfactory. There is very little loss.

Water Table Maintained

The crop is irrigated from three wells, with electric-driven turbine pumps, set

Alfalfa does better than any other crop on the Bowman Ranch. An average of eight tons to the acre, over a period of ten years, is grown on this eastern Kern county farm.

Puncture Vine Control

The recent appropriation of $15,000 from the good roads fund, by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors for puncture-vine control on Los Angeles city streets in San Fernando Valley has made possible the continuation of the campaign being conducted against that serious weed pest by county Agricultural Commissioner Harold J. Ryan. Work will be pushed as rapidly as possible to complete the work of applying the necessary weedicides before the vines seed themselves.

A Fig Farmer

J. W. Easter of One Hundred Eighty-Sixth street and Vermont avenue, in Gardena Valley, is a former railroad man who has given up the hazards of the road for the quiet of country life. Mr. Easter has eleven acres of land in his ranch, nine of which are planted to Kadota, Brown Turkish and Black Mission figs. Figs, according to Mr. Easter, are easy to grow, although they require heavy pruning and a good deal of water.

This enterprising rancher also raises about 1000 meat chickens every year.

"I have tried various breeds of heavy chickens but have found "Reds" most satisfactory," Mr. Easter said. "I have had Reds at eleven weeks weigh three and one-fourth pounds." We sell the cockerels wholesale, but keep the pullets for eggs, later selling them for 'roasters.' We grow our greens and mix our own poultry feed. We buy our hatching eggs in Kansas, have them shipped here, then turn them over to a local hatchery."

Mr. Easter keeps about 150 New Zealand White rabbits, feeding them rolled barley, alfalfa hay and carrots. Carrots, he declares, are the best food for rabbits. It takes about one-fourth-acre to keep his bunnies supplied. He sells both breeding stock and fryers. The rabbit hutches are built in a chicken run, so all of the feed wasted by the rabbits is picked up by the chickens.

"This farmer also has a small subtropical orchard. In it he has seven varieties of oranges, three tangerines, grapefruit, lemons, two kinds of persimmons, both pineapple and strawberry guavas, feijoas and jujubes. The latter fruit is very good preserved or dried. A fine arbor of Concord grapes adds to the the attractiveness of the ranch, and loads the table with fruit during the season.

"Mother and I have done most of the work on the ranch ourselves," Mr. Easter said. "As our orchard gets older was have, of course, larger crops of figs, so we will have to have help in the summer from now on. Last year during the rush season we packed as high as 800 pounds of figs a day, and we had no trouble to sell every fig."

Mr. Easter was born and reared on an Illinois farm, and it was only natural that when he grew tired of railroading that he should turn again to a farm.

"The high cost of living doesn't bother this family," Mr. Easter declared, "nor does unemployment worry us at all—there is always plenty to do on a farm. Yet, it is interesting work, and there is always a shady spot where a fellow can rest, and perhaps take a nap on a hot day.

Mr. and Mrs. Easter have been on their ranch nine years.

Youth Is Being Served at Flower Shows as Well as Elsewhere

YOUTH has been served in the last week or so, with commencement activities of one sort and another going full blast. Along with these have been the school flower shows, the agricultural exhibitions, the art displays that are offered, that we may judge for ourselves of the progress made during the school year. It is pretty safe to say that those who attended such events found plenty to interest them and a great deal to amaze them, not to mention the feeling of pride and satisfaction aroused by the fact that advantages of this sort can be given the pupils of our public schools.

The elementary schools of Wilshire, West Hollywood and Hollywood districts held their annual flower show at Laurel Center on June 3 and 4, and a beautiful display they made. The effect was heightened, of course, by the numerous entries in the class for artistic vase and bowl arrangements, with special backgrounds for each individual arrangement, and by the artistic basket group. These were prepared by the teachers of the various schools, using flowers grown by the children under their supervision. The gladiolus class was very extensive and filled with entries that would have done credit to our best growers. Some experienced professional or advanced amateur growers were among the judges for this occasion and they were united in their praise of the exhibit as a whole and the seedling class in particular.

With Mrs. S. M. Morgan, in charge of all ornamental planting study, and C. E. Warner, directing study along economic gardening lines, the children have had wonderful opportunities to learn well the elementals of good planting practice. They have been taught the value of putting a healthy seed in the proper soil for germination and have followed the seedling into maturity. A flower is something more than a pretty blossom to these youngsters. They look at a gladiolus or an iris, for instance, and know from its form and color, something of its heritage. They know what it means to select from a number of plants, the ones with outstanding qualities, as parents for a cross which they hope will produce something even finer. When these future citizens take their places in the world of adult activities, any community in which they make their homes ought to benefit vastly by their presence. It isn't from backgrounds such as these that the drifters, the nomads, the indifferent citizens are recruited.

Along with the practical side, the artistic is not being neglected. Judging from the beautiful color harmony, the sense of line achieved in the flower arrangements, the teachers can be trusted to "teach the young idea how to shoot"—in the right direction. Developing the appreciation of beauty, the color-sense, in the young is not a waste of effort and while this training applies to a restricted field, the same principles will be almost unconsciously applied to other things all the rest of their lives.

Out in Eagle Rock, the high school students combine a flower and a pet show rather happily. Whether or not it is due to the very early influence of J. J. Broomall on this community, the folks out in that district certainly are "flower conscious." While Mr. Broomall's specialty has always been the dahlias that have made his name nationally known, he has loved other flowers and encouraged the planting of them. It is only natural that the children of this community should be enthusiastic gardeners, warmly supported by home interest.

E. R. Angier, in charge of the agricultural work at Eagle Rock High School, is proud of the splendid equipment in the school garden. There is a sizable lathhouse, a small glasshouse, various types of propagating beds, adequate sprinkler systems, all of which make for thorough and comprehensive work. The portion of the grounds devoted to this purpose have been laid out in a fashion to make it a recreation center for the school, as well as a place of work and study. A summerhouse, a

The Weather Man Hasn't Been Kind to This One of Our Flower Shows

THIS year the San Fernando Valley Horticultural Society elected to hold its annual flower show in conjunction with the Junior Fair at the Van Nuys High School, housing the floral exhibits in the gymnasium, a plan that seemed to work out very well for all concerned. The weather man seems to have somthing against the valley folks. Last year he turned on something like 110 degrees of heat the day before the show, with sad results to many of the flowers that had been carefully prepared for this event. The day before the show was the high point of heat so far this season—which didn't help the qualities of the flowers any. Nevertheless, the gardeners of the valley managed to put on exhibits that were better, in many ways, than the one last year, one that was really full of interest.

Last year the exhibition was mainly composed of gladioli. This time the range of exhibits included all the seasonable annuals and perennials, choice alpines for rock gardens, many flowering shrubs and trees and the ubiquitous cacti.

Except for the display of irises and gladioli entered by Morton Sanford of Chino, there were no entries of a commercial character from outside the valley district. It was most unusual to see an exhibit of iris this late in the season, but Mr. Sanford had some very lovely specimens there. I was much interested in the variety known as Susan Bliss, strongly suggestive of Dream, and the same pinkish tone, but just a bit larger and with a distinctive veining on the standards, and also in Mr. Sanford's own Alpha, a little lighter than Susan Bliss, with a touch of white along the beard, recalling Aphrodite. Mr. Sanford received a special on his irises, which had no competition, and a first for the three best glads in the show.

Another entry to win a special, having no competition, was the lovely display of hardy and tropical water lilies from Woodford's Water Gardens, the outstanding beauty of the display being a bowl of the variety Sunrise, a soft, clear yellow of extraordinary size, the largest of the hardy lilies. Among the others which attracted much attention were blooms of the only white tropic lily, Mrs. George Pringle, the soft rose-tinted Mrs. C. W. Ward and the clear blue, lighter than Pennsylvania, William Sonte. Incidentally, some of the most gorgeous fancy fish I've seen were included in the display—the Calico Pantails.

The best general display, in the professional classes, was that of F. R. Hudson, San Fernando, who showed gladioli principally. He won firsts and one second. The second best collection of glads was that of Mrs. George C. Capes, Van Nuys. A special was awarded to the unique entry of Larkspur Gardens, composed of gourds, plain and decorated, many shaped for special purposes, including a clever little miniature cactus garden in one gourd of ample proportions. Decorative effects were further carried out by regal lilies and one

The cost of irrigation is considered high. Last year it cost $7000 to irrigate the 250 acres.

The cost of irrigation is considered high. The water table has dropped only two feet since the well was put down, and Mr. Bowman believes that the Aqueduct has helped, rather than injured water conditions in Indian Wells Valley, due to the location of the Haiwee reservoir on its northern border. A new well is put down every five or six years, and costs about $1500.

The Simi Valley Union High School is promoting pork production by means of its agriculture students who are making money while they study how it's done, in class and out. At the right is Lewis Stork and his brood sows, while at the left, Howard Buchheim's project pigs graze on pasture.

"Earning While Learning"

AGRICULTURE STUDENTS HAVE GOOD TIME WHILE DOING BOTH

By E. Yale Waterman

THE slogan of youthful agriculturists nowadays is "Earning While Learning," a good motto and one that these students are probably living up to better than the members of most organizations do to theirs. This is a story of the work of the agriculture students at the Simi Valley Union High School, an active group who in their enthusiasm for earning do not forget the learning end of it.

Everyone who takes an agriculture course has a project, either in raising animals or in growing plants. Last year the average income for each boy amounted to $98.29 over and above all labor costs and other expenses. They spent an average of 196 hours each, which gave them an average labor income of 53 cents an hour earned, and not included in the $98.29. The credits for all the projects amounted to $2134. Accurate cost accounts are kept by the boys and the work is under the supervision of the teacher.

Hogs Paid Them

There were five hog projects last year, and thirty-seven pigs, 6529 pounds of pork, were produced; all sows were pure-bred Duroc-Jerseys sold to the boys by the Doheny Tapo Rancho. The herd boar is line-bred back to Great Orion Sensation and Cherry Lady, both past grand champions, and he justifies his breeding for he is an exceptionally fine young individual.

Howard Buchheim's two sows turned off eighteen pigs last year, making a net profit of $197.30. He has now rented an acre of land on a share basis for the fruit and has planted corn between the trees. Lewis Stork, who lives with his uncle and aunt, has three sows working for him now, one of which he raised himself. He got nineteen pigs last year and made a net profit of $94.30, with a present inventory, clear of debt, of $266.80.

Thomas Connell was the most successful among the large poultry project boys, getting a net profit of $208. He had seventy-five hens with an average production of better than 50 per cent. Last September this young poultryman bought 125 pullets. There are in the course six pullet production projects.

As the school is near the El Dorado Estates squab farm, the boys have been able to secure good breeding stock of various breeds. Bill Townsend's squab project showed a net profit of $3 per pair. Walter Green started a similar project this year with six pairs of Plymouth Rock pigeons, which seem to be doing well.

Two calf and six garden projects complete the list. Leroy Johnson recently sold a baby beef at a good profit. Three of the boys have supervised labor projects, one of them earning $280 last season for 818 hours of work.

Sixty ribbons and trophies have been won by these lads for exhibits of live-stock and poultry and in competitive judging contests. The Simi Valley teams in poultry, live stock and dairy cattle judging are Ventura county champions. One of the poultry judging team, Rafael Chavez, won a gold medal at the Southern California Fair at Riverside last year for his premier performance. At the same fair Howard Buchheim won first in judging Jerseys and was awarded a registered Jersey heifer. Frank Vega won a gold medal for the best work in judging Holsteins. High honors were won by the school's teams at Perris Valley Junior Livestock Day. In judging the contestants are required to give oral reasons for their placing of the animals, which is something spectators wish all judges would do.

Thomas Connell, one of the Simi Valley boys who took on a poultry project, made a net profit of $208 last year. He secured an average egg production of more than 50 per cent from his biddies.

The Learning Part

Ninety minutes of each school day are given over to the study of feeding, care, management, marketing, pests and diseases, as they apply to the various agricultural enterprises. Ninety minutes of each school day are used for instruction in farm mechanics, including pipe fitting, blacksmithing, wood working, sheet metal work, farm machine repairing, cement work, tool sharpening, leather work and other related subjects.

The national organization of high school vocational agriculture students, known as the Future Farmers of America, has been organized to develop leadership and promote co-operative feeling among the young men and women of rural communities. The activities of the Simi chapter of this organization have included "noon feeds," cowboys songs, a harmonica band, landscaping the school grounds, clean-up days, Simi Valley Livestock Day, installing a sprinkler system on the school lawn and mountain and desert trips.

There are pleasure in earning and pleasure in learning agriculture for agriculture students.

Lack of appetite in a child is an indication of something wrong. He may be ill, tired, or upset. Or the trouble may be with quantity or quality of the food he is urged to consume. In any case, forced eating is wrong.

Uncle Ab says that most troubles can be met before they have a chance to start.

Some of the practical work that the Simi Valley "ag" boys are getting in their high school. At the left they are mixing cement to make school walks; at the right is the class in shop work where they are taught blacksmithing, farm machine repairing and the like, while in the center is the school lath house for plant propagation.

Efficiency on Farm

SOUTHLAND WALNUT MEN STUDY COSTS

By Harold E. Wahlberg
Farm Adviser, Orange County

THE economic situation of the walnut industry in California is bringing the average walnut grower to the realization that profits cannot be guaranteed by tariff protection. A nominal tariff, of course, provides some help to the grower and is essential to the protection of the industry, but it cannot be used as a means of guaranteeing a satisfactory return to the marginal producer. The grower will find a more logical refuge in a study of the efficiency of his grove, in a study of the factors that affect yield, quality and income per acre. With higher costs of operation, materials and overhead, it is becoming increasingly more important to reduce costs wherever possible and, if necessary, increase costs, if by so doing the yield and quality and net income per acre may be increased.

We read and hear a good deal these days about "efficiency engineers," about large corporations, business houses and factories employing efficiency experts to scrutinize and analyze every operation and department to find the leaks and excessive costs. These experts often revamp one or more departments and sometimes the entire business, to put things on a paying basis. Is this not a logical procedure for the agricultural producer? After all, it doesn't make much difference if it's shoes, or automobiles, or butter, or walnuts. There is some difference, of course, in control of production, but from the standpoint of efficiency, the farmer needs the surveys as much as the manufacturer.

In 1929 several Orange county walnut growers volunteered a cost study in cooperation with the agricultural extension service. They submitted actual cost data each month to the farm adviser's office, and at the end of the year a summary and segregation of all costs were made, together with averages for the high-producing group, the low-producing group and the entire group. These have been given to the co-operators with a detailed accounting of their own individual costs, thus furnishing a basis of cost comparisons that can only be secured through a cost study of this kind.

Similar projects are being conducted in Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Ventura, Santa Barbara and San Joaquin counties. They are proving of considerable value to the co-operator who furnishes the cost data throughout the year, because he receives an accurate, detailed and analytical report on his own business that can guide him in the future orchard operations. The general report can be made similarly valuable to any grower who keeps his cost records sufficiently segregated to make the necessary comparisons.

A review of the general average cost reported in the coastal walnut area, including Orange county and the Whittier district, will be briefly presented here. M. H. Kimball, assistant farm adviser of Los Angeles county, and F. R. Wilcox, extension service economist, assisted materially in summarizing these reports and should be given credit, together with the growers who co-operated in making the study possible.

In order to obtain interest and depreciation charges, inventories were taken of each property. The total investments varied from $1333 to $3061 per acre. The average was $1634. The investment items for each group reported were:

	High	Low	Average
Trees	$ 397.89	$ 401.87	$ 400.13
Improvement	40.11	58.49	50.45
Equipment	63.37	58.29	60.81
Land	1281.59	1000.00	1123.13

The high group (first column) represents the highest-producing orchards in the study; the low group (second column) are the low-yielding orchards.

The values of trees were obtained on a basis of sixty-year life for the average commercial walnut planting. A value of $75 was given the first year, and increased at the rate of $27 per acre per year till the twelfth year; then $18.75 per acre per year till the maximum value of $550 per acre was reached as twenty years of age. Depreciation was then charged from the twentieth year to sixty years at 2½ per cent or $13.75 per acre per year. Land values varied from $1000 to $2500 per acre.

Improvement and equipment were appraised on the basis of their original cost and their present age. Every item of improvements (pipe lines, pumping plant, etc.) and equipment (trays, dehydrators, cultivating tools, etc.) were calculated separately.

It will be seen that the above investment totals are less than going real estate valuations. This is accounted for by the conservative tree and land values in most cases.

The first general group of costs in the farm business is labor. Our walnut growers in the coastal area reported as follows:

	High	Low	Ave.
Pruning	3.58	2.80	3.23
Brush Disposal	.87	1.72	1.34
Cover Crop		1.37	1.37
Fertilizer		.30	.30
Pest Control	6.93	5.93	6.34
Disease Control	1.53	3.95	2.13
Cultivation	11.02	8.95	10.88
Irrigation	9.36	6.82	7.30
Bracing	1.51	1.42	1.56
Miscellaneous	6.00	1.16	4.70
Harvesting	36.53	30.45	39.04
Total	79.61	74.07	78.08

Income is dependent on quality and yield, with walnut growers, as with most other crops. The modern way of curing walnuts is by dehydration. The dehydrator plant depicted here belongs to the Irvine Ranch at Tustin.

Less than 50 per cent of California's walnut crop is sun-dried nowadays. Dehydrators are rapidly displacing this former method of curing.

Harvesting costs were the highest single operation expense, representing 57 per cent of the labor expense. Cultivation ranks second as a labor expense, being nearly 15 per cent of the labor charge. Saving can be made on both harvesting and cultivation expenses in many cases. Pruning costs varied from nothing to $14.40 per acre, indicating a large variation of practice.

Material Costs

	High	Low	Ave.
Water	$19.89	13.19	16.12
Cover Crop	16.39	14.75	15.10
Pest Control	11.22	10.75	11.11
Bracing	1.85		1.85
Harvesting	3.77	3.38	3.66
Total	54.04	31.82	32.89

Water and cover crop constitutes the highest items of material costs during the year.

Cash Overhead Costs

	High	Low	Ave.
General Expense	5.38	4.85	5.07
County Taxes	30.03	22.73	25.92
Insurance and Repairs	3.50	.27	1.95
Total Cash Overhead	38.58	28.56	32.94

General expense is an item of 5 per cent of labor and material costs which will cover small items otherwise not reported.

Computed Overhead Costs

	High	Low	Ave.
Int and dep. on trees	$ 38.32	36.95	36.97
Int. and dep. on improv.	10.48	8.74	8.37
Int. and dep. on equip.	10.81	10.89	10.34
Int. on land	78.99	60.00	67.38
Total computed overhead	$133.59	114.58	123.06

The computed or "hidden" overhead charges are sometimes overlooked by the grower. Other business enterprises, however, make these a tangible charge against business. It is a legitimate charge of some proportion. The average computed overhead is $122.76 per acre or 47 per cent of the total cost of production.

Summary

	High	Low	Ave.
Yield per acre—lbs.	2281	1057	1930
Per cent merchantable nuts	82.8	794.2	79.8
Per cent culls	17.2	20.8	21.2
Labor cost per acre	72.48	65.55	68.58
Material cost per acre	34.64	31.82	32.89
Cash overhead per acre	38.58	28.56	32.94
Int. and dep. per acre	133.59	114.58	122.76
Total cost per acre	279.30	239.91	257.17

The above table shows definitely that yield per acre and quality of nuts are two outstanding factors in determining income.

Big Rice Farm

Wasco Project Carried Out by Los Angeles Group

WASCO.—One of the most extensive enterprises ever attempted in this district is the 900-acre farming project north of here which is owned by the Semi-Tropic Land and Water Company and which will all be in rice this year.

George E. Miller, in charge of operations, employed sixteen men, twenty head of mules and two heavy tractors to do the grading and leveling.

Three years ago this tract was covered with sagebrush; today it is a farm enterprise of large proportions.

A group of Los Angeles men had foresight enough to realize the possibilities of the land for the growing of rice and set out to reclaim it from its desert state. Possibly the oil excitement which prevailed in the Semi-Tropic district at the time was the urge to purchase for speculative purposes, or perchance the popularity of the duck club projects might have entered into the proposition; however, be that as it may, it is purely a rice-growing proposition at the present time.

The task of preparing the land for production was a large one. Heavy tractors and land scrapers leveled the ground. Dikes three feet high were thrown up around the field, which is divided by irregular contour system into checks from two to seven acres in extent. Wells had to be drilled to a depth of 550 to 653 feet. Electricity furnishes the pumping power for these wells, four forty-horsepower and two twenty-horsepower motors being used. The water lift averages fifty feet. The completed ditch system is five miles in length.

Encouraged by the success attained last year on 400 acres the company decided to improve the entire tract, and operations on the remaining 500 acres were started last November. After the harvesting of the 1929 rice crop, 240 acres were sown to barley and other grains. Next winter it is planned to sow about 400 acres to grain.

Marketing Snares

AND HOW TO AVOID FALLING INTO THEM

By F. N. Bigelow
State Department of Agriculture

EVERY time a farm crop matures and is ready for market the farmer, as a rule, is faced with certain difficulties relating to its disposal. Questions arise in his mind as to whether he will sell his produce direct or dispose of it by consignment; where he will sell or where he will consign it, and particularly how to arrange and complete the transaction.

It used to be said a long time ago that if the farmer could grow two blades of grass where only one grew before, his troubles would be over. Today, however, it is a case of successfully marketing the one blade of grass and of realizing the full benefits from its sale. It is not so much a case of growing more farm products as it is of growing better products and successfully marketing those products along business lines. Some of the difficulties in marketing can be avoided if the producer will apply the same business standards to the marketing that he does in all other transactions in which he may engage. Sound business practices can do much toward overcoming many of the difficulties in which the producer finds himself in disposing of his farm products.

Profitable disposition of the crop is dependent largely upon the care used by the producer in determining first, whether he wishes to consign his produce to some commission merchant, or whether he will sell for cash or for credit; next, his care in selecting the party with whom he will deal. It naturally follows that he should use equal care in negotiating and concluding arrangements for the disposal of his crop and in actually carrying out the terms of the arrangement.

All persons or firms who handle farm products on consignment are required under the Commission Merchants Act, adopted in 1927, to be bonded and licensed to carry on consignment operations; likewise, all persons or firms who buy deciduous fruits, grapes and dates on a credit basis for shipment outside of California, are required under the Deciduous Fruit Buyers Act, enacted last year, to be bonded and licensed. Both acts are administered by the division of markets of the State Department of Agriculture.

It is essential that the producer for his own protection, should confine his dealings to these bonded and licensed operators. A list of such licensed dealers can be obtained from the Department of Agriculture. If the producer deals with any person or firm who is not licensed or bonded, he loses one of his greatest sources of protection. All licensed dealers or their representatives are given identification cards, and should be required by the producer to show those cards.

In arranging for the disposal of his crop, it is clearly the responsibility of the producer to make such arrangements as will give him the greatest protection. Arrangements may be made by the means of written contracts or by verbal agreement. Generally speaking, the written contract is preferable, and the verbal contract should be avoided. In any event, the arrangement should be either wholly written or entirely verbal, as it is a fact that where a verbal arrangement is followed by the signing of a written contract, the written contract will govern. Experience with verbal contracts is almost always unsatisfactory, yet the experience of the department shows that untold numbers of verbal agreements are carelessly made each year, resulting frequently in confusion and loss to the producer.

On the other hand, the written contract should express definitely and clearly the entire arrangement. It should protect both parties equally, and should define the full considerations and the things to be done by each party, and each party thereafter should abide by and be governed by the contracts, provisions. For example, where written contracts are made to sell grapes or other fruits, the contracts should provide for all grades, including the handling of the culls. The conclusion of the transaction, disposing of the crop, includes actual delivery in accordance with the arrangement, whether it be one of outright sale where the producer transfers possession, or of consignment where control only is transferred.

In the matter of delivery under a sale, it is the producer's responsibility to deliver what he has arranged to sell; he likewise should be careful to see that the buyer performs his part and makes payment exactly in accordance with the terms of the contract. In all cases except where it is a cash on delivery transaction, the producer should require a receipt for what he has delivered. In either case, consignment of farm products or the sale of deciduous fruits and grapes, wherever the producer fails to receive proper accounting in accordance with his arrangements, complaint may be made to the division of markets, Department of Agriculture at San Francisco or Sacramento.

It is the duty of this department to investigate such complaints as are filed with it under either the Commission Merchants Act or the Deciduous Fruit Buyers Act, and to effect such adjustment as may be proper between the producer and the dealer.

The best insurance for the producer is a working knowledge of the fundamentals underlying the disposal of his products on a businesslike basis.

Trademark's a Pun

He Thinks His Name Fits His Business Well

By Iva M. McFadden

Niland, northerly city of Imperial Valley and famed for its warm winters, shipped its first full car of ripe tomatoes this season. This car was billed to Salt Lake City and each crate carried in it bore a lable in itself distinctive—a cocky looking Rhode Island Red rooster, and a pun on the name of the shipper, Earle Henking. Of course, to any other shipper with a taste for puns, some other feathered gentleman might have been equally attractive as king of the hens, but not to Mr. Henking, for, unknown to those who buy his tomatoes, that particular rooster is advertising another undertaking which goes on 365 days in the year while the packing of tomatoes occupies only a short time, the production of Rhode Island Red eggs for hatching.

The Earle Henking yard at Niland, where tomatoes and eggs are the chief products. The young lady is standing under the shade of an oleander in bloom, and in the background are the roosting houses for the Rhode Island Reds.

Living on one of the most up-to-date ranches near Niland, Mr. Henking has built up an enviable reputation in both tomato shipping and chicken raising. He chose Rhode Island Reds because he likes them and finds a ready demand for their eggs. This year all were sold to a local hatchery at 20 cents a dozen above the market. Four hundred and seventeen fine looking hens have been on the job and they have been particularly fortunate in having an ample run of green and plenty of shade in warm weather. They are given the run of several acres of alfalfa and their laying house and roosts are under a bunch of thrifty tamarisk trees. Grain is bought from local farmers and ground on the ranch so that there is no guess work to the mash which is fed them. This, together with milo and sour milk, make up their rations.

The sleeping quarters of the Henking hens are in lath houses where there is always plenty of ventilation but no drafts. This type of house has worked out very satisfactorily and the owner believes that much of the fine condition of his hens is due to such housing.

Last year 2700 young chicks were brooded and here again Mr. Henking tried out methods of his own. One of the brooder houses which he found very satisfactory cost just $10 to build. It has a sloping roof and it just large enough to accommodate a 300-capacity oil brooder stove. These units all open to the south where they get a maximum of sunshine. Each house has its own run of green feed and here the red youngsters were brought to maturity successfully. While Mr. Henking does not boast that these are necessarily the best type to be had, he does believe that they are the most effective for his climate, with a minimum expenditure.

Everything about the Henking ranch is attractively kept. Electricity is a faithful servant which not only lights and cools the house, but pumps the water as well. A vegetable garden supplies the household and flowers also are given a show, but the place is, after all, chiefly attractive for the green of its trees and lawns and that comfortable, well-kept appearance which attracts the eyes and tells the passer-by that this rancher, choosing but ten acres to care for, is every day on the job of making his ranch work for him.

LEMON growers desiring to be shown the advantages of thinning, or light runing, over heading back, or severe pruning, had the opportunity to do so not long ago, at a field meeting held in Ventura county. This field meeting was for the purpose of showing how early production can be secured. The Del Mar Ranch of the Limonetra Company was the scene of the gathering. At that ranch, as well as at J. N. Thille's place near Santa Paula, pruning plots have been established, to determine the most desirable method of handling lemon trees.

These plots, the records for the third year show, have yielded fifty pounds of fruit per tree where thinned, and forty-three pounds where headed back, quite an advantage for the thinning system as against the more severe pruning. In the fourth year, the thinned trees produced ninety-seven pounds,

Watershed Guarded

BEAUMONT MOVES TO WARD OFF FIRES

By Guy Bogart

ADEQUATE fire protection, for the first time, in the watershed of the Beaumont irrigation district, is being guaranteed by work started this month through the joint efforts of the district, Riverside and San Bernardino counties, State and Federal departments. Aden F. McGee, superintendent of the irrigation district, announces that several lines of protection are being pushed rapidly.

Five high-pressure fire hydrants have been installed in the fire area, with adequate fire hose. Forestry workers are using more water in combating forest fires, finding it the most effective weapon where available.

Two large tanks have been placed by the irrigation district, one in Wallace Canyon and one on top of the hill between Wallace and Edgar canyons. Fire trucks from the two counties were several days in the watershed last week burning and clearing out dangerous underbrush. A firebreak, from 100 to 150 feet in width, is fast being completed, following the county line from Edgar Canyon to the Espy orchard. This will cut off the water area from the fire menace.

"It is only good fortune," said Superintendent McGee, "that no disastrous fires have visited the Beaumont watershed. All agencies are awakening to the immediate need for tightening the lines of defense against denuding the watersheds. And here division lines between counties and matters of overlapping authority must be forgotten in common safety measures. A fire starting in one county fast travels to the other, and Federal and county forest land are menaced equally.

"Beaumont will be afforded her first adequate fire protection in this important region, and the district is co-operating in all ways with the other agencies."

The fire warden of San Bernardino county has been delegated to patrol all of the region in the high fire hazard area, and the district is being placarded.

Riverside county is building a road from Oak Glen to the water canyon, as close to the county line as possible.

Only an act of providence, in the turning of the winds, saved the water canyon area in the last big fire which swept the Smith canyon of Highland Springs resort and other hills of that neighborhood. Additional tanks and high-pressure hydrants may be added from time to time as needed, and with stricter patrol it is hoped to keep the watersheds unmarred.

the headed trees sixty-eight pounds. In the fifth year, the thinned trees had 150 pounds, as against ninety-four for the headed back trees. For one-half of the sixth year, the thinned trees had 243 pounds, the headed trees 108.

On the Thille plot, third year, the thinned trees averaged eighty-nine pounds each as against thirty-five for the headed. For the fourth year, the thinned trees had 126 pounds to eighty-eight for the headed. For the fifth year, the average for the thinned trees was 207 pounds, compared with 157 for the headed. For the sixth year, the thinned trees had 232 pounds as against 192 for the headed. For one-half of the seventh year, the thinned trees showed 210 pounds, the headed-back ones 164 pounds.

These figures tell the story of earlier production through comparatively light pruning.

Sanborn Cox, pruning foreman of the Limoneira Company, showed the growers a slightly different system of pruning, which includes notching to induce the production of fruiting branches on long bare branches, and the lopping or bending of long shoots to induce early fruiting. He also showed the growers a series of pruning plots, each plot having a different system of pruning. The growers seemed particularly interested in one which involved the elimination of so-called sucker wood and pruning entirely to fruit wood. This system is used by the Oxnard Citrus Growers' Association. Mr. Cox said the trees bloomed heavily, but also shed blooms heavily.

mal with good sugar content this year.

The annual Imperial Valley cantaloupe deal is holding the center of the vegetable and melon industry's attention at the present time. The extremely large acreage which was planted is not expected to produce the heavy shipments which were first predicted. Yields are quite uniformly light throughout the valley, and a considerable acreage has been abandoned. During the last week of May, the shipments were averaging around 325 carloads a day.

No Time for Bridge

Her Orange Grove and Chickens Keep Her Busy

By Mrs. H. T. McGarity

"FOR SALE—JUICE ORANGES. Call at Orange Blossom Ranch."

Born with a weakness for reading ads, I saw this one in the local paper, cranked my car and hurried out to find the Orange Blossom Ranch in an effort to quench my North Carolina thirst.

But when we got there all the oranges were gone. Others had read the ad and had "beat me to it," stripping the trees of the golden nuggets. I was told that many orange growers allow the smaller fruit to fall upon the ground where it spoils, but Mrs. Edna F. Rhodes, little Oklahoma woman owner of the Orange Blossom Ranch at Hemet, hit upon the idea of advertising for thirsty folk.

Upon entering the gateway into the lovely grounds, my attention was attracted to the well-kept surroundings. Over the entrance is a handsome sign, bearing the name of the ranch. It's an appropriate name for the place.

Stopping at the rear of the place, my eyes anxiously searching trees minus fruit, I noticed signs posted at different points: "Do not honk your horn." Funny idea, but possibly it would silence the horn-honking pests. Then, suddenly, I understood. In the background, in neat, orderly arrangement, was a row of modern chicken bungalows, all with wire-inclosed corrals, having southern exposures. Strolling about were some fine White Leghorns, a credit to the University type buildings that contained a number of original touches the busy owner has incorporated, a credit to the good blood back of them and to the care bestowed upon them by this little woman who is bravely making a go at ranching.

I finally located Mrs. Rhodes near the open-air hospital of the chicken yard, a space fenced in beneath the shade of an orange tree, containing a few sick or ailing fowls which are treated scientifically.

Dressed in overalls and with a wide brim hat, Mrs. Rhodes presented a pleasing picture, even while apologizing for her appearance. But being busy all day long, oftentimes far into the night, she does not have time to change to more inconvenient styles in dress. She thinks she has found the garden spot of the world, and took time off to give us a few pointers in the game she'd rather play than bridge or golf.

In keeping everything in perfect condition Mrs. Rhodes has found that it takes work and more work. Even this has its compensations, she having found that such work inspires health. She regrets that she hasn't more time to devote to the upkeep of her home, which really does not appear to be suffering from neglect.

"I have been here eight years. I came from Oklahoma first to Redlands, then to Hemet. I have five acres in oranges, and five in walnuts now commencing to bear, they being 3-year-old trees," she explained. "Green feed is grown for the chickens, alfalfa and barley, the old standbys. I market the oranges independently. I keep books on everything. I keep a helper to do the heavy work. I keep to my system which gets good results. I do not advocate shifting about trying this, that or the other. Get a satisfactory method and stick with it.

"The eggs are marketed through the Poultry Producers' Association. I keep three milk goats and after supplying my table, I feed the surplus to the fowls. The units getting goat milk are outdoing the others in egg production. I keep around 1000 hens, but started on a smaller scale, with only the one unit, doing all the building, running the cement and nailing. There is not much around this place I can't do. People sometimes ask me about ideas for poultry raising. I am always glad to help. About the best advice I can give is to find a satisfactory method and stick to it."

Big Cow Best

A study of the Bureau of Dairy Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, of nearly 220,000 yearly records of cows in dairy herd improvement associations showed that within the breed the heavier cows generally excelled the lighter cows of the same age in production and income over cost of feed. The heavier cows ate more in dollars' worth of feed, but they more than made up for it in production.

Slings lift loads of California products from the docks and drop them through the hatches. Vessels with refrigeration arrangements have greatly increased the scope of shipments from the Port of Los Angeles in the past two years. The editorial, "Making Trade Friends," on page 2, this issue, would have little point were it not for technical strides the shipping interests have made.

And Now We're Library-Minded

By Marguerite Drennen

AMERICA is looking upward. This is true figuratively as well as literally, for while the world has become air-minded, thrilling to the beauty and drama of aviation progress, the tremendous growth in public library service and patronage marks us as a people who have also become library-minded. What aviation is doing for specific advancement public libraries are accomplishing for general civilization and culture.

The home, county, State, nation—every man, woman and child—is recognizing today, as never before, the value of library service. It is the most democratic and the most useful institution in the land. It is an invaluable instrument in building up a nation through improved communities. It is not limited to any race, creed, school, party or station, it is intended for all. Neither age nor sex are excluded, and its scope is as wide as the printed word. People are demanding more and more of the good things of life—books, music, better homes, and conditions of living

That the appreciation of library service exists all over the country can be shown in actual figures. New York county embracing New York City, Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond boroughs, with a population of more than 6,000,000, has a public library circulation of 20,000,000 of books. In Cook county, including Chicago, more than 14,000,000 of books have been drawn by 3,000,000 of borrowers. In Los Angeles county, with a population of nearly 2,500,000, about 13,250,000 of books are in circulation. These figures were found for 1928 and record an amazing development in public libraries—with the West rating high.

In the general scheme of public service and activity, the Los Angeles County Free Library sets a pace which may well cause all others to extend themselves. Our local institution may not boast of a Rosetta Stone nor lay claim to such rare book editions as are found treasured in the famous archives of the Far East, the British Museum or our own Congressional Library, but in point of exceptional service—the sort of service that builds up a community, stimulates education and provides entertainment—a recent checking of international statistics places this library at the top of county libraries of the world.

Los Angeles is a book-minded community and all others must look to their laurels. The fame of California's phenomenal development of the county library system has been heralded afar and it is most significant that England should recently have borrowed the State librarian of California to make a survey for a like system in South Africa. For this popular town and country service by which books are made easily acces-

Such Wondrous Colors In Novelty Petunias

Beginning at once and lasting into the winter, Petunias, among the showiest garden subjects, will make summer displays of brilliant beauty. Especially is this true of the following magnificent H. & S. free-flowering single types, which should be planted now.

These important, colorful annuals, thriving in sun or partial shade, are superb for solid beds, parkway or balcony planting, or wherever sheets of uninterrupted color are desired. They figure charmingly in any landscape and are admirably adapted for any style homes, particularly the Spanish. Flowers are of good size and splendid for cutting; keep well, and make exquisite table decorations in low bowls.

SIERRA VIOLET—An indescribably rich shade of deep, blackish-violet in a glorious single flower of such marvelous texture that it has the bright sheen of the finest velvet. No blossom could have a more wonderful color than this striking novelty. Some have fringed edge and others plain.

ROMANY LASS—Handsomely-frimbriated, single, and of a rare and distinctive hue—glowing pigeon-blood ruby on a wide margin, with darker throat pencilled white, and soft-blue stamens. Novel and decidedly lovely and warmly showy in any location.

ADMIRATION—Single flower of great attractiveness in clearly-defined combinations of pure white and deepest violet-blue—the more bizarre and alluring because scarcely any two are marked alike. Some fringed, others straight-edged.

STRONG PLANTS OF THE ABOVE FROM 3-INCH POTS FOR IMMEDIATE BLOOMING, PER DOZEN, $1.50

ROSY MORN—The mass effect of this smaller-flowered single type is the radiant beauty of a California dawn, its myriad blooms making a spectacle of color rosy as the eastern sky just before the sun tips the horizon.

PERFECT PLANTS OF ROSY MORN, 2-INCH POTS, PER DOZEN, $1.00

(For Petunia plants to be mailed, please add 15 cents per dozen postage)

Keep your lawns, trees, shrubs and flowering plants vigorous, green and abloom with VIGORO, the Perfect Plant Food. Clean, odorless, economical and effective. We sell in any quantity.

RASPBERRY SHORT CAKE

2 cups Globe "A1" Flour	Sugar
½ teaspoon salt	½ cup shortening
3 teaspoons baking powder	½ cup sugar
	1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla	1 cup milk
2 boxes raspberries	1 cup whipping cream

SIFT the flour, measure, add salt and baking powder and sift twice. Cream the sugar with the shortening, add the unbeaten egg, stir and beat well. Now stir in about one third of the flour mixture, then about a third of the milk to which the vanilla has been added, repeat until all flour and milk have been added, beat the batter smooth, pour into two greased layer cake pans and bake in a moderate oven 25 to 30 minutes, remove from pans and cool. Crush one and a half boxes of the berries and sweeten to taste, then spread between the layers of cake and over the top. Cover with whipped cream, sweetened and flavored to taste, and dot with remaining berries.

---and the NAME, PLEASE?

By Alma Whitaker

NAMES, names, names! Oh, what is the secret of these arrogant mentalities that brag that they never forget a name?

And just supposing I could remember the names of all the thousands of people I met in my daily rounds . . . could there possibly be room for anything else in my poor, inadequate little cranium?

Yet I go through life flummoxed and apologetic . . . "Oh, please forgive me, but would you mind reminding me of your name?" has become a pitiful refrain with me. How I adore those people who approach one with "I'm Mrs. Smith. I met you at so-and-so . . ." Admirable, considerate woman!

Mindful of my gratitude to such peopeople, I adopted the system myself at a recent club convention. Only to hear someone behind me remark, "Did you ever hear such ego? Listen to her. 'I'm Alma Whitaker!' Ugh!" Yet never was I less egotistical than on that day.

Think what embarrassment I could save Samuel Goldwyn, for instance, if I but adopted this method with him. Instead, through the years, the dear man has addressed me effusively, praised my work, complimented me on my appearance and ended up by calling me Grace Kingsley. Last year I was guest of honor at the Wasps . . . the women publicity agents, who, above all things, wish to keep on good terms with newspaper people. I was received with affectionate enthusiasm, flattered, and presently introduced as "That dear Miss Marquette from the Examiner." And not long after that, as a guest of a poetry section of a woman's club, I was fulsomely introduced as "That very charming and clever Grace Frye."

So I know all about the stabs that faulty memories for names can entail. I have ever adored the hotel clerk at the Virginia, who after several years absence, greets me by both my professional and private names, asks after my children by name, and generally treats me as though I had never been out of his consciousness for a minute. And I'll go back time and again to a store where the saleswoman remembers my name, and never fail to overtip a waiter who so flatters me.

So I am aware how immeasurably I could enhance my popularity if I could but keep all these names properly tabulated in my mind. Instead, I stand dumb before long-time acquaintances, flounder wretchedly, stoop to every deceitful device to discover their names without divulging my crime . . . and usually end up by bungling it hideously . . . with the party completely ruined for me for the rest of the evening.

I have been guilty of calling Warner Oland, Noah Beery and vice versa, so that neither gentleman holds a very high opinion of my intelligence . . . so that I cannot even pull that old bromide about "I may forget a name but I never forget a face." Anyway, a face without a name is quite useless for pleasant social intercourse.

Still I have a most aggravating memory for small unimportant detail. "What is the name of the president of such and such a club?" someone will ask me.

"Oh, yes," I remarked blithely, "Her husband is vice-president of a bank. She has some jolly dogs and a parrot. She quotes Swinburne. She wears metal lace hats and a wee bit too much rouge. Plumpish, weighs about 160 I should say. Lives out there beyond Glendale . . . has a daughter studying singing . . ." "Yes, that's the one. What's her name?" says my inquirer.

And when I can't tell him, he wonders just how I manage to keep my job. Gosh, what a dumb-bell the woman is!

Yet here I am living in a world where communication is so easy that we meet more people than ever before. One day last week I attended three big organization events in one day, and actually met and talked with several hundred people individually. And felt terribly clever when I was able to remember about 2 per cent of their names . . .

That's just it. There is a sense of ecstatic triumph about remembering a name. Think of the ecstasy that could be mine, if like Tom Ingersoll of the Realty Board I could proudly boast that I never forgot a name!

I resort to all sorts of expedients to try to achieve this triumph. I recall the memory-trainers' admonitions which assure us all will be well if we associate the individual with something else. So instead of being a nice intelligent conversationalist at these big functions, I am rummaging around in my mind for something to tack their names on to. "Mrs. Fitzgerald . . . ah, she has fits. No, no, that won't do. There's a 'z' in it. Was there ever a famous Fitzgerald? . . . don't believe there was . . ." and so on, and I am so dreadfully likely to call her Mrs. Fitzsimmons if I risk calling her anything next time we meet. But for that matter I have probably lost her friendship long before that for being so inattentive worrying about remembering her name while she was talking.

And so I'm sorry, but I can't quite seem to remember your name . . ." I floundered in one case recently.

"Of course you can't. You're not interested in me. We can always remember the names of people we are intrested in," gibed the lady. "Well, I'll remember it this time," I say brightly, with the most flattering smile I can conjure. So she tells me her name is Jones, just plain Jones. I go around the room murmuring it to myself softly. Just a nice ordinary common name that anyone can remember . . . and half an hour later I'm triumphantly calling her Mrs. Brown and receiving a look of bitter scorn. That time it was so obvious I was just being catty. Phew!

Nothing, I vow, puts one at such a hideous disadvantage as not remembering names. But the lady fled when she said we always remembered them if we were properly interested. I can remember every tiniest thing about a person, the conditions under which I met them, what we talked about, how she was dressed, whether she's fond of her husband . . . everything, everything but the name, the dreadful harassing, elusive name.

Nor would I dare make this open confession except that 95 per cent of the rest of us are in the same boat. Some of 'em are more clever at disguising their frailty than others, but it's a common sorrow. That convention idea by which all delegates wear their name clearly printed on a little tab pinned on their bosoms has large, tall merits . . . but they only do that when delegates come from far-away places. All our local conventions feel that any such helpful scheme is quite unnecessary . . . even I mean when each day sees hundreds of affronted souls bitterly telling the family in the evening how that odious so-and-so completely forgot one's name . . . after all these years, too, and one really did think they had been friends . . . oh, oh, oh.

The thing is getting worse and worse. Women in particular are often apt to have at least two names. If they change their husbands often it is most exacting. So many of 'em have a professional name as well, which would be fine if they hadn't ideas about being addressed strictly by their spouse's name on certain social occasions. Just take Pauline Frederick for instance. For a while she was Mrs. Frank Andrews, then Mrs. Willard Mack, and now Mrs. Hugh Leighton. While husbands are new, wives of famous professional standing frequently wish to pay hubby the compliment of insisting upon mutual friends addressing them by the latest marital cognomen. After a while it doesn't matter so much. But for the present Pauline won't like you if you don't remember to introduce her as Mrs. Leighton at private parties.

Preference

One time I thought that I must have rare jewels
To please my fancy, each of perfect hue,
But now, since I have wiser grown, the blue
Of a wood-violet more my fancy rules.
It may be true that life our ardor cools,
The sweet today is but the morrow's rue,
So I prefer the sparkle of the dew,
The changing lights in deep and quiet pools.

What is more beautiful than the pale tone
Of wild rose petals swaying in the wind?
Or the deep red that flecks the appleblooms?
The pearls whose splendor may have graced a throne,
The emeralds strung with others of their kind,
Cannot enthrall as do the flower-perfumes.

that they are accidental accidents. But as for me, I have my doubts!

In many States there is open access to the children in the public schools, with their pet horse pus. In other States the work must be done more surreptitiously, through the agencies of school boards, public institutions, and so forth.

Under the guise of public safety, police powers are invoked. Factories are surrounded. Men are compelled to have the horse-pus needle jabbed into them in spite of their objections, on the threat of "no pus—no job!"

The claims of the "anti's" are not wild fantasies—that many of these "epidemics" have been subsidized, prepared for and systematically propagandized.

Whatever the facts may be, at least let us have the truth.

Even in the field of serums and vaccines I certainly am not opposed to legitimate advertising. If they want to sell their vaccines and serums, let it be done openly and above board instead of surreptitiously and through the instrumentality of the political end of the medical profession!

These are frank facts—openly stated!

Prominent Facial Veins

Dear Dr. Lovell:

I am greatly worried over the condition my face is getting in. It seems to be getting all spotted with little bright red veins, especially on the tip of my nose and cheeks. It has gotten quite bad of late and for the last week it feels all "squimmy" all the time, and more seems to be breaking out. I don't know what is causing it or how to prevent it.

Also, is there any way of making them disappear? I would be most grateful for your help and advice. A couple of years ago when I first noticed them coming, I spoke to our family doctor about it and he only laughed at me, but since then it has gotten much worse. They are disfiguring—these red veins.

I am 42 years old and have been in the habit of drinking a good deal of coffee. Would that have anything to do with it?

Please help me if possible. Is there anything to make them disappear for good?

Thanking you kindly, I remain,

A READER.

Have you ever noticed the facial characteristics assumed by persons who eat too much? There is an expression that comes over one's features indicating surfeiture.

With some, the eye becomes dulled, and a sort of film develops. Others become exceedingly red-faced.

A modification of this appearance is also shown by an obtrusion of the veins and especial prominence of the small arteries.

Strictly speaking, that which gives the delightful flush to the cheek and that which denotes the "boozer's" coloration are one and the same thing. Both are nothing more than the congestion of blood in the facial areas and the corresponding arterial distention.

In the above communication, the writer states that she is a drinker of considerable quantities of coffee. This, of itself, might be sufficient to induce the symptoms of arterial congestion. But when coffee is merely added to the large quantity of other hot foods, then it becomes the modus operandi by means of which facial distention is achieved.

Assuming that there is no other disease responsible for it—something I cannot tell for I have not made a personal examination—the correction of this condition implies a modification of diet practice. I have repeatedly reiterated the rule that we should not consume hot foods. At most, whatever foods are cooked should be warm.

Time and time again, however, we put into the mouth food which would be unbearably hot to the touch, yet by sipping and consuming it in small doses, we can get away with it.

The mucous membrane of the mouth is in direct communication with the arteries of the face. Thus, there is the well-known rule that hot foods bring color to the face.

In addition, I would recommend cold water or even ice massages for the correction of this condition, provided, of course, the high blood pressure condition does not exist.

Ice rubs will make the veins and distended arteries considerably smaller, while at the same time they will act as a splendid tonic to the facial structures.

Nature's Own Remedy Overcomes Acidity

According to the most eminent medical authorities, such disorders as catarrhal inflammation, rheumatism, tonsilitis, gastritis, colitis, ulcerations, etc., are caused directly by an acid condition of the blood, and can be prevented and relieved by changing the acid condition to an alkaline condition.

KOLOTOX is the ideal, natural medium with which to correct those many disorders arising from acidosis. KOLOTOX is derived from the water of a hot mineral spring up in the High Sierras of California—nothing has been added to or nothing taken away except the water contents. Thus KOLOTOX brings to you, in convenient dry form, all the curative properties of this splendid water. KOLOTOX is unique. KOLOTOX is better because it is nature's own preparation—a preparation that no chemist can duplicate. KOLOTOX continues to give results where laboratory concoctions have failed. Hundreds of people now enjoying radiant health can testify to the truly marvelous results to be obtained by the use of KOLOTOX. You, too, can have better health. Send $2.00 for a large 4-oz. package, sufficient for a month's treatment. Sold on a money-back guarantee. Address all orders and enquiries to Kolo Springs Products Co., Orange, Calif.

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc.?

Ready-made Arch Supports are an unsatisfactory makeshift because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and deranged ligaments complicate matters still further. We make supports from carefully prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored to as normal a shape as possible. We have an extensive experience in the correction of flat-foot, broken down arches and other deformities of the foot, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.

It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often restore daintiness of appearance to feet badly deformed and unsightly.

Seen from the Green Verdugo Hills

John Steven McGroarty

At the regular monthly meeting of the Millionaires Club of Contentment and Happiness held on the stone fence in the green Verdugo Hills at the time of the new moon, a proposition received from Julius V. Madsen was approved and indorsed.

Our Plays Among the Trees at Home

Mr. Madsen is the dramatic director of the Mission Play at San Gabriel and his proposition to the Millionaires Club is that the four other plays written by the Conductor of this poor blundering page, exclusive of the Mission Play, which is always given at San Gabriel and nowhere else—that these four other plays, namely, "El Dorado," "La Golondrina," "Osceola" and "Babylon," be staged this summer among the live oak trees that make cool and green the place where our little high house in the hills stands.

Conductor, said the members of the Millionaires' Club of Contentment and Happiness to us, Conductor, they said, folks in the green Verdugo Hills spend a lot of their time directing people who are your friends the way to your house. Now, they said, here is an opportunity to have them all come out on pleasant summer evenings and we will put up big signs on the road so that they can't miss the way. We will keep open house for them, they said, and you can do the same. We can give each of them a glass of goat's milk and a cookie and maybe a cup of tea. They can bring their lunch suppers with them and dine in the cool mountain air among the trees. Then they can see the plays, get away, and be home in plenty of time to get a good night's sleep.

Well, we think ourself, it is a fine idea. We are eager to put our new play, "El Dorado," on the boards. And what better place to do it than among the live oak trees in our green Verdugo Hills? This new play that is to complete the trilogy of our California dramas—the third of the trilogy, the Mission Play being the first and "La Golondrina" the second.

And where better may we salute the old Greek masters of the Drama—Sophocles and all the rest—in whose great footsteps we have humbly tried to walk, than here in the living groves that are like the groves of Hellas were when the masters walked in the golden age of Greece?

And so it will come to pass that we shall have our plays under the home rafters of our far-flung Synagogue and under the great stars that diadem the peaks of the stately mountains.

Conductor, said a man of the Synagogue to us lately, I read with much interest the things you had to say in the Synagogue there awhile back about the necessity of reforestation.

One by One They Have Been Slain

But, the man said, you did not tell half the story. And as he said this he took some sort of official document from his pocket and read to us the following statement:

"Our forests are playing out. The wood needs of a rapidly developing nation have exhausted America's forest regions one by one. First fell the white pine of New England, followed by the great hard wood and soft wood forests of Pennsylvania and New York.

"For more than a quarter of a century now, the magnificent pineries of the South have been America's mainstay in timber production,—yet before our insatiable demand for wood and more wood, even these have not proved inexhaustible. The exhaustion of the virgin timber of the South is in sight. Carloads of lumber from the Pacific Northwest attest that again the nation is turning to another—and this time the last—timber region for its supply."

Of course, we knew all this before, but the fact did not make the statements that were read to us the less impressive.

The tragic truth is that our America, which was once the land of the most magnificent forests in all the world, has not today one real forest to its name.

For this slaughter of the trees we are already paying a bitter price. The whole country is at the mercy, every now and then, of disastrous floods from which the forests would have saved us.

To be sure, we had to make room for the cities. But we could have done all that and still saved the forests. And the forests would have saved the cities. The day is fast approaching when lumber can no longer be used for building.

Often do we wish that America were today as it was a hundred years ago with its great forests and leaping rivers. When men were sane, contented and happy. When there was no jazz and these endless noises of the towns that play havoc with human nerves and the souls of men.

In a place that goes by the name of South Gate somewhere under a spreading rafter of our far-flung Synagogue, there is a friend of ours whose name is Van Winkle. We think maybe he is an old fellow, but we don't know. We have never met him, much as we would like to do so. And if it be that he is an old fellow, it makes no difference. Because his heart is young. And a man is never old so long as his heart stays young.

He Is More Wide Awake Than Rip

He sends us lots of jolly jingles in rhyme, some of them addressed to us personally and written in our honor. And danged if we wouldn't print some of them, too, if it were not that folks in the Synagogue would think us full of ego.

It may very well be that our friend is a descendant, lineally or collaterally, of the famous Rip Van Winkle. Anyway, the name is the same.

Yet, even though it might be that he is descended from Rip's folks he is certainly not like Rip in one way at least. Which is to say that he could no more lie down and sleep twenty years than go out and hang himself.

There just awhile back what did he do but crank up an old Henry that he has and, stowing the missus in the back seat so that he could have someone to do the driving good, he started out on the highroad to make a day of it, not giving a whoop for anything or anybody. They took in the wild flowers on the desert, the movie studios in Hollywood and lots of other things on the way. They had a great time, and he wrote a letter to us about it, with a jingle of rhymes all through the letter, saying to us:

"Does the Conductor of the Synagogue ever get that away, so that he can throw the dog-gone high-brow stuff he is called upon to put across—big meetings of big people? Then forget the high-falutin' writing that he must do—can he forget and break every danged old rule of the conventions? What is it all worth—to live a stiff old life and always be toting the load we think we must tote?"

Well, here is a man after our own heart—a born gypsy and a philosopher of the first rank in the bargain.

And, since he has been sitting in the Synagogue all these years, he ought to know that every so often we do the same things that he does. We just light out on a high road and leave all our cares and troubles tied behind us in a bag. We just strike out, not caring or giving a whoop where we wind up. And these are the days that we count our happy days.

And, since we have mentioned Rip Van Winkle himself, there has been many a time when we have been so dog tired, so weary and discouraged, that we wish we could lie down as Rip did and not wake up for twenty years.

Well, sir, we had no idea that the little piece about "getting your goat," which was printed in this poor blundering page there awhile back, would attract so much attention. We have heard about it since from pretty near every one of the four corners of the earth. It seems that this serene and placid animal, the goat, is known wherever civilization exists. And it also appears that the goat is far from lacking friends.

More Light Thrown on a Slang Phrase

Of course, too, the goat has its enemies. Not long ago we saw an irate woman pelting a goat with sticks and stones because the little browsy creature had strayed into her back yard and was eating up the day's washing from the clothesline.

It was doubtless a hungry goat not appreciated by its owner, and ill-fed at home.

Well, anyway, one of the champions of the goat relates the incident of a man in Buffalo, N. Y., who made a fortune in the manufacture of glucose and who then established a stable of race horses as a hobby and perhaps in response to an impulse to enjoy himself at what has been known at "the sport of kings."

The man says that in this racing stable was a prize running mare named Bell Hamilton, and that, like some movie stars, she was temperamental, and that unless things went to suit her she would not compete in the races. She had brain-storms and was at times extremely nervous.

One day while out in a pasture, Bell Hamilton took a great liking to a goat that was there, and the two animals became inseparable friends. As long as the goat was with Bell she was as docile as a lamb and as happy as a lark, and if the goat was placed longside of the race track when Bell was running she won so easily that all the other horses in the race looked as though they had been tied at the post, as the saying is.

The man who was telling us all this said that during the racing season the goat accompanied Bell Hamilton in her palace car from one town to another. But, some stupid man one day took the goat away. And in the next race into which she was put Bell Hamilton actually laid down on the race track and wouldn't lift a hoof. And when someone asked what was the matter with the mare, the answer was "Somebody's got her goat."

And so it seems that the origin of the famous saying is now discovered.

STAR FIRE

'Twas good, my friend, that once we met
Out of the night,
And strange that your kind words should set
My feet toward the light.

When out of the wrack, the tumult and the din
Your white words touched me like a quickening rod,
The utter dark was broken through, the morning filtered in.
I walked as zealots do when first they sing of God.

I have not seen you these long years,
Yet would not let you go.
And still the star you lit appears,
And, though you do not know,
I caught immortal fire from your hand—
A little word of help to groping youth,
A smile, a flame, a far-flung brand
So strong with hope, and warm with truth.

So on the hills of memory lilies
The light, and in the skies.
And I have learned its meaning now
Since I have passed it on the rise and glow,
Like dawn, in another's eyes.

Epstein, Freud and Psychoanalysis

"WHY are you so deeply interested in Prof. Sigmund Freud's articles, which have been running in the Los Angeles Times?" Dr. Paul Sophus Epstein, head of the theoretical physics department of the California Institute of Technology, was asked. His opinion is worth knowing, for he is regarded in Moscow, Munich and Zurich just as highly as in this country. He served on the faculties of the great universities in those cities before coming here and for years Freudian psychoanalysis has been his hobby.

"I have long been and still am devoting a great deal of my time to psychology. Perhaps you know that the psychoanalytical method was developed by Freud for medical purposes: the treatment of certain kinds of psychic ailments. However, the method itself and the comprehensive information obtained by it regarding the workings of our mental life have a wide general interest. There is nothing strange in a scientist studying these things, because the methods by which this mass of information has been built up are just as scientific as the methods used in physics. We call this body of information the 'psychoanalytical theory,' but it is more than a theory; actually every law embodied in the 'theory' rests on sound empirical foundations. It is, therefore, the generalized result obtained from a large number of concurrent observations.

"It would take a book to explain the subject fully. Briefly and roughly speaking, psychoananlysis deals with the subconscious activity of our psyche, or mind, and the influence which subconscious desires, instincts, thoughts and so forth have on our conscious mental life."

"Is there really such a thing as an unconscious thought? If it can be called a 'thought,' aren't we aware of it?"

"Perhaps I can make that plain," he answered. "Even before Freud, certain phenomena were known to prove conclusively that there exists in us all an unconscious mentality. Take the so-called 'post-hypnotic experiment.' In describing this experiment, I shall refer to the experience of a highly respected citizen of Pasadna, Mr. F. B. S. As a Harvard undergraduate, he studied under the celebrated William James. In the presence of a large number of students, Prof. James put him into a hypnotic trance, and while he was in that unconscious condition said to him: 'Call on me at my home tomorrow at three o'clock.' Mr. S. awoke from his trance without the slightest knowledge of what had happened.

"The next afternoon, however, he felt an irresistible urge to go out to the suburb where Prof. James lived to call on him. Vainly he told himself that it was improper for an undergraduate to presume upon the time of the world-famous professor, but the urge led him on. 'Professor,' the embarrassed young man stuttered, when William James himself opened the door, "I want to see you, I don't know why.' 'I know why,' the professor replied. 'I told you to come.' "

Plainly the point of the story was to show that unconscious urges actually influence behavior. The young man did not know how the desire to visit the professor had been implanted in his mind, but it was there and he could not resist it.

Asked whether unconscious urges likewise affect the behavior of persons who have not been hypnotized: "Apparently so," Dr. Epstein replied, "and particularly so in the case of our suppressed desires. Of course we all suppress desires, or should suppress them, if they conflict with our moral convictions. For example, a man who has been enraged by another man may, in a moment of madness, think: 'I wish he were dead!' Later on, horrified by the thought, he suppresses it, and thereby relegates it into the subconscious. Such subconscious thoughts and desires are called 'complexes,' and these complexes, lurking in the shadow of the subconscious mind, may at any time be aroused and influence our behavior. In time they may produce a psychic disease, then a person responds to urges which are literally beyond his control. Though he knows he is yielding to them, he cannot help yielding, for they are stronger than his will.

"As in the case of S, these urges derive their power from their unconsciousness. If William James had given his command while S was in a conscious state, the young man might have complied or not, according to the dictates of his own judgment. And if S had been told, before calling upon Prof. James, what had happened during his trance, the post-hypnotic urge would have disappeared or weakened. By exploring the unconscious regions of a sick mind, therefore, it is plainly possible to make a patient aware of his complexes, then he can reason them away, or overcome them. Once a man becomes conscious of his complexes, he can cure his mental maladies and behave as a human being should."

The Cost of Being Born

PHYSICIANS charged for bringing 376 Berkeley babies into the world from $5 to $645 per case, the average charge being $92.12. To this cost, nurses, hospitals, drug stores and other necessary outlays added an average of $121.63; so the total average cost per child was $213.75. The investigation was conducted by the Institute of Child Welfare at the University of California. One interesting inference from the report is the way the doctors jumped their charges—in most cases $25 at a time. Ninety-six cases paid $50; sixty-nine paid $75; fifty-two paid $100; twenty-nine paid $125; thirty-seven paid $150; a few paid $200; from then on the jumps were larger: from $50 up each time. On the whole, however, the cost of being born is less than most people suppose. And, due to the scientific methods of obstetricians, the hazards of the ordeal have been surprisingly reduced.

Silberstein Blames Hubble

DR. LUDWIK SILBERSTEIN, European astronomer, who knows his calculus tensors and how to express abstract conceptions in startlingly simple English, believes so passionately in De Sitter's pseudo-spherical, or isotropic, universe that Einstein's cylindrical universe looks to him like a "logroller." But here is Hubble finding facts through Mount Wilson's 100-inch telescope which tend to support Einstein's conception of things. So in his wonderfully-worded book, which astronomers everywhere are reading, Dr. Silberstein undertakes to determine the "curvature radius of space-time," and blames Dr. Hubble because he cannot make his mathematical calculations accord with Hubble's observations.

Magnifying 5000 Diameters

A NEW kind of microscope, so powerful that it makes a cell of protoplasm one three-thousandths of an inch in diameter look like a huge creature has been invented by Dr. Francis Lucas, of the Bell Telephone Laboratories. Microscopists may now be able to see what goes on inside of biological cells.

California Genius

LAST year 3087 patents were granted to citizens of California—a greater number, in proportion to population, than were granted to inventors in any other State. As these 3087 California patentees have learned, it takes time to obtain a patent nowadays. Not only is the Patent Office behind time, it is accused of being behind the times. Popular Science Monthly recently charged it with being a "national disgrace."

Cell Temperatures

HEALTHY human blood has a temperature of about 98.4 degrees above zero Fahrenheit, but how about the temperature inside the billions of cells composing a human body? Dr. D. M. Whitaker, of Stanford University, has devised a thermometer which takes cell temperatures. It is a tiny thermocouple, with wires less than one twenty-five-thousandths of an inch in diameter.

Science Saves the Culls

The Interrupted Feast

TWO thousand years ago a hungry party of Ecuadorean hunters were barbecuing the carcass of a mastodon when a landslide buried the men, mastodon, weapons, dishes and all. This story is told by a Princeton paleontologist, Dr. William B. Scott, who found the excavated remains remarkably intact. The dishes, he says, were of Mayan make, which means a lot to anthropologists.

The Typhoid Germ Under Control

TEN years ago from six to twenty Americans out of every 100,000 were killed by the typhoid germ. Last year, however, the death rate from typhoid in Los Angeles dropped as low as 1.1 persons in every 100,000 of its population. In all American cities, the typhoid death rate has decreased much more rapidly than populations have increased, and investigators believe that within the next ten years this deadly germ, so far as this country is concerned, will be mostly a memory.

Recent Developments in Science

DR. MILLIKAN disagrees with those who hold that the universe is disintegrating; he has reasons for thinking re-creation is forever going on.

Astronomer R. J. Trumpler of Lick Observatory has remeasured the universe, finding it disk-shaped—100 quadrillion miles in diameter, and eighteen quadrillion miles thick.

The Director of Flagstaff Observatory says the new (ninth) planet is 41.35 times as far from the sun as the distance between the sun and earth.

In vitamin G, definitely detected but not yet isolated, may lie the secret of premature old age, and possibly the secret process, we are told, whereby plants manufacture cellulose—which is another name for cotton, lumber, paper and all such products.

The American Research Foundation has found that most babies die, not because they swallow pins, tacks, beads and other things, but because they swallow the things mothers put into their mouths.

Two New Sky Objects

A NEW heavenly body which astronomers have tagged 1930D, has turned tail to the earth and is rapidly bounding away. A still newer object, discovered by the Dominion Observatory, Canada, has been proclaimed as another planet. Like "Planet X," this "Planet Y" will have to pass an entrance examination at the Mount Wilson and Lick observatories before obtaining recognition as a major member of the sun's family. Whatever it may be, its presence beyond Neptune adds weight to the theory advanced by Dr. Seth B. Nicholson that a new group of asteroids, similar to the multitudinous group between Mars and Jupiter, may be found spinning on the rim of the sun's gravitational field. An asteroid is supposedly a thrown-off part of some big planet which never rounded out into a full-fledged planet itself.

Messenger Boys Rate High

SITTING at an information desk in a hospital, Margaret McCurdy, research worker of the University of Southern California, had to repeat room numbers several times to persons who called on patients. Directions likewise had to be repeated. Not so with messenger boys. "They think," Miss McCurdy says. "I never had to tell them that the '200' numbers were on the second floor, and the '300' numbers on the third floor. Nor do they have to write numbers down."

Perhaps visitors to hospitals are more dazed than dumb.

Liquid Gas in Demand

SIXTY California towns have applied to the State Railroad Commission for liquefied natural gas service, according to Claude C. Brown, administrator for the commission. These towns have heretofore been without natural gas. The process of liquefying and delivering the gas (in tanks) was recently described on this page.

CARE OF THE BODY

usually directed toward increasing circulation.

Sometimes these measures meet with success. The best of them are exercise, very frequent massage, exposure to sunshine, application of heat, alternate hot and cold water packs and the maintenance of good drainage—that is holding the limbs in such position that the blood flows freely.

Sometimes, however, all these measures fail: then the trouble lies in the nervous system alone. There may be pressure against the nerves in the vertebral column.

Sometimes we may have a hardening of the arteries of the brain in those centers whose nerves lead to the part affected. Then, of course, the trouble is more remote and more difficult to treat, and in some cases, even incurable.

Numbness, tingling sensation, constant pain and other miscellaneous symptoms of this type in the arms, legs, hands and facial extremities are very common as a sequence to acute forms of disease.

Sometimes the debility following influenza is responsible for the depletion both of the nervous system and the blood circulation and causes symptoms of this sort. Then of course the main thing to be understood is the correction of the previous disease.

I do not have any leaflets on this subject but I intend writing one as soon as possible. I shall announce its appearance in this department.

Goitre and the Menopause

Santa Barbara, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

Last summer, through X-ray, I was told that I had exophthalmic goiter and should have an operation for same. However, I felt no distress and paid little attention to it. The last two months I was suddenly troubled with excessive gas on stomach and in bowels. The stomach gas was very severe and I avoided gas-forming foods.

This condition caused my entire chest to ache and I found it hard to find a comfortable position to sleep in at night. My heart would pound at times and I laid it to the gas. The past three weeks the gas is less but I fear my goiter is troubling me in earnest.

I have a full feeling in the throat, dull, sharp pains in the top of my head and my heart is rapid whenever I move fast or exert myself. Going upstairs is hard on me. Do you believe that my condition can be overcome, as I do not want an operation.

I am 50 years old and my menstruation is still regular. Kindly let me hear from you. I have been somewhat overweight but am overcoming this also.

Thanking you for your expected advice, I am Sincerely yours,

A READER.

If I were to take an isolated symptom, such as abdominal pain, I could relegate this one sign of disease to at least 500 different ailments.

Unfortunately, there is great confusion in symptomology. We have an evidence of it in the above communication. Chest pressure, gas pains, heart rapidity, general debility, these may be found in any one of a score of ailments.

But presuming we take the facts—meager as they are—in this communication and attempt to get a fair analysis. Here is the case of a woman undergoing an epochal transformation of her body.

The change of life period implies, with the average woman, a series of symptoms many of which are incorporated in her letter. In this case, her pounding and gastro-intestinal symptoms, exceedingly common and accepted as part of the syndrone of this phase of life, are neither normal nor necessary for her change.

The complications of goiter are mentioned. The patient has been told that she ought to have an operation. True enough, goiter is usually accompanied by her symptoms. Generally, we have palpitation, and in exophthalmic goiter, we also have protrusion of the eyeballs.

The question arises: Should she have this operation? Let us weigh pros and cons.

It is a well-known fact of physiology that with the onset of the menopause we find a modified form of renewed activity of the glandular system. In the middle forties, we see it psychologically, when women become kittenish, take on young lovers and assume the coy aspects of twenty.

Physiologically, it can be interpreted as renewed activity—a sort of last gasp of the ductless glands.

The thyroid is one of such ductless glands. It develops at the onset of

What We Have Done For Others, We Can Do The Same For You

Long Beach, Calif., May 12, 1935.
To Whom It May Concern—

For several years I have suffered with stomach, liver and gall bladder trouble, constipation and nervousness, also had female trouble and my blood was in a very poor condition. My meastruation period had been stopped for five months, and I had pain in my back and other organs. I tried a number of different doctors but none of them helped me. I gradually got worse and lost so much weight, at that time only weighing 78 lbs., and I was so weak I could hardly get around to do anything at all. I was almost at death's door.

Finally as a last resort I decided to consult S. P. Lee after reading one of his health booklets. He said that he understood my case and could help me. I started taking his treatments and the first month I felt better.

My circulation was better and my hands and feet were warm for the first time in months. My skin started to clear up and I also started gaining weight. I took his Herb Treatments for five months and in that time I gained twenty-seven pounds and have been gaining ever since. I feel better in every way than I have for seven years. I heartily recommend S. P. Lee's Herbs to anyone with any disease and if anyone wishes to see me regarding the results I got from Herb Treatments, you are welcome to do so.

CARE OF THE BODY

Catarrh and Mouth Disease

As I sit in my office and am in conversation with patients, I make a mental classification. This person is catarrhal—that person is not. We can tell by the inflection of tone—by the voice—whether the person is catarrhal or not and of course, if we observe the sleeping habits of an individual, it is very easy to ascertain such a condition. If he snores—if he keeps the mouth open—or if he has defects of breathing—he is, as a rule, catarrhal.

The causes will be found systematically as well as locally.

In a condition of catarrh, one will usually find that the tonsils are red and inflamed.

If you will take a clean finger and massage the tonsils from the side of the mouth, there will be a discharge of a sort of cheeselike exudate. This is a mixture of pus, bacteria, and so on, and is, of course, the best indication of a catarrhal state.

Associated with this, we find many other conditions. A coated tongue is the commonest. Another is bad breath. Still another is the inability to breathe through one or both nostrils.

When we speak of catarrh, we speak of the entire respiratory system. Both sides of the nose, the sinuses which lead into the nose, the eustachian tube leading into the ear, the pharynx and larynx of the throat—all are areas affected by catarrh.

It does not matter what the specific diet may be.

How you treat the catarrh will determine its outcome. If you take medicines, you are making a mistake. If you are continuing the same dietetic habits which were responsible for the catarrh, you are making a mistake. If you remove the tonsils and think you are removing the cause of the catarrh, you are making a mistake. If you remove the septum of the nose, you are making a mistake.

Surgery will not overcome catarrh. The removal of the tonsils and turbinates and the draining of the sinuses will not get at the root cause. The root cause will invariably be found in our previous habits of life—the colossal consumption of white sugar, the excessive cigarette-smoking, the sedentary life, the consequent elimination of the intestinal debris and the lack of exercise and sports. These are all direct contributing causes.

I have no magic panacea to offer. All I can say is this:

Learn which foods are productive of catarrh. Then discipline yourself dietetically.

See that the bowels discharge their waste three times per day.

See that you perspire sufficiently at least once per day from exercise or sports.

Learn the technique of correct breathing.

If you will follow these simple rules, you will ultimately get good results in overcoming the catarrhal state.

High Blood Pressure and Overweight

Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

I am writing you for a special diet sheet. I have high blood pressure and am overweight. I am 5 feet, 8 inches and weigh 215 pounds. I am passing through the change of life. Very truly yours,

A READER.

Excessive weight means excessive toxic poisons. Excessive toxic poisons in many instances mean high blood pressure. This is a simple statement of the case. The solution of one implies the remedy of the other. A woman 5 feet 8 inches should not weigh 215 pounds. She has not only been grossly careless but colossally weak in the administration of the essential discipline necessary to maintain good weight.

There is no short cut route to the reduction of high blood pressure of this type except through the medium by which it was achieved. To reduce weight should be the vital care of all with high blood pressure and too much avoirdupois. Instead of my high blood pressure leaflet, I would recommend this writer to procure my sample seven-day dietary for weight reduction. One objective will usually accomplish the other.

Probably I can outline four or five simple plans of weight reduction which can be followed even by those who "just love to eat."

You who weigh a "wee bit" too much will lose if you can apply the discipline in one direction, namely, cut out bread and butter for the next two months.

I know one case in particular that I recently treated on weight reduction. I let her eat anything and everything under the sun to her heart's content, and in fact, as much as she wanted of it, provided she merely discontinued bread and butter.

She stuck, and in two months' time recorded a twenty-six pound weight reduction.

Another plan is the no-breakfast idea. You will have to get along with an orange or grapefruit, some strawberries or an apple.

Another idea in this direction is the two-meal a day—breakfast at ten and dinner at five. Many persons of normal weight and good health keep themselves fit by a two-meal-a-day program. This applies very well to workers not engaged in manual labor, probably comprising 50 per cent of all the workers in Southern California.

For those with stronger discipline, the alternate day fast and feast gets good results. That is, fruit juices one day and eat as you customarily do, the second. The discipline and mastery over your habits of dietetic excess will be worth anything you don't gain through this program.

These are but a few measures apropos of weight reduction. Try them and the blood pressure, I will warrant, will go down accordingly.

Numbness

Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

Would like some literature on a condition as follows: Both hands get numb nights to wrist, not lying on them, pain in back of head, sometimes in nape of neck, mostly back of head, crackly like pains. Am 44 years old. I presume it's poor circulation but what is the best thing to do for that? Would appreciate your literature on that.

Yours truly, A READER.

Although it is our common belief that the sensation of numbness is due to circulatory disturbances, physiology teaches us differently in many cases. We are accustomed to the idea that sensations are conveyed by means of the nervous system, which, in its turn, is either increased or deceased by the quality and quantity of blood circulation. Where we have symptoms of numbness, tingling sensation, lack of sensation, our efforts are ed all the information I could get to tell people when I went back.

"'Is he French?' I asked.

"'No,' Nancy said.

"'I thought the name Barton didn't sound very French,' I pushed right on, 'but he speaks it so beautifully. English people have such a chance to learn it, if they want to though. I suppose he's been spending part of the year here I'll just leave four dollars, or do you think that's too much? I'm in sort of a hurry."

"That's about right," my lady said and they started to push the table forward.

That was where I forgot lessons learned at my mother's knee.

"I beg your pardon," I said to my lady, "but I have to speak to you; may I?"

THE BLACK MONOCLE

By Charles Brackett

The Twelfth in the Series of Sixteen Best Short Stories; Selected by the Editor of Woman's Home Companion.

UNFORTUNATELY I gave my order rather leisurely before I began to listen to what the lady at the next table was saying. Had I had any idea I'd have said, "Eggs Benedict and coffee," to the waiter as I slid behind the narrow table into my seat.

He'd shown me to a place on the bench running along the wall, a location I like because my ears are excellent and when I'm alone casual neighbors provide me with an interest I welcome after so much reading. After all, gathering data for a new mechanical encyclopedia is rather impersonal work.

The menu presented pleasant problems as is apt to be the case in spring; and so, though from the rhythm of their talk I could tell that the ladies on my right had got down to conversational business, I indulged in judicious hesitancy before ordering galantine of truffled chicken and new asparagus. Usually women repeat themselves so much one loses little by such a delay.

These particular ladies were, I judged from out of town though perhaps the far one had moved to New York. She was the elder of the two and it was she who was eating in a way which showed she appreciated the cuisine. My immediate neighbor was evidently on a diet. She had before her only a green salad and a glass of buttermilk, in neither of which did she seem profoundly interested.

She was a pretty lady and had been prettier I was sure. About thirty-four or five, she was not so smartly turned out as she should have been. There was an indescribable hurried look about her as though she'd had to break off shopping and dash to her luncheon appointment without taking a moment to arrange herself.

I liked her instantly. I liked the way she used her mouth, and her very beautiful white teeth. I liked her for her air of happiness. She was a homey person.

"Have you ever heard of anything so ghastly?" were the first words of hers I caught. "But he'd said it, and what was there to be done about it? Of course I didn't see Nancy again while I was there and she'll probably hate me forever, though heaven knows I wouldn't have had it happen for words, and Harry was as innocent as a babe."

"But tell me what Nancy's like since she's been living in Paris," the lady beyond the elder one said.

"My dear, you'd never know her. She goes in for smart tailleurs and tight felt hats and she's had all that little fuzz taken off her face. As I said to Harry, I didn't see any one while I was there who was quite so Parisian. She made me feel like old Mag the village slattern. I really had been to Paris once or twice in my life, you know. As a matter of fact, father and mother and I used to stop there almost every year on our trips. But Nancy, who'd never got nearer it than a Burton Holmes lecture until four years ago, somehow made me feel as though it were my first visit, as though we might have thought it was Paris we saw but we'd really got off at the junction and never realized it."

"Oh, Mary, aren't you killing!" the lady beyond said.

"But don't you think it's pretty cute of Nancy? She's so very much in the know. She's so obviously that rare American who can adapt herself to the Gallic temperament. I'd asked her to luncheon at Prunier's because I adore the fish there. (I didn't stick to my diet when I was in Paris you can be sure.) Prunier's is obvious, I know, but it's reliable, and I hadn't any time to shop around among the restaurants. My dear, she patronized it off the face of the earth. 'It seems so funny to be in Prunier's again,' she said. 'I haven't been here since the day after I arrived. Aren't the trippers too killing? There's hardly a French person here.' You know the sort of thing."

"Didn't it make you a little mad, Mary?" the lady beyond asked.

"No it didn't," my lady answered. "Not in Nancy. After all, Nancy had had a pretty dreary childhood and girlhood. Don't you remember those awful clothes her mother used to make her wear back home, and those long black cotton stockings? And the way she was wedged and squeezed into parties. How the boys hated her! She was too smart for them of course. She was too smart for us girls too, as a matter of fact. I liked her because she made a kind of heroine of me, and always thought my clothes were perfect and that I had the grandest time in the world, but I was always a little bit afraid of her smartness. Well I remembered all those things, and to see her sitting there being the Soul of Paris didn't irritate me a bit. She had a fling coming to her."

"Of course she was clever," the lady beyond admitted, "but I don't like those clever women."

"Clever! What other one of that old crowd of girls in Toledo could hold a job as Paris correspondent on a big fashion magazine, do you suppose?"

"Oh, is that what she does?"

"Yes, and it's the most wonderful position you ever heard of. She knows all the great couturiers by their first names, gets special rates, and goes to private showings."

"No wonder she feels pretty big."

"Probably she wasn't nearly so bad as I've made her out, but I had my reasons for feeling self-conscious. Harry and I had grabbed the chance of the trip, which was absolutely unexpected. We'd just had time to park the boys with Nell, who didn't want them because she was afraid they'd scour the alleys and bring some germs into her nest (they did too, measles; both of hers had them terribly,) and I hadn't bought a thing. All my clothes were filthy rags and as every one tells me, I've let myself go to pieces anyway. That's why I'm trying to stick to this diet, but I'm going to take one forkful of that lobster salad from your plate if it kills me. My dear, isn't it heavenly!"

"But go on about Nancy."

"Well, as I was saying, of all places to look seedy in, Paris is the worst. The very air makes you clothes-conscious. Being there with Nancy multiplied that effect about a thousand times."

"I don't believe she looked one half as pretty as you did," the lady beyond affirmed.

"Perhaps not to your prejudiced eyes, lamb, but she looked eighty-eight times as smart, which is what counts. The thing that pleased me about her, though, was that you could smell a beau in everything she said or did. You know that special little pleased assurance that a satisfactory offer in the offing gives a girl—well, it just radiated from her. Besides she kept saying, 'We went to such and such a restaurant . . . We went to the opening of the Swedish ballet,' and when I asked, 'Who are we?' she said, 'Oh, a man I know and I.'

"'You can't fool me, Nancy Hiller,' I told her when I saw the way she sloped her head as she said it. 'He's a heavy suitor.'

"'Well, I suppose he is,' she admitted.

"'Tell me about him.'

"'I don't want to,' she explained, 'until you see him. I told him to stop in here so we could make arrangements about a party we're going to tonight, just so you could.'"

"I wonder she dared let him have a glimpse of you," the lady beyond commented.

"Oh, don't be silly, darling," my lady said and went on with her narrative.

"Well, I told Nancy, 'I'm just dying to see him.'

"Then Nancy sprang her mystery. 'Something happened to him in the war,' she said. 'He's never talked to me about it but—well, you'll see . . . I imagine that's why he's never left France since. People here are so much more used to such things than they are in America for instance, and more polite anyway. They never think of staring. Of course to me it isn't a disfigurement, I feel about it as though it were the most splendid decoration!'

"Of course those few broken sentences had just set me off emotionally. Poor Nancy! At the age of thirty-five to get a first beau, and then not a complete one.

"I was making sympathetic nonplused sounds when Nancy gasped. 'There's Zig now,' and coming up the stairs I saw the composite profile of all the Greek gods who didn't have beards. He was tall, he carried himself like a stag and when he turned at the head of the stairs I looked instantly to see if he had both arms. He did, but then I didn't have to wonder any more. I saw what Nancy had meant. He was wearing a black monocle."

"Didn't it look outlandish?" the lady beyond asked.

"Outlandish? It was the smartest, most romantic touch I ever saw in my life. Just imagine one of those supercilious archangels they get to pose for men's hats, in a black monocle you knew to be the badge of distinguished service in the war! Why, I was reduced to an absolute pulp!

"He came up to Nancy, and clicked his heels together and bent over and kissed her hand. and then she presented him—'Mary dear, I want you to meet Zig Barton'—and he clicked his heels again and said 'Enchante,' and kissed my hand. I don't know whether I spoke or not. I have an impression that I just gasped and gaped. He and Nancy made their arrangements—"

"In English?" the lady beyond wanted to know.

"I don't know what you'd call it. It was one of those 'But no, chere amie' conversations. Of course I never took my eyes from him, and I had a funny sense that I'd seen him before or somebody who looked a little like him. I knew it couldn't be he because I'd never been knocked so flat. I told myself it must be just some idealized memory of the first time I'd happened on Guido's Apollo.

"Finally he bowed to me from the hips, perfectly gorgeous, said 'A ce soir' to Nancy, smiled and strode away.

"'Well, what do you think of him?' Nancy asked.

"I tried to sound as generous as I felt. 'I'm absolutely bowled over.' I told her. 'He's gorgeous. He makes me ashamed to have you see my poor prosaic Harry.'

"'Isn't it tragic about his eye?' she asked.

"All I could say was, 'I don't know that I think it is,' with a kind of adoring excited giggle. 'I think the monocle is marvelous.'

"Then she gave up her bluff. 'Isn't it divine?' she agreed. 'And the best part of it is that he never makes capital of having been wounded. He won't even talk about the war, just says it was a terrible bore. You'd think he must have been in the Service of Supply.'

"'Are you engaged to him?' I asked.

"'Yes. We aren't announcing it though. People don't in our set. We'll just be married one day.' Well, times have changed since Nancy used to telephone me long distance if little Bobby Carter asked her to a box party so he could make her sit in the front of the box and hide the way he and Myrtle Stone were holding hands in the back and it just gave me a thrill to think of all that Nancy had accomplished. She'd had a long wait but she was marrying more excitingly than any one of us, and I almost told her so. Of course I want-

Care of the Body

By Philip M. Lovell, *N. D.

Retarded Stomach Digestion

Have you ever eaten a meal and found it "laying heavy" on your stomach? Sometimes it shows itself by an aftertaste or belching two to six hours after you have consumed the food. If you have eaten enough of it you can feel it high up inthe abdomen—in the stomach itself.

If, perchance, you need to empty the stomach either through the stomach wash (lavage) or vomiting as a result of a gastric attack, you will find that the stomach has practically not acted upon the food contents at all. You have a "dead" stomach, literally paralyzed both through the quantity of food content, and the nature of the food itself.

Retarded stomach digestion is an old, old trouble with dyspeptics and those suffering the customary gastric-intestinal disturbances. They complain that the food does not digest quickly enough. Sometimes they make a careful study of quick-digesting food and, of course, invariably resort to the wrong measures. They find, for instance, that a refined cereal goes through the stomach quicker than a coarse, unrefined one, and, of course, what is more logical than to take the refined cereal?

They are told that well-cooked foods go through the stomach with less effort, and consequently shun unfired foods. Thus they build up a system of dietetics whose purpose is to find more rapid digestion, but which in reality tends to augment and increase the original trouble. The stomach action is retarded. Why?

You may rest assured that a normal healthy stomach functioning at its maximum capacity would not be retarded, but a diseased stomach would be. Therefore we are reasonable in assuming that disease and retarded function are really one and the same thing. Then, how can we increase the speed of stomach action and at the same time ignore its elements? Is it not reasonable to say that they must be solved together?

Thus, though we may favor the ingestion of highly refined spices and seasoned foods, overcooked, greased and baked, even though temporarily more digestible than their parallel simple, coarse and unrefined foods—the fact still remains that these foods are responsible for the inflammation. Hence the interest for diet reform along the lines of simplification and naturalness is essential. Great as are the crimes of diet, yet they sink into insignificance as compared to the greater crimes of overindulgence.

We are cursed with surfeiture; we wallow in plentiness. The eight-course meal is doing more dietetic harm than all the delicatessen goods combined. Leaving the table stuffed to the brim can produce more stomach lethargy than all other causes put together.

This, of course, brings us to a sensible solution of this problem via the only routes capable of solving it.

First, we must become diet-conscious. We should not concern ourselves with the rate at which food passes through the digestive system. Even the so-called time-tables published by our diet experts are not reliable gauges, in so far as these tables are usually premised on healthy individuals who, in their turn, have a great degree of variation.

We should, however, concern ourselves with the classification of those foods which are injurious and those which are beneficial. What these are I have reiterated repeatedly in this department.

The general principle would be that the closer the given food comes to its natural state, the better and more wholesome that food may be. Important as this principle may be, it is far more imperative that we obey the rules of quantity.

Have you had a stomach upset today in which the last meal "lay heavy"? Then common sense should tell you, "lay off."

I have never yet seen the person die from starvation because of a twenty-four hour or forty-eight-hour fast. This, irrespective of whether you are overweight or underweight. If your stomach rebels, its action retarded, and the customary sequelae of gasses, fermentation, discomfort and belching develop, nature is telling you in so many words, "Lay off!" Obey it!

A sick dog knows enough so that when it is sick, it crawls in its box, stops eating and waits for its recovery. Do the same for the sick stomach. Stop eating. Miss the next few meals until you have the positive and urgent call. Then readjust your dietary habits.

Why we have adapted ourselves to the "three squares" I do not know, except that we are following the customary traditional habits our ancestors have followed from time immemorial. Why we should consume one meal or eight, I do not know. Instead, we fast for four or five hours, and then gorge for a half hour.

The patient suffering from retarded digestion would do well to cut down the quantity for each meal to the irreducible minimum necessary to sustain life and health.

How small this minimum is would surprise you. I wish every victim of this trouble could read of the intimate life of great men past and present, such as, Plato, Aristotle, Bernard Shaw, Anatole France and others.

They would find the diet life of these men as sparse as their imagination can make it, generally consisting of but a few ounces of food a meal.

I am not recommending as esthetic a regime as this, but I certainly do advocate a marked diminution of the colossal quantities of food customarily consumed by the average sedentary victim of delayed digestion. It would also be a good idea to eat more frequently and less. Where the stomach could take care of a minimum quantity at a given time and do the work well, it would lay down on the job if compelled to handle huge quantities.

At least, give these simple measures the benefit of your experience and note the excellent forthcoming results.

BUNIONS

We have invented a day and night appliance for bunions and overlapped toes, and we have ever reason to believe it will correct nine cases out of ten.

The night splints are worn while sleeping and the muscles are relaxed, to stretch the contracted tendons that distort the toes and cause this hideous deformity.

The day reducing appliance shields the bunion, hides the deformity and holds the toes in proper alignment and the normal traction for the bones will be re-established and in a short time the bunion disappears completely and forever.

ed all the information I could get to tell people when I went back.

"'Is he French?' I asked.

"'No,' Nancy said.

"'I thought the name Barton didn't sound very French,' I pushed right on, 'but he speaks it so beautifully. English people have such a chance to learn it, if they want to though. I suppose he's been spending part of the year here ever since he was a little boy.' Nancy didn't say a word, so I had to be crude and ask, 'He is English, isn't he?'

"'No,' Nancy answered a little snappishly, just because she liked to have him thought as exotic as possible, I guess.

"'You don't mean to tell me he's an American!' I gasped.

"She nodded that he was.

"'Do you suppose I could ever have seen him?' I asked, remembering that little impression.

"'I guess you'd have remembered him,' Nancy snipped but I didn't take warning.

"'What part of the country is he from?' I asked flat out.

"'His family lived in Grand Rapids,' Nancy said as though it were just an accident and he'd never associated with them at all intimately anyway."

"She knew you'd visited there," the lady beyond hazarded.

"I don't think it was that. It was just that she hated to have anything about him so commonplace as nice old Grand Rapids. But of course I had visited there and as she said those words things came back to me like a flash. 'Barton!' I said. 'Why, he must be the one who'— Then I caught myself."

"I'd have told her then and there," the lady beyond pronounced.

"No you wouldn't. After all, life has been pretty good to you just as it has to me. We can afford to be generous. Why be mean just because you have a chance?"

The lady beyond became sententious. "It never does anybody any harm to know the truth."

"You know that isn't really true, darling. There are all sorts of illusions that are just like bread to people. I could have bitten my tongue out for having said those words. Being as clever as she is of course Nancy seized on them.

"'He must be the one who what?' she asked.

"'He must be one of the crowd of boys Harry knew in Grand Rapids,' I said feebly. 'Harry lived there for a while, you know.'

"'That wasn't what you started to say,' she accused me. 'You said, "Why, he must be the one who" '—

"'Did I?' I babbled. 'I haven't any idea what I was going to say.'

"Nancy had colored that queer purplish red. You know perfectly well what you were going to say,' she told me. 'Now what was it?'

"I tried being dignified. 'I'm not accustomed to lying, Nancy,' I said.

"'Then don't try it now,' she advised me. 'What were you going to say?'

"'I haven't any idea,' I lied. 'It just seemed to me that I'd heard Harry, or somebody, mention a man named Barton.'

"'What did they say?' Nancy cross-questioned.

"I could only bleat, 'Nothing that I can remember.'

"'Either you've heard something you don't want to repeat—'

"'I haven't,' I put in.

"'Or you're just trying to make me uncomfortable.'

"But there was something pathetic about her even then, darling. She was so wild. She was the mother bird flapping above the nest which held her darling illusions, and all I wanted to say was, 'Oh, don't! Don't! I wouldn't hurt your babies for worlds.' What I did say was, 'My dear, I'm certainly not trying to make you uncomfortable and I don't remember hearing a derogatory syllable.' Wouldn't you think that would have been enough? But Nancy pounced on it. That's the trouble about being clever.

"'You do remember something though,' she cried. 'Why don't you tell it? Because you like me to think that it's something that would upset me. I never knew you to be a cat before, Mary. But then I suppose this is the first time I ever saw you envious.'

"'What do you mean by that?' I asked.

"'Just that you never had a suitor one half as attractive as Zig Barton so you like to imply that before the war he didn't run around Grand Rapids with

And coming up the stairs I saw the composite profile of all the Greek Gods who didn't have beards.

the crowd Harry Foster did. Who cares anything about that? What's Grand Rapids, anyway? People are crazy about him in Paris who wouldn't wipe their shoes on Grand Rapids.'"

"How did you take that?" the lady beyond asked, so angry that she had to pause in eating her coffee parfait.

"Well, I was annoyed, but I was amused too. I concentrated hard on the memory of those cotton stockings and I said, 'Let's drop the subject. You've made it all up.'

"'I will not,' she almost screamed. 'Why, just because you're settled down in a stodgy rut, you should resent this wonderful thing that's happened to me I don't pretend to understand, but I'm going to find out just how much truth'—

"'Will you please hush,' I begged her. 'Here comes Harry. Don't let him find us quarreling.'"

"I warrant the sight of Harry made her change her tune," the lady beyond said. "Why, Harry's one of the handsomest men—"

"My dear," my lady disillusioned her, "I must admit that I've never seen Harry look less attractive in his life. He'd just been struggling through a business conversation with some Frenchman, and then walked in the hot sun; and he was wearing an old suit that he insisted would do until he got to London, and he'd had the most awful haircut on the steamer.

"'Hello, Nancy,' he said.

"Nancy was drawn up taut and proud. 'Hello, Harry.'

"He slumped down in a chair and said, 'Gee, Nancy, you look like a million dollars.'

"I cringed because I knew Nancy would think that just showed the base commercial standards of America.

"As a matter of fact she didn't even hear what he'd said. She began where she'd left off with me. 'Maybe you can settle a point for us, Harry.'

"'Glad to,' Harry said. 'What's it about?'

"If I could only have had two seconds to warn him, but there wasn't a chance! I tried saying, 'Please don't,' but she turned on me furiously.

"'Yes, we're going to have this thing out.' Then she swung back to Harry. 'We were talking about Zig Barton.'

"'Don't know him,' Harry announced.

"'From Grand Rapids,' Nancy went on. 'I believe his full name is Clarence Hobart Barton.

"'Oh, sure,' Harry said and my heart sank because I knew it was on the tip of his tongue.

"'He made a great record in the war,' I put in quickly enough to save the situation.

"'Did he?' Harry asked, wrinkling his forehead. 'I thought he was in the Y.M.C.A. canteen in Bordeaux. It seemed to me I ran into him there.'

"'Well, is that anything against him?' Nancy stormed.

"'It certainly isn't,' Harry said, nice about it, the way men are who saw really terrific service. 'He couldn't get into any of the regular branches of course. I haven't a doubt he tried.'

"'He probably was sent up to the front line at some time,' I suggested. Ah intuitive person would have known from the way I was acting, but Harry's awfully dumb about that sort of thing.

"Nancy merely threw me a look full of malice and disdain. 'Did you ever hear anything in Grand Rapids to his discredit?' she demanded.

"'Not a word,' Harry said, looking startled, and from her face I knew Nancy felt she had scored a complete triumph. It was over apparently, and I drew one easy breath; then Harry spoke that fatal sentence which told everything. It was horrible."

"I think she richly deserved it," the lady beyond proclaimed. "Are you ready to start? The check is three fifty-five. I'll just leave four dollars, or do you think that's too much? I'm in sort of a hurry."

"That's about right," my lady said and they started to push the table forward.

That was where I forgot lessons learned at my mother's knee.

"I beg your pardon," I said to my lady, "but I have to speak to you; may I?"

She looked surprised, but amused.

"Well, you seem to be doing it," she said.

"I've been listening to every word you said," I announced.

"Well, really!" she gasped.

"I know it was wrong," I admitted. "I deserve a State Prison sentence, but cruel and unusual punishments aren't permitted in the United States, not even for eavesdropping. You can't torture me. I've got to know what Harry's remark was."

The lady smiled. I knew one could count on anybody with that nice smile.

"I've never been so flattered," she told me. "All Harry said was: 'Why, everybody I know has always liked old cross-eyed Clarence.' "

The Black Monocle

By Charles Brackett

UNFORTUNATELY I gave my order rather leisurely before I began to listen to what the lady at the next table was saying. Had I had any idea I'd have said, "Eggs Benedict and coffee," to the waiter as I slid behind the narrow table into my seat.

[The Twelfth in the Series of Sixteen]

Glimpse of you," the lady beyond commented.

"Oh, don't be silly, darling," my lady said and went on with her narrative.

"Well, I told Nancy, 'I'm just dying to see him.'

WITH the POETS

Pass It Along!

("Co-operation")

Happiness don't cost a heap,
But it's something you can't keep;
If within your heart's a song,
You can hold it just so long;
But don't try to keep it there —
It was made for all to share,
And it don't belong to you—
God wants us to have it, too!

If you're thinking kindly things—
Little thoughts, with angel-wings—
Turn them loose, and let them fly
At us people passing by;
Give them to us with a smile;
Let us keep them for a while,
Then we'll turn them back to you—
And some others with them, too!

Misers they can hoard their gold,
And it's something they can hold,
Without hurtiffg you, or me;
If they want it—let them be;
But no one can happy live
If they "get" —and never give.
So when God showers gifts on you—
He wants us to have them, too!

The Lights of Home

No matter how dark may be the day
Or how sad may be your song;
No matter if failure may be your lot,
And everything goes dead wrong.
If the pathway of life be rough and steep
As through the world you roam;
Happiness will come again,
When you see the lights of home.

If you've made mistakes, or suffered wrong,
And others have been unkind,
Remember, although the way be long
And the goal be hard to find;
There's a recompense for all our ills,
And billows will break in foam;
The darkest clouds will flee away,
When we see the lights of home.

When night comes down over land and sea,
And the sun has slipped away,
And the stars come peeping one by one
And closed is another day;
Then the solitude of things that were
And peace and rest will come,
The toil and strife of the day be o'er
When we see the lights of home.

A Crazy Quilt

I made my heart a crazy quilt
Of multi-colors gay;
The stitches were a bit of lilt
From songs along the way.
And in the center of the thing,
My choicest piece I placed,
A bit of velvet soft as love
With dreams of satin faced.
And to each lad I gave a piece
If he my fancy caught;
A tiny unimportant bit
With crazy gayness fraught:
Until at last I had none left—
Save but my loveliest square
And that I proudly gave to you
In hopes you'd find it fair.
'Twas all I had. You loved it too;
We marveled at its worth,
But what is any lad to do
With velvet on this earth?

ELIZABETH CAMPBELL.

Present Paradise

Too long we've thought of far-off paradise—
A place where ills may trouble us no more;
Prone to forget where present duty lies,
Or wait for fancied wings by which to soar.

We'll find our heaven here, in being kind—
In sending forth some radiant, happy thought;
In selflessness, with fair and open mind:
This is the goal humanity has sought.

GOOD SHORT STORIES

Compiled for The Times Sunday Magazine

Golfer: I've got a niblick which I paid twelve dollars for.
Dumb Dora: Why didn't you pay a little more and get a Buick?

Sheik

A primary grade teacher in the Garvanza district was seated at her desk when a little girl came up and handed her a note which read: "I love you—Carl A." Another little girl came up with a note just like it.

The teacher stood up saying: "All the children who have received notes, bring them to me," and it seemed as if the whole class rose, as twenty-three little girls stepped primly to the desk and deposited their letters all reading: "I love you.—Carl A—."

"Why did you write to every girl in the room, Carl?" the teacher asked.

By this time the little fellow was crying but managed to blurt out: "I just loved them all and I thought they ought to know about it."

Insulted

There is at least one psychologist in Los Angeles. He came to light the other day when a lost child, surrounded by a curious and sympathetic crowd, listened in dumb agony while an exasperated policeman vainly questioned him.

Question after question the officer asked, but no answer. The finger stayed plugged in the small mouth like the finger of the Dutch boy in the story who stopped the hole in the dike and held back the waters.

"Aw," said somebody, "he's lost his tongue."

And right here the genius stepped in. He looked the little fellow over for a moment and then remarked with a trace of contempt in his voice: "It ain't a boy, it's a girl."

That last remark, the worst insult known to boyhood, removed the plug.

"I ain't no girl. My name is Johnny and I live at 26 Blank street and I wanna go home."

"Old trick," laughed the genius. "I've often observed that insulting remarks sometimes get the quickest results."

Suspicious

"Love and speed do not go together," says Mlle. Yvonne, the popular French artiste. "Romance flourishes in moonlight, not speed. A friend of mine, the morning after a visit to the opera said to me:

"'Last night coming home from the opera, Raul's car did ninety miles an hour.'

"'Ah, my dear,' I cried, 'what was the quarrel about?'"

Safe

"I have more respect for American men than I have for the women," said Clarence Darrow. "Men have always performed their masculine tasks. Then, if there was time for anything else, they went in for whatever they fancied.

"But too many American women neglect their homes and immemorial domestic duties when they flit into more congenial fields.

"A friend of mine had been complaining that he had hard time keeping a little of his hard-earned money for himself as his wife usually grabbed it all.

"'But at last,' he added triumphantly, 'I have found a safe hiding place for it.'

"'And where is that?' I asked.

"'I put it with my socks that need mending,' he replied with a happy laugh."

Costly

Judge Valentine stated his opinion that a vast majority of minor offenses against the law were occasioned by people "trying to keep up a front."

"To many young chaps," he declared "just try to be happy-go-lucky fellows and merely turn out to be unhappy-go-brokes."

Evergreen

An interesting Irish story has to do with the poet John Boyle O'Reilly, who at the time was a political convict in Australia, having been reprieved from a death sentence.

O'Reilly, with hundreds of others, was working on a road gang which was constructing a new highway across the island and one day they came to a spot where progress was blocked by a magnificent tree. O'Reilly pleaded that the tree be spared, but even his fellow convicts jeered at him. With great difficulty and at the risk of his life, he eluded the convict guard and went to the commander of the district. The idea of a convict pleading for the life of a tree struck the officer so funny that he told his wife about it.

But the woman understood the poet and as the result of her immediate visit to the spot, the course of the highway was changed and to this day the forest giant stands in the Australian bush as an evergreen monument to the Irish convict who was also a poet.

Guilty

All sorts of funny cases come up in Los Angeles courts. Among them a suit by a wife to be appointed her husband's guardian on the ground of insanity.

"But what proof have you that your husband is insane?" asked the judge, "So far, during this case, he appears to me to be perfectly rational."

"That may be," replied the wife coldly, "but I assure you there are times when he actually imagines that he's the head of the family."

Tragedy

The water department gives Los Angeles women major credit for carrying the water bonds. "I believe," declared Chief Engineer Van Norman, "that every woman in Los Angeles felt much like a charming lady I know.

"This most delightful matron looked so downcast one day that her husband finally asked her what the trouble was.

"'Oh, dear!" she burst into tears, 'I've just discovered that the woman next door to us has a hat just like mine.'

"'And that means that you'll want me to buy you another hat, I suppose,' growled her husband darkly.

"'Well, dear,' cooed the charming little lady, 'that would be a lot cheaper than moving, wouldn't it?'"

Levity

One comes across this bit of dialogue in the Congressional Record:

Senator Walsh of Montana: "Mr. President, what is the business before the Senate?"

Vice-President Curtis: "The Senator from New York has moved to strike out the word 'spunk' in paragraph 1769 of the tariff bill."

Senator Walsh: "Does the Senator expect to exhibit some?"

Vice-President Curtis: "The Chair understood that he had some."

Nothingness

Shortly before his death, "Tiger" Clemenceau spoke quite freely on his philosophy of life.

"Men do not amuse me any more," he said. "I find that they attach too much importance to themselves. A man consecrates his entire life to beetles and in the end never sees anything in the world but beetles."

Askd what he thought about life after death he said:

"I don't know who had the first idea of Paradise. He must have found life too short, that fellow. Happy man! He wanted it to go on, with a less stupid government and with more amusing diversions.

"But nothingness is really superior to Paradise. Paradise is an improvement—Nothingness is Perfection. With Nothingness, everything arranges itself perfectly."

Maybe

Councilman Randall had been talking to some of the young folks in North Hollywood about the glories and profits of outdoor life in Southern California. Orange groves, fig ranches and apricot orchards were touched on in colorful and convincing manner.

"And what?" he asked, "will be the outcome of the simple life?"

"A simple death," shouted some one at the rear of the hall.

Alert

"What are all these women around here for?" asked a little Santa Barbara boy when he came home from school.

"They've been upstairs to see the baby," his equally small sister informed him.

"But why do they do that? Babies are common enough aren't they? the small boy persisted.

"Oh, yes," replied little sister, "but this is a new one and I expect they want to see the latest fashion."

Ambition

"Ambition is a great thing," said Senator Borah, "if it is intelligently created and then persistently pursued. Some men have bitter disappointments because their aspirations were too high for their ability. Others set too low a target and their success, when attained, isn't much success. Like the chap I met the other day.

"'Yes,' he told me loudly, 'I began at the bottom and worked my way to the top.'

"'Indeed!' I exclaimed, 'and what is your line?'

"'Well, he explained, 'I'm versatile as well as successful. I began at the bottom as a shoe shiner—now I'm a hairdresser.'"

Safety

The appalling accident census in America caused Cesar Casabel to remark:

"In an accident it is well to have presence of mind and, if possible, absence of body."

Useful

"The woman of today not only has all the privileges of man, in addition to most of those which have always been hers exclusively, but uses the poor boob for a catspaw besides," declared Gov. Allen of Massachusetts at a Boston banquet.

"One of these modernists had been indulging in the hospitality of friends far too often to please her husband and he finally ventured to speak to her about it.

"'My dear,' he said, 'I think this makes the twelfth time you have visited the refreshment buffet.'

"'Oh, that's all right,' she replied carelessly, "I tell them I'm getting it for you."

Booster

One of the California co-operative fruit organizations sent some pretty girls East to boost citrus fruits. One of these was demonstrating in a St. Louis store.

"Just a moment and I'll explain how to manage grapefruit without embarrassment," she cooed but before she could proceed a small boy piped up:

"I know! Drink orange juice instead."

Undone

Sherman J. McQueen of Monrovia tells of a Scotchman who had been charged with being drunk and incapable. He pleaded "Not Guilty."

In the course of the evidence, however, it came out that the taxi driver who had driven the accused to the railroad station admitted receiving 6d. over his legal fare.

"That's done it!" exclaimed the prisoner, "I must have been drunk."

Familiar

"Time hasn't changed the American boy any, asserts Judge Ben Lindsey. "The girls may be different but the boys are still boys. It sounded very familiar to me when a young mother said:

"'Johnny, come right over here and kiss your Aunt Martha.'

"To which Johnny replied in the time-honored manner:

"'Why pick on me? I ain't done nothing.'"

Different

Recently there was quite a row in one of the big New York hotels where afternoon bridge is a regular feature. The management had made a good thing out of these bridge parties and spent not a little in installing the latest fads that go with the game.

The unique counters, fancy decks of cards, folding chairs and collapsible tables were of the most expensive make. But the row ended, for the time at least, these popular parties. When asked about it, the manager said:

"Collapsible bridge tables help make a party a success, but collapsible guests are bound to spoil it."

Changing

Bernard Shaw, whose first name is plebian George, absolutely refused to commit himself as to whether long or short skirts were most becoming.

"I expect it depends on what they show," he said, with one of his rare chuckles and added:

"But now that the long skirt is coming back into fashion, perhaps the long marriage will stage a comeback also."

Corrected

Part of the secret ritual of some sort of a Negro lodge was revealed by an enumerator in the Jackson-street district when a flustered Negro woman told him her husband was an Eel and she was a Bray, thinking that was the information the enumerator wanted when he asked her for their names.

Later, when she discovered her mistake, she dashed down to headquarters and asked that the statement be corrected, explaining that those were lodge titles.

"When Ah tole mah husband 'bout it, he 'spained everything. He says a Bray is not mah name but what Ah is."

work in the many communities served, the practical suggestions submitted and the record of work accomplished, are of vital interest. The librarian at Burbank strikes the keynote in saying, "To make a true report of library service seems an impossibility, as it is the elusive 'something' which makes for helpfulness, understanding and contentment in the work with patrons which is most important and for which there seems to be no concrete term. We strive to attain the good things of life. sible to all—inaugurated originally in Maryland and Ohio—has reached its highest development in California.

If there has been business romance in Los Angeles county real estate, industry and commerce, there is a fine cultural thrill in the marvelous expansion of her library system. A short eighteen years ago the library took its inception in a single shelf of books, a desk and typewriter and a lone librarian. Mounting its library on wheels, it started out to establish community libraries from desert and mountain to the shore.

Statistics are eloquent in support of the wisdom of this plan. The Central Library—acting as a clearinghouse for substations—now has 160 lines of book distribution—each represented by a branch library. With a county area of 4100 square miles (including the islands,) 3543 square miles are now regularly served with the rotating book system, a service which lists over 110,000 registered borrowers and will show at the end of June, a circulation of nearly 2,750,000. The county library functions as a governmental unit, serving twenty-seven of the forty-four incorporated cities and towns as well as an immense unincorporated territory. It reaches 38 per cent of State school attendance and cares for the tourists and the flowing population.

The stock of 350,000 books is kept briskly moving through carefully assorted shipments over routes traversing the county from end to end by means of three trucks and parcel post. These trucks also take care of deliveries of library furniture and equipment, also maps, charts, globes, music records, pamphlets, bulletins and book lists; no branch at any time being neglected. The library employs a staff of only sixty-four full-time and 186 part-time workers including persons experienced in book selection, reference work, cataloguing, shelf building, book repairing and transportation—all under civil service. And this extensive work is somehow maintained on the low tax rate of 5 cents on the $100.

The county library means books and magazines for every man, woman and child in the county, through convenient branches supplied with fresh, changing collections of books. It means the help of a county-minded librarian who is interested in both urban and rural problems, the development of industries, vocational training, the arts, home problems, adult education as well as education of children—everything that pertains to better and happier living. It means the use of all the books you and your children want, for less annually than the cost to an individual of an ordinary book or magazine subscription.

With branches spaced about ten minutes apart by automobile, books are almost as easily available to people in reclaimed areas of the Mojave Desert and the scattered beach towns and mountain hamlets, as they are to residents of the city. This marks progress, as expressed by a man of the desert. "That's fine! Our pioneering days have passed and we are ready for many things that make life more comfortable and pleasant, including books and music."

Housing for the library branches is usually of three types—a real library building, where possible; a centrally located storeroom; or a bungalow. In addition, libraries are located in schools, crossroad stores, filling stations, postoffices and clubhouse centers.

A practical help for practical people, the whole field of reading is drawing the interest of men and women and young people to the county library. Women at home have, for the asking, books on home dressmaking, household management, child training, foods, interior decorating, gardening. In almost any emergency, the housewife can secure the desired information and wherever there is a county library there are countless women who find it a source of everyday help in the job of homemaker and mother. The line-up of patrons around any library desk today is likely to include as many men as women and children—men who want practical books that apply to a man's job—carpenter, mechanic, dairyman, barber, prospector farmer, aviator—each seeking to build up his ability and broaden his interests.

Then there is reading for pleasure, for if "books are tools of the mind," they are also ships, dogsleds or jaunting-carts wherein you may travel unconcerned for schedules, baggage, sea-sickness or expense. There is always a change of scene awaiting one who feels the monotony of routine—a vivid experience to offset the commonplace—new acquaintances—new understandings of lives that differ from yours.

County libraries mean making books available and when the service is effective as an agent of distribution, a few books in the hands of a capable librarian will go further than a large collection lacking system. To achieve this ultimate service, the Los Angeles County Library has developed a unique plan to supplement the usual library system. It is known as the "Request System" and entitles any registered borrower to ask for whatever book he may require. The request is forwarded by his branch librarian to the Central Library. If the book appears anywhere in the files of the system, it is located and immediately forwarded to the branch for the person making the request. Should the particular book not be listed in the catalogue the central office makes every effort to secure a copy—by purchase, if feasible, or by borrowing it from the State Library, the Congressional Library or even sending abroad for it; and there is neither trouble nor expense to the user. This means that everyone in even the remote districts may have timely use of the entire stock of the library system plus a borrowing service from highly specialized bookshelves in this and other countries.

The files of this "Request System" bring to light the knowledge of many interesting new projects and daily contribute valuable data along lines of local and general interest. For instance, one man has secured the necessary information for undertaking the unique business of elephant breeding. His request for books on this subject were first referred to the State Library and the Balboa Park Zoo. Failing there, it was forwarded to the Congressional Library, Department of Agriculture, which returned references from the New York Zoo, and finally from London and India. Another man has learned how to build his own home and repair his automobile. Still another elevated his tralerank from a carpenter to a specialist in laying out and constructing elliptical ceilings. A winter tourist turned her long vacation to account by studying how to raise frogs for the market and will return to her home in Georgia equipped with the means of carrying on a lucrative business by supplying neighboring summer resorts with a popular delicacy for the table. The Los Angeles County Library receives many requests for books on restaurant and apartment-house management and the installation of wayside stands. Hundreds of requests come in for information pertaining to civil-service examinations. Gardening, horticulture, dog and bird breeding, wrought-iron and cement construction, sun-cure, invalid diets, traffic management, rock gardens and aquariums, white ants, radio, boat-building and vacational pursuits abound in these really romantic files. Much careful work goes into making the right book available to the right person at the right time. The librarian is the recipient of many letters of appreciation from grateful persons receiving practical benefit from this system. In her opinion such a request system is an outstanding feature of a complete book service because each individual's request is recorded and followed up until the book requested is supplied or a reason given why it is not available.

Branch library reports from year to year yield invaluable data. The spirit of service expressed in these reports on the work in the many communities served, the practical suggestions submitted and the record of work accomplished, are of vital interest. The librarian at Burbank strikes the keynote in saying, "To make a true report of library service seems an impossibility, as it is the elusive 'something' which makes for helpfulness, understanding and contentment in the work with patrons, which is most important and for which there seems to be no concrete term. We strive to stress this feature in our work, and the kindness and appreciation which we receive is more than a reward for our efforts."

The Dominguez Branch makes it a duty to establish immediate contact with each new family moving into the community. We would state without fear of exaggeration that this library is patronized by approximately 100 per cent of the families of Davidson City and surrounding territory.

From Bell: "During the past year the additional equipment has made the library quite an educational center, meeting the many and varied needs of the people. This has given the Bell Branch Library first place by the Commercial Club in its advertisement of Bell as an ideal home city."

Claremont: "In March, instead of a wild flower show an exhibit was held of water color paintings of wild flowers from Iowa and California . . . done by a resident of Claremont."

San Dimas: "During our garden book exhibit we added garden flowers, making special effort to exhibit unusual ones, for instance, black calla lilies and cactus blossoms, hoping that to see results would add stimulus."

School children taking home books from a country library branch.

Lynwood: "We had our most successful Book Week this year with California authors and history featured. A member of the Ebell Club was in the library each day to show the books and answer questions."

The reports, one after another, show the fine work of an interested, sympathetic and efficient personnel which does not consider its duties ended with checking books in and out.

Through the department of work with children the interest of the children is caught and held in many ingenious ways, reading contests, travel tours, special exhibits—always with the desire to acquaint the children with charming book characters and to make of them "book friends." The schools' use of the books is practically unlimited in its scope. Sometimes stories are dramatized as little impromptu plays, again the library may be called upon to furnish information for the carrying on of a special project.

Conditions are favorable for a quickening spread of the county-library idea throughout the world. The county is rapidly becoming the accepted unit of organization for agricultural extension, for school supervision, for public health work; it is the one nation-wide unit for local self-government. Rural agencies are building up higher standards of living and greater farm profits. Automobiles and good roads are wiping out rural isolation. Every year rural people are demanding more and getting more of the good things of life. Thirty-eight States in the United States have passed a law providing for county library service and Hawaii and the British Isles have also developed the plan. In California forty-six of the fifty-eight counties are organized, and all of the counties south of the Tehachapi Mountains have been operating for several years.

The Los Angeles County Free Library promises to be an increasingly valuable influence and should have every cooperation. Leading clubs are recognizing the importance of this splendid institution by aiding at every opportunity—even the Automobile Club has found a way to help by putting up traffic signs designating locations of library streets.

It is the vision of the county librarian, Helen E. Vogelson, that with a budget sufficient to employ an adequate staff of trained people and to establish enough libraries that people need not have to travel more than two miles—five minutes by auto—to get their books and magazines—the county library plan may provide the most economical and the most useful kind of library service that has ever been devised.

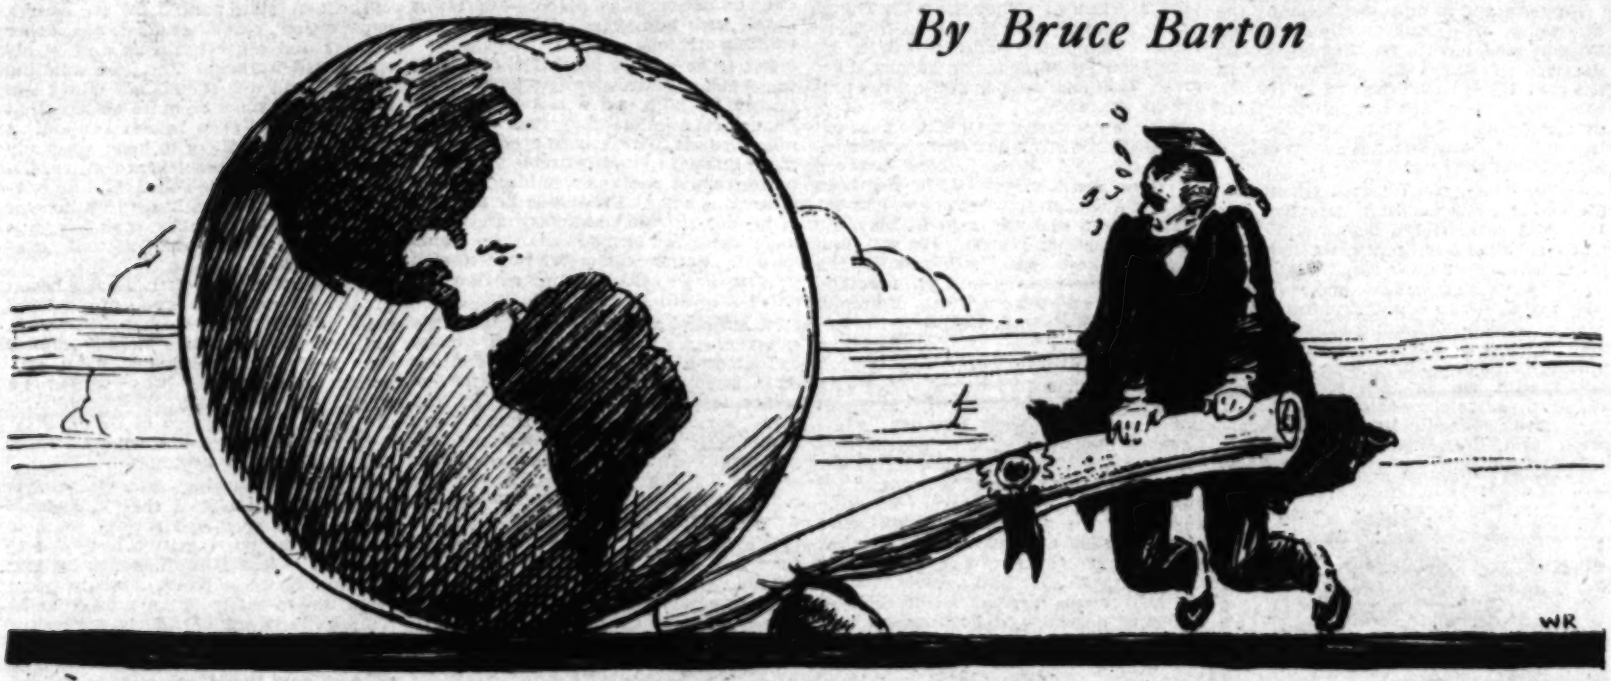
You've Just Got to Give Them Time

By Bruce Barton



A WOMAN whose son is in his second year at college writes that her boy is well mannered and intelligent but does not seem to have any objective.

"His father and I urge him to decide what he wants to do in life," she says, "but he tells us that he cannot make up his mind."

For the encouragement of this mother I can cite two interesting cases.

A certain man now stands near the top of his profession, with an income considerably in excess of a hundred thousand dollars a year. He worked hard in college, but his health was poor; he was frequently despondent, and at his graduation he felt that he was not trained for anything.

He took the first job offered, and made surprisingly good progress. Just about the time that his parents thought he was well established, he suddenly chucked the job and started around the word. After a year's travel which used up all his savings, he started in another position. The company failed, and he was out again. A third time he started in a different line, but it did not interest him. He could not get to first base.

On his fourth attempt, when he was almost thirty years old, he finally found work that gripped him. Also, he became engaged to be married. He jumped into high speed and has been successful ever since.

I know another man whose ability was clearly recognized by the heads of the big company where he worked, but somehow they could not seem to fit him into the place where he would be really productive. Four or five times they shifted him into different departments. They were just about to turn him into the street when he struck the one thing for which he was really fitted. Today he is vice-president of the whole concern.

The significant thing about these two stories is the attitude of the older people involved. Not by a single word or look did the parents of the first young man, or the employers of the second, express impatience. They stood behind their boy long after he ought to have been standing alone. Their faith and their patience pulled him through.

When I buy an automobile the salesman tells me that it has been perfectly manufactured for its work, and carefully inspected and tuned up. At the same time, he says that I must be patient with it. For the first two thousand miles I must run it slowly, and I must bring it in often and have it adjusted.

We expect this in an automobile. But in a youngster we have the notion that the factory—which is the school or college—ought to turn him out all ready for a championship race at high speed.

It takes a lot of wisdom and patience to be the father of a boy who is starting in life. Boys must have a chance to get adjusted. You've got to give them time.

History of the Hat

The hat, as an article of man's attire, was invented in Paris by a Swiss in 1404. They became very popular. It used to be the custom of popes, in solemn conclave on Christmas Eve, to bless hats of violet silk, lined with ermine and embroidered with gold and jewels. These hats were sent to princes and commanders of armies as a high token of favor. The Jews of Spain were formerly compelled to wear yellow hats, and in many towns in Germany bankrupts had to wear green and yellow hats. Hats were first manufactured in England in 1510, and until 1785 were heavily taxed.

from which the Dons jumped into the sea and got ashore. But this ship was hard aground so Davis could not tow her away—and while trying to do so, the Dons seeing how few men he had with him, swarmed out to capture him. But Davis got away safely. In this battle, the English had two men killed and sixteen wounded. The Earl himself received a shot in his side and two in his shield; and his face was covered with blood from the stones cast by the Spaniards. His legs were badly scorched by gunpowder from the Spanish hand-grenades; and Lister was terribly wounded.

The Earl sailed to St. George's Island, but his weary men now wanted to go home; so the Earl sailed for England by way of the coast of Spain, where they could take more prizes. The Margaret leaked so badly that he sent her home with the prize from Brazil—and then ho! for the Spanish coast, "with a faire winde and a large!"

He captured a ship from Brazil; and then he sped off to hunt for another ship. He told Davis to follow him with the prize, and if Davis lost sight of him, to sail direct to England. As Davis soon lost sight of the Victorie, he appears to have sailed to England, and thus passes out of this picture.

Next day the Earl captured a vessel laden with sugar and just then he saw another ship; so he took after it "with all the sayles that he could packe on" the Victorie. He captured it and found that it was worth $500,000 in our money—so he put Lister on it with a prize crew, and sailed for England. Headwinds kept him out at sea so long that many of his men died of thirst, ere he got home. There he heard that his rich prize had gone down with Lister and all hands, save six men, off "Als Efferne—that is, Hell's Cliffe," in Cornwall.

Undismayed, next year (1591) with seven ships and a navy ship he again went a-buccaneering, but the Dons recaptured the rich prizes he had taken; and in a desperate battle, the Golden Noble was beset by six Spanish galleys, which killed Capt. Bayly and most of his crew, captured the Golden Noble, and re-took the rich cargo of spices.

This persevering buccaneer sailed out in 1592, took a rich prize, and sent it to England, but missed taking a great carrack at Flores in the Azores. Then he met and attacked the huge carrack, Madre de Dios, and a notable sea-fight ensued. Three other English ships (one a navy warship) came to aid him; and she was captured, after a desperate battle. Both her huge size and her immensely valuable cargo astounded England; and the Queen set the Earl's share of the booty as $180,000 of our money.

Vastly encouraged, next year (1593) he set out on his sixth buccaneering voyage and soon took three Catholic League French ships of such value as to repay the expenses of this foray thrice over. In the Azores, the heavily-armed warships of a big Spanish flota forced him to flee from their attempt to capture him. He sailed home, but sent three small ships to raid the Spanish Main. There they robbed the Margdrita pearl-fishery of $10,000 worth of booty, took its town and four barks; for which they got 2000 ducats ransom—all of which loot was sent home in the Pilgrim! The other two crossed the Caribbean Sea, fought a twenty-four hour battle in the Gulf of Honduras with seven Spanish vessels, which the Dons deserted. The Earl's freebooters looted and burnt six of them, and then took the other one to England.

In 1594, the Earl stayed home; but his three ships and two smaller vessels, while off St. Michael's Island in the Azores, attacked the huge carrack, Cinque Llagas, of 2000 tons, one of the Spanish King's finest ships. The English sea-terriers lay her aboard; but she caught afire, and thus set fire to the sails of the Earl's three ships. Rather than be burned alive, the naked Spanish sailors leapt overboard, and the English let them drown. Next morn, she blew up, her total loss being over 1100 Dons! The English vice-admiral and some of his men were killed and the admiral mortally wounded.

Unfazed by this, the Earl's sea-harriers sailed to Flores Island and there boldly attacked a big Spanish warship, the St. Philip, whose captain was present when a Spanish fleet surrounded and captured Sir Richard Grenville's ship, the Revenge, after a prolonged and desperate battle that is a classic among sea-fights. In revenge for that memorable loss of the Revenge, our heroes shattered the St. Philip terribly with their cannon; but most of the English officers were killed, which discouraged their men so much that they sheered off, and sailed back to England.

The Earl built the biggest, finest warship yet built in England by a British subject, and it so pleased the Queen that she named it the Scourge of Malice! But that year (1595) she called him back from its deck to her court. Meanwhile his sea-hawks took a caravel near Flores Island, and then cheekily attacked the St. Thomas, the vastly superior warship of the Spanish vice-admiral, who easily beat them off, with loss. So they sailed to Spain, and off its coast played pirate, in default of lawful booty, by seizing and taking to England three Dutch vessels with valuable cargoes destined for Spain.

The Earl's ninth voyage (1596) netted him a loss; as his thirty-four-gun Ascension was attacked off the Rock of Lisbon by six Spanish warships, two of which boarded her. A ferocious battle followed; great numbers of Dons were slaughtered; and the Spaniards sheered off from this sea-dragon, which had twenty killed and wounded. The Earl of Cumberland's tenth and last voyage—in 1598—saw the Spanish shipping shut up in Spain's seaports to escape this terror of the seas—so he raided the Canary Islands, got a little loot there, and sailed across the Atlantic to Porto Rico, where he landed 1000 men and captured its chief city, San Juan, with its forts and castles. He demanded a huge ransom, but the Dons refused to pay it; so he decided to keep this stronghold, as it then was the key to the Caribbean. But 700 of his men died of dysentery; so he could no longer hold it, and perforce had to sail home.

This fiasco completed his financial ruin; and presently he died of chagrin and melancholy—possibly because he never actually got to California! He was the leader of the pack of English werewolves of the waves, in his day—the worst of these English men of rank who raided the Dons under the pretense of patriotism, but really to profit themselves, by this grand larceny of private property on the high seas that had made the wise Cecil denounce them as plain pirates. Indeed, in writing to even Drake, Queen Elizabeth used to address him as:—"My deare Pyrat."

"If the Law Give a License to Steal, It Wouldn't Make a Thief Respectable"

"If the law is goin' to pension that kind o' woman, it ought to have a ornery-female fund."

"IT DIDN'T surprise me none when I heard about Sallie gettin' a divorce an' the custody o' Jim's future wages.

"I knowed it was comin'. I seen the weddin', an' I set there watchin' that little sharp-eyed heifer an' thinkin' to myself that she didn't look no more like a blushin' bride than a mouse trap does.

"I seen her look at Jim once, an' the look said plain as day that he was some kind o' varmint she had caught an' was goin' to skin an throw in the garbage can.

"She done it, all right; an' now she's back livin' with her folks an' has income enough to take care of all of 'em if Jim don't die or skip the country.

"If I was him, I'd light out. I don't care if I had to sacrifice ever' thing an' walk out o' town in my shirt tail, I'd get so far away the law couldn't reach me an' start over. I wouldn't let no schemin', hell-cat Jezebel trick me like that an' work me like a plow horse the rest o' my days.

"Sallie never meant to stay married. She wasn't decent enough to get the kind o' man she wanted, an' she was too lazy an' triflin' to work for a livin', so she just decided to make capital out o' bein' a female an' sell herself.

"She got a good price, all right. Most women as low-down as she is are outcasts that wind up in the gutter when they lose their good looks. But she was sharp enough to have the law on her side, an' now after one year o' sisterhood with them that's called 'fallen women,' she's retired an' livin' easy on a pension.

"I reckon she'll try to brazen it out like she hadn't done nothin' wrong, an' start callin' on all the women in town, but if she ever tries to set her foot in my house I'll set the dog on her.

"I don't want to truck with that kind o' females. I make allowance for the feeble-minded ones that drifts into lives o' sin, an' I took that poor Jones girl in when her own folks shut the door in her face; but a cold-blooded hussy that sells herself under cover o' law an' traps some fool man into supportin' her for life is meaner than a snake that don't rattle, an' hell is too good for her.

thing for nothing. If she is to give up the glories of conquest she'll want her price, Rex Sefton—marriage."

"And you think I won't pay that?" said the boy thickly.

"I think you are a white sahib with strong views on marrying—native," said Savaran with fierce amusement as the boy shivered. "Also there is Crystal Lind."

"Damn you for a swine!" shouted the boy, his cold defense breaking down. "You use even that as a weapon!"

"That and anything else that serves Savaran's ends—for such is the conqueror type," said the spare man largely. "I have always counted Crystal Lind my sheet anchor in the business of you and Ambar."

"I guessed that, too," Rex Sefton said so coolly that Savaran shot an anxious glance at him. "Amusing in its way, to see how even Savaran can make a mess of things."

"As how?" snarled Savaran, touched on the raw.

"It is you yourself who has made Crystal powerless."

"Explain!" rapped Savaran.

"You have placed me in a hopeless position," said the boy in a flat, dead voice. "Crystal is far away—the queen is here. I am a man, Savaran, and Ambar is lovely. I am down and out, Savaran, through you, and Ambar offers me wealth, power, position and opportunity for revenge. Can the mere memory of a girl I once knew stand against that?"

"Where does all this lead?" Savaran barked.

"I leave that to you," shrugged the boy. "Savaran himself had better straighten up the mess Savaran has created—if he can."

The eagle eyes flamed at the challenge.

"And that's not so hard," he said speculatively. "You can quietly and discreetly—die."

"I think not," said the boy. "You like me. And I don't have to remind Savaran that I once saved his life from an Arab sword."

"You young fox," cried Savaran, "you hold that over me?"

"Certainly," the boy whipped back. "One uses that and any other weapon that serves one's end. I have learned that much at least from the master of the art."

"Rex," Savaran cried, "you have written a line that will figure in history—you have beaten Savaran!"

He scowled in his genially ferocious way.

"And created the very satan of a problem into the bargain," he went on. "If I get you away I must face the fury of a woman in love—that means smash. While if I don't, you surrender to the love of the Kola Ambar—and that also means smash . . ."

His swift, fierce face was keen with thought for a spell, then he said with his savage whimsicality:

"No other way . . . Savaran must go on his march again. Pack quietly, Rex, we ride for Bemoy tonight."

"But you said I would be stopped," cried the boy, hardly able to suppress his elation.

"You—yes! But now Savaran will ride with you, and Savaran can ride through even the armies he himself has trained to close the border. Have no fear, son, Savaran will deliver you safe back to Crystal Lind."

"But it means you leaving all—this," cried the boy in sudden awe.

"What is a kingdom [illegible] or less to Savaran," cried the lea[illegible]nable to resist a gesture. "Besides, this is something in my own metier . . . Savaran rescues the man who would put him in prison and throws away a throne to do it."

But he added a rider to that five mornings later as they stood in the Bemoy village at which he had hired carriers to take Rex Sefton to safety—and Crystal Lind.

"Mbotu was right," he said. "It is dangerous to cross the path of a young lion hunting its first meat for its mate. Even Savaran must beware of lovers."

The New Woman Has Had So Much Attention That the Old Man Has Been Forgotten. Here's a Call for the Revival of His Rights

By Weare Holbrook

Mouse removing affords little opportunity for advancement.

RUDY VALLEE has been invited to deliver the commencement address at Binglethorpe College this year. Perhaps he hasn't received the invitation yet, but it is on its way. If he accepts, the class song, "Ave Atque Vale," will be revised in his honor and the statue of Alma Mater which stands on the campus with hands outstretched will be brought to its knees and rechristened Mammy.

For the girls want Rudy, and at Binglethorpe the girls usually get what they want. Less than a dozen years ago Binglethorpe became co-educational. A few young women were admitted cautiously during the war. More followed—until soon the classrooms resounded with girlish laughter; there was rouge on every doorknob and the dusty corridors of the reference library reeked of Narcisse Noir.

Today the classes are 98 per cent feminine; the student body is full of curves. There is beginning to be some talk of making the school co-educational again and admitting men.

Binglethorpe is only one of many institutions in similar circumstances. Women may have been submerged and deprived of educational advantages in the past, but they are making up for lost time now. They are coming into their own and everybody else's. Even the college yells at football games are an octave higher than they were.

But although the commencement addresses and baccalaureate sermons this June will be delivered before audiences made up almost entirely of ex-flappers, the speakers should not forget that there may be a few men present—men who, determined to get an education at any cost, have withstood the feminine invasion for four long years. They are inconspicuous in their black caps and gowns, and there is a wistful look in their eyes as they watch their fair classmates step forward to receive scholastic honors. Outnumbered and overshadowed; they have toiled diligently in an effort to compete with the toothpaste smiles of charming co-eds. But it is the girl with the golden hair that wears the laurel on the brow; brilliantine can accomplish more than midnight oil. Many schools now award lavallieres as a matter of course; there is no demand for medals.

So much attention has been given to the New Woman lately that almost every one has forgotten about the Old Man. The fact that males constitute an overwhelmed minority in this year's crop of graduates does not mean that they should be ignored entirely. They have their problems just as the girls have and they need all the help and encouragement that our leather-lunged commencement orators can offer.

The moment that a college graduate steps across the threshold of his alma mater, diploma in hand—that moment marks the turning point in his life. He turns to the left or to the right and makes his way through the world, hoping for the best. Sometimes, after comparings Things as They Are with Things as He Thought They Would Be, he turns around completely and re-enters his alma mater to work for an advanced degree. That, my dear, is how college professors are made.

But for the young man who comes out of colloge and stays out, there is no middle course. He must choose between marriage and a career. If he has been fortunate enough to win the love of a capable woman who will make up his mind for him, well and good. He will find plenty to keep him busy around the house. Home-making is a praiseworthy occupation, and too much cannot be said for it—although editorial writers frequently try.

There are men, however, who are not content to be mere husbands. They long for economic independence. Some of them remember dimly the days when wage earning was still a gentleman's privilege. Sitting by the fire on winter nights, they have listened to grandpa tell stirring tales of the brave pioneering days when he used to go to an office every morning at nine o'clock and work until five. The office was run entirely by men, although they had a few women to do the rough manual labor such as sweeping, dusting and washing the windows. "I tell you, we didn't take life as easy as you boys do," says grandpa, resuming his knitting, "but I rather enjoyed it."

A young man entering a business or professional field today will find his choice of occupations limited. Most of the desirable jobs are held by women, and the few men who still occupy positions of importance are so closely guarded by women secretaries that they are practically prisoners. He must be content to work for almost nothing at first, and to do unskilled labor—addressing envelopes, answering telephones and running errands.

But if he applies himself earnestly to these tasks—addressing envelopes thoroughly on both sides, answering telephones even before they ring, and running errands positively ragged—he can make himself so indispensable to his employer that she will elevate him to a post of responsibility. Eventually he may become her personal secretary and learn more about the business than she knows herself. But he can never hope to step into his boss's shoes as long as they are triple A's with French heels.

In spite of what the rabid feminists say, there are some things that women cannot do as well as men can. Getting off a street car the right way, for instance, or lighting a cigarette in the wind, or removing a mouse from a trap, is distinctly a man's job. But one cannot make a living by getting off street cars or lighting cigarettes, and mouse removing as a profession affords very little opportunity for advancement.

One of the few paying trades which have not been usurped by women is plumbing and steamfitting. I have yet to hear of a lady steamfitter. Perhaps this is because steamfitters are always called "Jake" and there has never been a lady of that name. Gardeners and under-gardners (the latter look after potatoes and onions) usually are men, but they are employed only on large estates where jobs are hereditary.

A glance through the classified advertisements in the newspapers offers little encouragement to the young man just out of college. There are columns headed "Help Wanted—Male," but apparently they are hoaxes perpetrated by practical jokers. The ads call for tuckers, shirrers, bushelmen, stationary doll's eye setters, experienced glass benders, chandelier chasers and other fantastic and highly specialized workers. They are amusing reading, and one should not take them seriously. It must be quite obvious that an experienced glass bender is merely a person who won't try to bend glass any more because he has learned by experience that it can't be done. And no self-respecting youth who has ever fallen for the left-handed monkey wrench gag is going to let anyone send him out chasing chandeliers.

A generation ago, when women began to invade business and professional fields, men regarded them with tolerant amusement. It was generally agreed that their shrill insistence upon economic independence was a passing whim; once they got it, they would soon tire of it. It was a part of the feminist movement, like cigarette smoking, short hair and soprano profanity.

But a little earning is a dangerous thing. The girls liked their new jobs; they worked hard and reveled in their freedom from the charity that begins at home. The mysteries of money-making which had been jealously concealed from them for so many years proved to be comparatively simple. They discovered that the secret of success consists in acting busy whether one has anything to do or not, and they possessed a natural aptitude for acting busy. Soon they had pre-empted most of the positions of responsibility and authority; they were hiring and firing without the aid of a single big black cigar.

A favorite phrase of commencement day orators is "the various walks of life." It sounds pleasant and leisurely. But mere man cannot get far when he has to keep stepping aside to let the ladies by. It is high time that some one organized a Masculinist movement to restore the rights of American husbands, brothers, father and sons.

At the present time, a young man in the average graduating class is outnumbered by women ten to one. He leaves his alma mater with a well-developed inferiority complex; and when he gets out in the world and begins to look for a job, it grows worse. He is a bright young man with an impressive degree, but he cannot compete with the hundreds of equally bright young women with equally impressive degrees.

In fact, about all a fellow can do with a college diploma is to roll it up into a megaphone and croon through it.

"We didn't take life as easy as you do," says grandpa.

Nearly $3,000,000 worth of bed feathers were imported into Germany in the last twelve months.

THREE O'CLOCK in the MORNING

An Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

A PIERCING, night-shattering peal.

Helen aroused to a troubled daze. Still dreaming?

No, the harsh reality of another clamorous ring.

A now-awake glance at the radium-dialed alarm. Ten minutes of three!

Shivering from the slumbrous warmth to the icy open-window draught. Groping in the panicky dark for her robe and slippers.

Again the strident summons. The heart-clutching threat of a middle-of-the-night ring. Only bad news so imperative.

No responsive stir from Warren's bed. The blanketed mound still oblivious.

Trembling with cold and apprehension, she flew to the hall door.

Mrs. Hoyt! Their next-apartment neighbor—

Her weeping dishevelment! Half-braided hair. Blue silk pajamas under a rainbow flannel robe.

"Oh, I—I couldn't stand it another minute!" breathlessly. "Jack—I'm almost frantic!"

"What's happened?" anxioused Helen, drawing her in.

"Something awful! He said he'd be back by eleven—and it's after three!"

"Why, he's just been delayed. Oh, you're frozen! Where did he go?"

"To the office. He had to work tonight—but only for a couple of hours! Oh, something's happened! What shall I do?"

A distracted outburst. The tears grotesquing her cold-creamed face.

"Have you called the office?" switching on the cheery library lights.

"Yes, yes, but no answer. And both his clubs—they hadn't seen him. Oh, if he's been held up—shot! I always begged him not to carry so much money."

Murmuring ineffective reassurances, Helen led her to the couch.

"It's dreadful to get you up at this hour! But I—I thought Mr. Curtis would know what to do," sobbingly. "Call the police or whoever one calls—"

"Of course he'll do anything he can. I'll wake him—Here he is now!"

"What's all this?" Warren at the door, blinking at the light.

"Oh, Mr. Curtis, you must help me!" hysterically, starting up. "Help me find Jack! I don't know what to do—"

"Now take it easy," girdling his plaid bathrobe. "Calm down and let me get it straight."

An excited explanation, incoherent with premonitions of disaster.

"Nothing to get hysterics over," his nonchalant assurance. "Probably roped into a poker session and forgot the time."

"Jack never plays poker—and he'd phone if he could. No, something's happened!" her hands at her throat. "Something terrible!"

"Nonsense! Hoyt can take care of himself," running sleepy fingers through his tousled hair. "He'll breeze in any minute—may be there now."

"He isn't—I know he isn't! And I just can't stay there alone—"

"We'll go with you," Helen's sympathetic offer. "No, you mustn't come."

Waving back the wide-eyed Pussy Purr-Mew as they slippered out to the dim hall.

A ludicrous parade. Hugging their robes against the corridor draughts.

In the Hoyts' apartment, all the lights on. An incongruous brilliance for this harrowing three-in-the-morning drama.

"Jack!" Mrs. Hoyt's tremolo call. "Jack, are you here?"

A shrill bark the only answer. A bright-eyed Pekingese trotting out.

Carrying the dog into the colorful living-room. Burying her sobs in its russet fur.

"Now pull yourself together," Warren's hysteria-checking brusqueness. "You'll be ashamed of this carrying on when Hoyt gets back."

"He'll never come back! This's the end—I feel it!"

Dropping into a deep chair, the frightened dog whimpering on her lap.

"Oh, I can see him—in the morgue!" wildly. "Stretched out on a slab—"

"The morgue!" shuddered Helen. "Oh, don't hold such a thought!"

"Certainly not!" he snorted. "Even if he were hurt—must've had some identification. But we'll settle that right now."

Striding to the disordered table. Snatching the telephone directory from the floor.

"M—Moos—" turning the pages. "Morges, Morgoglione, Morgowsky—Here we are!"

"What—who're you going to call, Mr. Curtis?" jumping up.

"The morgue!" grimly. "So you'll know he's not—Lexington 0565."

Helen huddled against the still-tepid radiator. Quivering suspense. If he should be—

"Morgue? . . . I'm trying to locate a missing man . . . Tall, reddish hair, heavy—about thirty-five. . . . Yes, tonight . . . I see."

"What'd they say?" Mrs. Hoyt clutching his flanneled elbow.

"Only two casualties tonight—both women. Now you'd better go to bed—"

"Then where is he? Oh, do something!" desperately. "Call the police!"

"Afraid Hoyt won't relish being chalked up at the police station. I'd be darn sore if anyone set the cops on me."

"What does it matter? What does anything matter—if only we find him!"

Helen repeating futile consolations as again Warren scanned the directory.

"Spring 3100 . . . Missing Persons Bureau? . . . I'm trying to locate John Weatherbee Hoyt. Due home from his office at eleven, but hasn't turned up."

Crisply giving the apartment and business address.

"What's that? . . . About thirty-five . . . Guess you're right, but Mrs. Hoyt is worried . . . Fair, clean-shaven, thick-set, about five foot ten—"

"Five eleven!" her tearful correction. "A gray suit, gray overcoat, and that awful green hat! His clothes the one thing we ever quarreled about. Oh, I wouldn't care what he wore—if I only had him back!"

". . . about a hundred ninety," ignoring her anguished remorse, Warren relayed the description. "Then you'll phone if you hear anything? . . . Thanks."

Snapping down the receiver, he swung around with a stern,

"Now you've just worked up a false alarm. Know what that officer said? Any man of thirty-five should be allowed a night off without bein' sleuthed after!"

"He doesn't know Jack! He'd never, never stay out like this without phoning. Oh, it's almost four! Where is he? What has happened?"

"He may be where he can't phone," Helen now curled in a chair, her bare ankles under her. "A subway block—"

"He loathes the subway. Always takes a taxi or walks. That awful traffic—he must've been run over! And unconscious, or he'd have someone phone me. Can't you call up the hospitals?"

"Pretty tall order. Hundreds of 'em," once more opening the bulky Manhattan directory. "I'll try the Amsterdam—nearest his office. If he's not there—"

"Well, well, what's going on here? Pajama party?"

In the doorway—Mr. Hoyt!

His grinning amazement at the negligeed tableau.

"Jack!" a wild shriek. "You're all right?" dashing to him. "You're not hurt?"

"Hurt?" bewildered. "Why should I be? What's wrong, anyway"

"What's wrong?" shrilly. "You come home at four o'clock—and ask what's wrong!"

Helen shrinking back. The embarrassment of this too-intimate scene.

But how to break away? And the urge to see it out—to the end of the drama. Where had he been? What excuse—

"Why, Doris, I rushed home the minute the show was over. They last till all hours—thought you knew that."

"The show!" staring incredulity. "John Hoyt, you mean to say you've been to a show? And I've been simply frantic—"

"What was there to be frantic about? Got my message, didn't you?"

"Message? What message"

"You didn't? I'm terribly sorry, Doris," a consoling arm about her. "I told that sap Watkins to phone you I'd be late. Tracy dropped in and dragged me to the Gayeties dress rehearsal."

"The Gayeties! Oh, Jack, how could you?" chokingly. "Amusing yourself when I was suffering so!"

"Why, I was sure Watkins gave you the message. Ought to fire that fathead! If I'd known," he propitiated, "I'd have rushed right home."

"Told Mrs. Hoyt she was foolish to worry," Warren lumbered up from his on-the-table perch. "Thought you might be shooting craps somewhere."

"Not my line," he laughed. "But how should I know that dumb clerk of mine forgot to phone?"

"Afraid we've given you a bad name with the police, Hoyt. Even tried to locate you at the morgue. Startin' on the hospitals, when you blew in."

"The morgue? No, thanks, I'm pretty much alive!" rapping the walnut table. "Shame Doris yanked you out of bed. And Mrs. Curtis, too."

"Oh, I—it's quite all right," fluttered Helen, self-consciously drawing closer her robe. "Now we know you're safe. Mrs. Hoyt was so upset—"

"Can't see that we were much help," gruffly. "Well, now the wandering boy's showed up, back to bed for me!"

Safe in their own apartment without any awkward encounters.

"Hello, Pussums!" to the inquiring Pussy Purr-Mew. "Want to know what it's all about? Lot of fireworks over nothing."

"Oh, I'm frozen!" Helen hastily cuddling into bed. "And so sleepy—"

"Golly, almost time to get up," grunted Warren, slumping under the covers. "Of all the idiotic stunts! Roustin' us out to locate his remains—and Hoyt hittin' it up at a dress rehearsal!"

"I know, it seems foolish, now," switching off the bedside lamp. "But dear, she was really terrified. And if it were you, I'd have felt the same way!"

"You would, eh? Well, if I ever stay out till 4 g.m.—you're not to act the same way! Rousin' the house because he didn't report on schedule!" a pillow-muffled snort. "Got her trained wrong. Guess that policeman had the right dope. Any he-man's entitled to a night off—without bein' paged at the morgue!"

ARMAGEDDON

By James T. Shotwell

No more the horsemen reap the Syrian plain
With death for harvest, such as once they sought
At Armageddon; peaceful stands the grain,
And dust is in the furrows where they fought.

Bugles of Pharaoh or the desert kings
Sound no reveille; shouldering his gun
No British Tommy "Tipperary" sings;
'Tis silent on the hills—as at Verdun.

Dust in the furrows where great empires passed!
Might that was tragedy! Yet short miles away
Was dreamed a shining vision that will last,
The City of Man that knoweth no decay;
No marching troops, no threat of power or death,
Peace to all men—the dream of Nazareth.

The New Woman Has Had So Much Attention That the Old Man Has Been Forgotten. Here's

Werewolves of the Waves

An English Earl Sails for California

By George Wycherley Kirkman

THE biggest buccaneer that ever sailed for California was that champion corsair, George Clifford, Earl of Cumberland, who had inherited a great fortune, and sat on the court of peers that tried Mary, Queen of Scots. A handsome man of elegant accomplishments, at the tournaments held by the courtiers of Queen Elizabeth he often took the prize; and one day when she dropped one of her gloves—for she was vain of her lovely white hands—this earl picked it up; but she told him to keep it. He festooned it with diamonds, and always wore it on the front of his hat at public gatherings—so no wonder that he soon became one of the Queen's great favorites.

A Protestant, as well as a patriot, he equipped three armed ships to help Holland against the King of Spain, who was trying to crush that little Protestant country. But this gay earl's extreme extravagance at court had crippled his fortunes; so he decided to imitate Drake's successful looting of the Dons in the American Pacific, and thus replenish his coffers. He ordered the commander of this squadron of three ships to sail through Magellan Straits, rob the Dons on sea and shores and to try to take a Manila galleon off California, now that Fenton's voyage thither had proved such a fiasco.

However, he did not accompany his squadron, which sailed from Dartmouth on August 23, 1586, and in late October arrived at Sierra Leone, Africa. Here its commander took on wood and water, and steered westward across the Atlantic. They struck the southermost coast of Brazil and sailed southward toward Magellan Straits, capturing a Portuguese vessel near the Rio de la Plata; next day took another one on which there were twenty-five negresses (slaves,) an Irishman and four friars; also many holy books, rosaries and pictures of saints, valued at 1000 ducats.

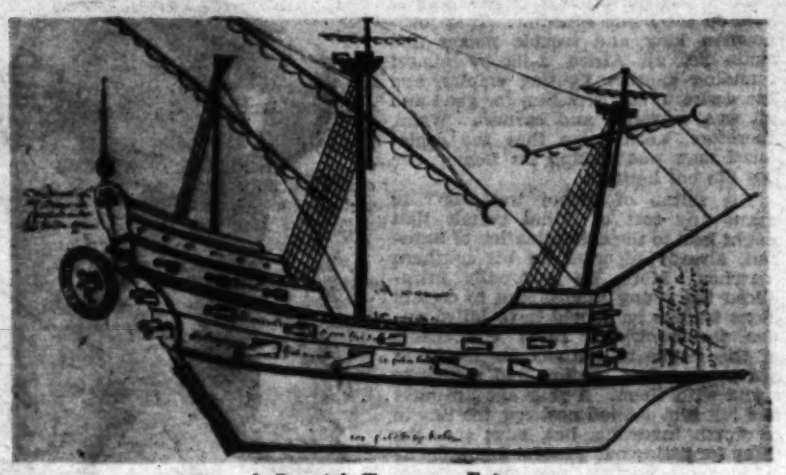
Sailing on southward still, they tried, but not very hard, to make Magellan Straits against the head winds that baffled and delayed them so long that finally their food ran short. Whereupon their commander got cold feet; so he turned to the right about and sailed northward along the South American coast, plundering this coast and getting a little loot; also they captured a few vessels at sea, and thus obtained some provisions.

By this time, it was June, 1587, and the mutinous buccaneers demanded that the squadron return to England, so this weak-kneed commander meekly assented; and on September 30, 1587 the werewolves arrived in England. This unprofitable voyage of the Earl's left him all the more out of pocket, instead of filling them, as he had fondly hoped to do by the buccaneering. The Earl of Cumberland was not only a bold and dauntless sea-knight, but the most inveterate buccaneer of all. Between this first voyage of 1586 and the year of 1598, he actually engaged in no less than ten buccaneering voyages, to rob the Dons afloat and ashore.

But his patriotism was gallantly displayed in July, 1588 when the Invincible Armada came to conquer England and was met in the English Channel by the English ships in a glorious battle. The Earl was in command of the Queen's Navy man-of-war, the Elizabeth Bonaventure of 600 tons—a big ship in those days. His courageous conduct in that historic sea-battle pleased Queen Elizabeth so greatly that, as a mark of her royal favor, only two months later she gave him a commission as one of her admirals now operating openly against the Spaniards. And to assist him in his newly-projected voyage to rob the Dons in the American Pacific, she loaned him the Golden Lion, a ship of the royal navy.

This noble Earl had the Golden Lion equipped and manned at his own expense. A number of brave English gentlemen sailed aboard it, as volunteers, when he left England, about the end of October, 1588, bound for Chile, Peru, Mexico, California and all way-points that promised any plunder. Great hopes had he of thus recuperating his depleted fortune; but he soon met with head winds and much bad weather, on his route thither.

Indeed, he presently ran into a terrific storm that so imperilled the Golden Lion, that he had to have its mainmast cut by the board, in order to save the ship from foundering. Thus crippled, she was useless for his purposes. So perforce he had to sail her back to England, with nothing to show for this brave adventure and great expense, except a small Spanish ship laden with merchandise from Spain that he had captured just before he met with this disaster.



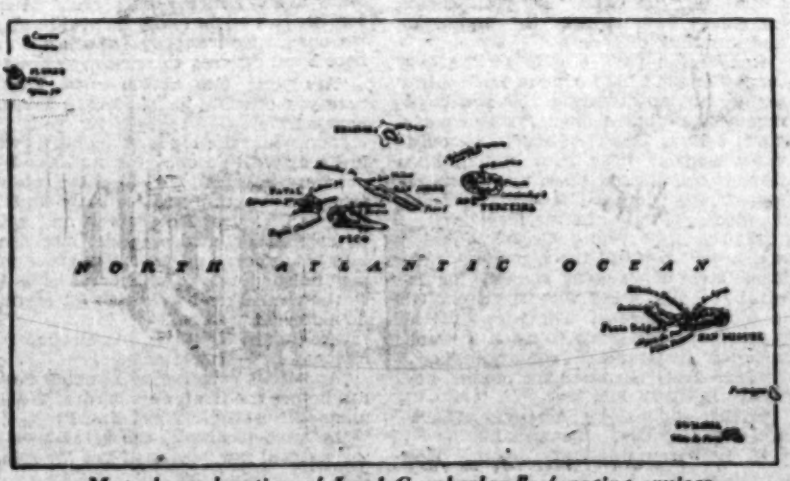
A Spanish Treasure Frigate

After this bootless buccaneering, was the Earl down-hearted? Not so you could notice it! In fact, he soon got up his third buccaneering expedition, with which he went as admiral of his squadron of four ships—the Megg, whose captain, John Monson, was vice-admiral; the Margaret captained by Edward Careless, rear-admiral, who was captain of the Hope in Drake's expedition to Cartagena; a caravel under Capt. Pigeon; and as flagship, a royal man-of-war, the Victorie, lent him by the Queen, and captained by Christopher Lister, a dauntless and resolute wight.

The Earl's squadron, manned by 400 "gentlemen, soldiers and sailors," sailed from Plymouth on June 18, 1589, and steered southward in the Atlantic. Three days later, he swooped down like a seahawk on three French vessels laden with codfish caught in Newfoundland; and two of them proving to belong to French cities of the Catholic League. They were taken as "lawful prizes" by this Protestant noble, who distributed some of the codfish to his ships, and then sent the two French ships to England, under prize crews, after sending the Frenchmen on them home in the other French ship. But when the Earl this same day met some Protestant ships from Emden and Rotterdam bound for the Huguenot (French Protestant) port of La Rochelle, he let them pass, in that bigoted age of fanatical religious zeal.

A week later, the Earl met Drake's fleet returning from the failure to take Lisbon, and so short of food that had not the Earl given them provisions many of the fleet would have starved to death. Off the coast of Spain, he encountered eleven ships, with which he had a skirmish, ere their masters gave in and showed their papers from the Hanse League towns of Hamburg, Bremen, Lubeck, etc., and therefore neutrals. On some of them were spices belonging to a Jew of Lisbon, then under Spanish dominion; so the Earl said these naughty spices were "lawful prize" and he therefore "eased" these ships of £7000 worth of them, and let them all go after four days, taking with him seven of their men who wanted to go a-cruise with him.

Having thus played the pirate, this English viking stood across the Atlantic to the Azores; and there at St. Michael's on August 1, he saw four ships anchored under the guns of its castle—so the Earl unfurled Spanish flags and pretended to be a Don. But at about eleven o'clock that night, he sent his armed, well-manned boats in to these vessels; found that one of them was a London ship; the three others Spanish, so he cut the anchor cables and hawsers of these three, and towed them away with his boats. The Spaniards on the captured ships leapt overboard and swam ashore "with lowde and lamentable outeries," answered by the terrified yelling of the townsfolk, with the castle firing cannonballs furiously at the foe that its gunners could not see, in the deep dark of midnight, and hence could not hit.



Map shows location of Lord Cumberland's foraging cruises.

After this thrilling scene, the Earl found his prizes were laden with wine and salad oil from Spain. He chased a Spanish caravel ashore here, and got its letters telling that the treasure-laden carracks—the objects of this buccaneering cruise—had sailed from Terceira. So the Earl sailed westward, after capturing a little Spanish ship laden with Madeira wine, silk, taffeta, etc.; and arrived at Flores Island, where he traded his booty—wine, oil and pepper—for sheep and beeves.

Edward Wright, a learned English mathematician, the real and first inventor of the map projection that Mercator stole from him, was with the Earl on this expedition. He wrote an account of the cruise, and says that on hearing some carracks from the East Indies were in Fayal Road, the Earl put in there and saw some Spanish ships were moored. He sent Captains Lister and Monson in his "skiffe" to look them over. Lister made a desperate attack upon a Spanish vessel armed with fourteen cannon.

The skiff fought her for an hour, and then was joined by others of the Earl's boats, one of which boarded the Don on her quarter while the other's crew boarded her on her hawse. As the English leapt aboard on one side, all the Don's save four men, leapt overboard into the sea on her other side. The English towed her away and found she was from Porto Rico, laden with sugar, ginger and hides. Despite the castle's furious cannonading at them, these boats then rowed calmly in and towed out five small Spanish ships.

In this exploit, the Earl was aided by several English buccaneer ships, including the ship of Capt. John Davis, one of England's ablest navigators and finest sailors, who had been with Fenton's abortive expedition in 1582. Since then he had achieved lasting fame as a renowned Arctic explorer. After his Arctic voyages, a French Catholic warship had looted his ship; so he was now out both for revenge and for booty to recoup his losses—in pursuance of which, he now joined his ship to the Earl's squadron.

The Earl landed and took the town of Fayal; and his men plundered the town, but did not destroy it—so the townsfolk ransomed it from him for 2000 ducats—"the moste parte of which was in church plate!"—and the Earl also took the fifty-eight cannon from its fort.

The Earl now sailed to Graciosa Island and sent his boats ashore to get water. But the Graciosans opened fire on them with a big cannon, which was hauled along the seashore by oxen—whereupon the English ships cannonaded the Graciosans and their unique ox-artillery. A truce was declared; but water was very scarce, so the islanders gave him sixty butts of wine.

Cruising around the Azores, he saw the fifteen big armed Spanish treasure-frigates of the West Indies fleet enter the harbor of Angra on Terceira Island and anchor under the cannon of its fort and castle. These Dons were far too big game for the Earl, so he sheered off, after firing a few shots at them. Sailing over to St. Michael's Island, he sent a party ashore for water; but their powder gave out in the ensuing battle. "Not being able to prevaile at so greate oddes, we returned frustrate."

Off he sailed to St. Mary's Island, where he sent Capt. Lister in the pinnace with seventy men to the shore for water. But when near the town, Lister saw two Spanish ships anchored there; so, as he was "much pestered" with too many men on his boat, he put some of them in Capt. Davis's boats and rowed toward the Dons. The Dons "in their shirtes" were wading ashore and towing their ships, to run them aground—while the islanders fired cannon from their fort at the English sailors.

But Lister boarded the nearest Spanish ship, his men still shooting at the Dons, who presently dived overboard and swam ashore. Lister cut her cables and towed her away. Meanwhile, Capt. Davis captured the other Spanish ship,

Damned spoilsport boy, Rex. Do you about them all?"

"We'll put up a fight first," snarled the boy.

"We?" mocked Savaran. "Who stands behind you?"

Rex Sefton swung a wild glance back at the askari his money had hired. They were cheering Savaran as wildly as the Gran Fess warriors.

"You've won them over, you treacherous beast," Rex Sefton cried. "All right, then." He lifted his pistol and fired point blank at the spider spare adventurer's breast.

The pistol clicked feebly four times, no explosions came, the Savaran laughed.

"Good boy, Rex," he said. "I knew you had the pluck of a wild cat. That's why I took no risks." The boy choked and put his hands to his face. "Play up, man," snapped Savaran, "and mount. Can't you see I'm helping you save face? You'll ride before the queen at Savaran's side."

The boy mounted mechanically. A flutter of wild riders closed round them and they rode off between wildly cheering ranks. Savaran, his bright eyes missing nothing, cried triumphantly:

"Fine stuff, Rex. First rate fighting material. With these I'll have an empire in a year."

"Damn you," snarled the boy. "Why did you play this filthy trick on me?"

"Trick, maybe," cried Savaran, "filthy—no! Don't you recognize the daring of a master when you meet it?"

"You made use of my helpless position at Bemoy—"

"Made use!" the eagle face twisted in its dry fierce laugh. "Boy, haven't you grasped the meaning of Savaran yet? It was I who made your position hopeless. I was the gree-gree man who scared your 'boys' into bolting. It was a word from me that made Ntila run. Savaran leaves nothing to chance. I meant you to turn to Lee Washington as your only hope—and indeed, I was."

"Damn you, you've made me the laughing stock of Africa," cried Rex Sefton. "All because I trusted a liar—"

"Savaran does not lie. I told you plainly I would not join you in hunting Savaran," cried the lean man.

"You told me plainly time and time again that you had word from natives that Savaran was heading for the Gran Fess—"

"Well, wasn't he?" asked the lean man with a flash of white teeth. "I had an appointment with the Gran Fess, and Savaran never fails an appointment no matter what redoubtable young lion stands in his path."

His bright eyes studied the misery strained face of the youngster.

"Stiffen up, Rex," he said. "It was a big gamble in which we both risked big things. You challenged Savaran, and a devilish stiff challenge, too. You barred my way, you set all Bemoy itching for blood money. You smashed my chances of reaching the Gran Fess on my own by frightening the man I depended on into withholding carriers and money. You had me in a corner, Rex, and the only way out of it was to get you to carry me in safety through a wilderness of enemies. It was a stroke after Savaran's own heart, so I dared the gamble."

"And won," groaned the boy. "And what of me? Do you jail me or hang me or what?"

"Not necessarily either," grinned Savaran. "I like you, Rex. Also you are a good soldier. Within a month there will be campaigning here such as your service will never offer you, with promotion and rewards to match."

"I'm a soldier," said the boy fiercely. "but a British soldier, not a dirty filibuster. I'll see you in hell first."

"You'll see me," cried Savaran with his eagle's gesture, "on the throne beside the Kola Ambar."

Before the boy could find the suitable venom for a reply Savaran spurred ahead to where an old gray Arab with an anxious face was waiting to talk with him.

After three hours riding they came to the maze of mud huts that made the capital of the Gran Fess. Into the great palaver place they rode amid a whirl of cheers, and across it to where, incongruous as a wart on a face, one of those tipsy cake and over ornamented villas that French millionaires build on the Riviera stood bright amid the houses of mud.

"The royal palace," said the sardonic voice of the lean king maker at Rex Sefton's side. "The Kola Ambar has a feeling for progress . . . There she is on the terrace."

Rex Sefton looked quickly, said quickly: "Good God! She's lovely."

And indeed, Ambar, queen of the Gran Fess was. She was a slim and electric creature; golden skinned, delicate of feature. And there shone from her splendid eyes that burning ardor that tells of the quick and untrammeled passion of the tropics.

"Not bad for a—Nigger," grinned Savaran.

"Nigger! She's white," cried the boy thickly, "and wonderful."

Savaran looked at him with bright sardonic eyes.

"Certainly, a wonderful Arab princess—but a native all the same," he reminded. "And for a white man to admire her—!"

The boy answered nothing. He stared at the golden queen who stared back at him.

"Wonderful, yes," frowned the lean adventurer following his own thoughts. "But beware of the women of the East, my son, however, wonderful. She's decided she won't be queen of half Northwest Africa just now, if you please, but will take a slap at the Belgians instead, because they give her only a ten gun salute where her dignity demands nineteen."

They dismounted, bowed before the Kola, who cried in French, of which she was rather proud:

"Welcome Zavarani, sword of kings and humbler of the Belgians to be," and gave a slim hand for his wry lips to kiss. And presently she was saying in the direct way of the Arab:

"And thy friend, who is the most beautiful of all men, how is he called and what is he, Zavarani?"

"He is Steffi, an English soldier, O queen of loveliness as well as men. And he is a riddle, too. I am yet to be sure whether I am his prisoner or he mine."

"I will solve thy riddle," said the Kola Ambar, her eyes glowing with a new fire as she stared at Rex Sefton. "He will come to my palace, for he is beautiful. I think he will be the next man I marry."

Savaran's fierce face grew grim. Suddenly he felt again, as he had felt when with Mbotu, that as Napoleon had his Wellington, so this boy might be his destiny.

Savaran did not like this new Rex Sefton at all. The boy stood dressed in the embroidered silks of a court dandy.

Savaran glared at him; Savaran said with harsh ferocity: "What am I going to do with you, you young jackal? You're spoiling my plans."

"I mean to," said Rex Sefton with a strained coldness. "And what can you do?"

"Today," said Savaran grimly, "I warned the queen that you are a Roumi spy, sent expressly to undermine her throne."

"She told me about that," said the boy with a sort of wretched mockery. "We both laughed over it."

"Yes, I wanted to know if she told you state council secrets," said Savaran. "It has got that far between you then?"

"The queen," said the boy very red, but deliberately, "is madly in love with me, and love is going to beat you after all, Savaran."

"You think so?" said the spare man savagely.

"I know it," said the boy evenly. "She is in love with me, she listens to me. She'll—she'll do anything to win me. Hasn't she already held up your military schemes while she listens to my suggestions for peace and progress?"

"Listens—just that. A mere paissng fancy . . . With you out of the way—" Savaran considered the boy shrewdly—"I think I'll pack you off to the frontier tonight, Rex Sefton."

The boy's set face lit up with a gleam of triumph . . . had he been playing for that? It went blank under the searching eyes, and he said doggedly.

"You know that's impossible, Savaran. She'd know. We'd—I'd be retaken before I was half way to the frontier. She won't let me slip now."

"Maybe," frowned the lean man. "Come in with me, boy. Declare publicly that you desire to win military glory in my campaign. She won't be able to stop you, it's what Arab women expect of their men. And when we're in the field I'll manage a way of escape—"

"I've already told you I'll see you damned before I even pretend to join your filibustering game," cried the boy.

"You young fool!" snarled Savaran. "You know what your end will be. You know her way with reluctant lovers and incompatible husbands—or haven't you seen the graveyard?"

Rex Sefton winced but he said evenly: "Before that happens I shall have smashed you, Savaran."

"And am I to be executed in state or merely booted across the frontier?" jeered the eagle faced man.

"Handed over to the British police as a common felon," said the boy, "according to my first plan."

"I always did like you, Rex; a spirit after Savaran's own heart. And you thing you can persuade the lovely Ambar to do this?"

"I am going to persuade her," said the boy.

"And pay the price?"

"What price?" asked the boy wincing.

"Are you trying to bluff yourself as well as me?" mocked the gypsy adventurer. "But we're neither of us such fools, Rex. The lovely Ambar is infatuated with you—to my annoyance I know it. But she is an Arab as well as a lovesick woman. She will not give some-

BEWARE THE YOU

By Douglas Newton

MBOTU, the Toad, trader in saffron and ghee, secret financier of ivory smugglers and slayers, of holy wars and filibusters generally, listened and yet was glum. And that was unique, for it was Savaran who talked.

Savaran, squatting on a divan, a slightly ragged eagle of a man, read the Negro Rothschild's unease and broke off short and fierce.

"Why are there qualms in thy belly, O Toad? Do you doubt Savaran's power over the Gran Fess? Do you doubt my having my way with the Kola Ambar?"

"Ambar of the Gran Fess is doubly fickle," said Mbotu. "She is queen as well as woman. She is reputed wayward in her fancies. Three times already she hath cried: 'I divorce thee,' and five other husbands knew legal separation by the sword."

"And those, knowing Savaran, think he might fail her fancy?"

"Nay! Nay!" cried Mbotu anxiously, "All Africa knows that Zavarani is irresistible to women as well as in war."

"Also the world," corrected Savaran with a flash of strong white teeth. "Why, then, does Mbotu hold back when Savaran offers him Gran Fess' ivory and easy gold?"

"In Bemoy," croaked Mbotu, "Is a white lion who lives only for the hour when he takes thee in chains to his king."

"A white man!" frowned Savaran. "What sort—Manjago? Manweewee?"

The independent sultanate of Bemoy was administered and policed by Portuguese and French.

"Inglis!" Mbotu spoke as though uttering the word of doom.

"An Englishman!" snapped Savaran. "What does an Englishman in Bemoy?"

"That is thy peril, Zavarani," said Mbotu, suddenly eloquent with urgency. "He is there solely to catch thee. He is a government man, a soldier in his own land, the Malaria coast, with many police under him and rulership over many miles and many men. Yet, all these things he has cast aside that he may put a string about thy neck and lead thee to prison. He does this for a woman."

"A woman! A woman has set him on to Savaran?"

"Yallah! It is more than just a woman," said the Negro. "It is she whom he wills to marry. Every night he takes her picture from his bosom and swears on it to take thee. His servants have spoken of this."

"He is young!" frowned Savaran, beginning to see.

"So young that only down shines on his cheeks," nodded Mbotu. "Also he is beautiful to look on, having hair of gold and kingly features."

"And you think that Savaran, the breaker of chieftains, must tremble because a love sick boy hopes to use him as a short cut to promotion?"

"We have a proverb," said Mbotu. "It is: 'Sooner fight the elephant with bare hands than, armed with guns, cross the path of the young lion who hunts the first meat for his mate.'"

"Savaran will make you a better," said the lean man fiercely. "'What old lion fears the milk teeth of a cub?'"

"But this youth, Steffi, hath teeth," protested Mbotu. "He hath the training of a soldier; he knows the ways of Africa —and he has money! See, O Zavarani, he is wise. He buys fighting askari from Za Salah of Bemoy, one hundred and twenty of them. Rifles he buys and ammunition, also carriers with skoff for a long trail. And more! He sits daily with Ntila, the Jackal, tempting him dollar by dollar to forget his fears and help in the hunt for thee."

Ntila was the cleverest and wickedest bush tracker in Northwest Africa.

Savaran stared reflectively at Mbotu. He asked: "Has he won Ntila?"

"Not yet," admitted the Negro. "But already the dazzle of gold gets between Ntila and his fear. Will you give up this Gran Fess venture?"

"I! Savaran give up a triumph! I will march with this Steffi himself to the Gran Fess."

"March with Steffi himself! But he hunts thee!"

"We will hunt me together," grinned Savaran. "Hunt me like coupled hounds on one scent. And that scent will carry us into the Gran Fess land. It will be a hunting worthy of Savaran."

Rex Sefton clutched at the American, Lee Washington, as a drowning man grabs at a life line in a stormy sea.

Rex Sefton, one of those gilt fair, viking built, thrusting youngsters, was having his bad moment. Arriving at Bemoy City heady with the optimism of youth, he had abruptly been pancaked flat by one of those collapses of plan youth rarely foresees.

From the moment when he had realized that a subaltern's job in the Malaria coast police was no high road to swift advancement and quick marriage, he had seen that his only hope for both lay in gaining renown by some big and dramatic coup. To take Savaran single handed was quite obviously the largest item on the honor schedule. That journeyman king and trouble maker had again set all Africa a-jig by almost founding another fighting empire, and the desire to suppress him for good and all was universal and earnest. When, therefore, word came that the eagle-faced man was making for Bemoy, the boy did not hesitate.

The sultan of Bemoy was eager to grant any sort of lethal permit that might lead to the extermination of Savaran, already reported on his southern marches. More, he personally introduced the young Englishman to certain pious traders he should have jailed under the backward races enactments of the league of nations for traffic in arms. And Rex Sefton had money to spend with them. A year ago an uncle had left him a small nest egg, too tiny to be worth investing, but, now, just the thing for fitting out a useful kaum (commando) of fighting men and carriers. Certainly, he argued, Fate was dealing him all the aces.

And then, just as his plans were complete, when they only needed the crowning touch of winning Ntila, the tracker, the bottom fell out of everything. His fighters and carrier "boys" scattered in a single night, while Ntila was as if he had never been. Something had happened. Za Salah, responsible for the "boys," muttered something about a gree-gree man, who, coming out of the void had cast the stones and foretold naught but disaster for any who marched with Steffi. Beyond that Za Salah could say no more save that he did not intend to refund a zinc cent of what Rex Sefton had paid.

Even the sultan was a broken reed. He suddenly developed an unaccountable indifference to Rex Sefton's plans.

Rex Sefton's dreams had flopped a very bad flop indeed. And it was while he was in the midst of this bitter realization that Lee Washington swam into his orbit.

Rex Sefton had noted the man vaguely as a large opaque body occasionally inhabiting the same fly embattled lounge of Bemoy's one white man hotel as himself. Being British his consciousness of brother man got no further. Lee Washington, however, had a method of approach all his own.

"Colonel," he cried, "are you needing an expert in caravans, the organizing and handling of same?"

Rex Sefton gave a gulp at the very suggestion and his icy glare melted into a more human attention. He saw hugeness before him. A huge, full figure of a man; a huge beard; a huge, well cultivated bulbous nose, plus tinted, horn rimmed sun glasses, huge, too. Rex Sefton, trying not to show excitement, drawled: "What's the big idea?"

"You're this young Goliath hunter, aren't ye?" boomed the big man. "The local David who's going slinging for Savaran? I like a lad with spirit enough to tackle tornadoes. That's one of the reasons why I'm ready to hitch in—well, as far as the Gran Fess boredr, anyhow."

"Gran Fess!" frowned the puzzled boy. "Why the Gran Fess?"

"Well," said the big American, "Savaran's heading that way, isn't he?"

"Is he?" snapped Rex Sefton. "How do you know?"

"I always do. I'm just off the trail, anyhow. I'm Lee Washington of Missouri. Mineral hunter. Broke for the moment in all but experience and a master gift for handling natives—the same being now on offer."

"I don't quite follow—" began the boy.

"It'll penetrate," grinned Lee Washington. "This is the way of me. I'm after metal—my career or job. I've been prospecting Bemoy, down south. Found nothing there, but I did get word that there's quartz gold and diamond clay in the Gran Fess country. Awkward that, because I haven't the cash to outfit me as far as the Gran Fess. Then, hitting this bug bitten burg in this dejected and dollarless state, I heard you are organizing an outfit to catch this Savaran fellow. Well, another word I picked up down south was that Savaran was heading for the Gran Fess. You've got to go to the Gran Fess to catch Savaran, I want to go. You're obviously the original babe and suckling; me, what I don't know about Africa ain't useful. Therefore we can be mutually helpful in chasing our respective moonbeams, an'—well, here I am offering to work my passage."

"Are you," Rex Sefton cried thickly, "are you offering to join me in hunting Savaran?"

"Son," said the big man genially, "we'll begin as we'll go on, lying no lies. I do not hunt Savaran, nor the saber toothed tiger, nor anything so certainly fatal to human life. But I do submit and agree to help, labor, advise, guide, kick sense into black boys and generally prove myself indispensable to your caravan as far as the Gran Fess border—as far as that, no more. Is it a deal?"

Rex Sefton sat back, his strange fair fineness a shade whiter.

"And if we come up with, catch Savaran before the Gran Fess border," he demanded huskily. "What then?"

"No need to discuss the breakdown of the natural law," grinned Lee Washington.

"You don't think I'll take Savaran, then?" snapped the boy, his face setting in a fighting hue.

"You're a likeller looking proposition than I thought," said Lee Washington, studying him, "an' handsomer. However, Savaran is undoubtedly Savaran—"

"And I'm going to get him," said the boy grimly.

"It'll be worth watching, anyhow," said the American with his broad show of teeth. "But count me in as a watcher only. Is it a go?"

Rex Sefton sat back and laughed harshly.

"Three days ago I'd have been asking you instead of you me. Now—" He poured out the story of the strange collapse of his plans. Lee Washington was sympathetic but not overwhelmed by surprise.

"Too bad," he said, "but, of course, that's Savaran."

"You think he stampeded my men?"

"Son," said the American, "he'd stampede the trained bands of hell."

"But he's in the south, you say."

"Heading north and west to reach the Gran Fess," corrected the big man. "He's probably passing Bemoy now and your bright boys got wind of him and just naturally faded away."

"And my chances of taking him with them," cried Rex Sefton bitterly. "My whole outfit has quit and I can't even get my advance for wages back from that swine Za Salah and others. Nothing but a miracle—"

"Miracles," grinned Lee Washington, "are among my most profitable side lines. Just sit back and watch Lee."

Rex Sefton had six weeks of Lee Wash-

UNG LION

A Brilliant Coup de Theatre in the Life of that Bold African Adventurer —Savaran—Who Rescues his Enemy but Throws Away a Throne to Do It

Savaran laughed fiercely down at the pistol in the boy's hand: "There are ten thousand spearmen here, Rex. Do you shoot them all?"

ington and miracles, and came to have a vast liking for both.

Lee Washington had a large and astonishing way with him. For instance he walked calmly into the snugly contemptuous presence of Za Salah, wholesaler in pious texts and cut-throat gunmen. He listened mildly while the Arab made it more than plain that Rex Sefton would get back neither a cook boy nor a cent of his advance. Never a word said Lee Washington until Za Salah reached for his keef pipe with a gesture of final dismissal. Then he said with a strange, ferocious softness:

"A hundred and twenty fighters Steffi hired through thee—so! Well, two hundred and forty will be ready by noon tomorrow, O mangy mosque rat. Also two hundred and fifty carriers. They will gather at the Hill of Crows, and they will be punctual. The price of each will be half what thou charged Steffi, and what he has already paid settles thy bill. And they will be good men, Za Salah, all of them, else thou wilt speak with me on thy swift way to hell."

Za Salah shuddered back from the wolf grin on the big bearded face, yet was ready to fight, being an Arab with money at stake. The American laughed softly and lifted his tinted spectacles.

"Wa Sidda," wailed the Arab. "All shall be as the feared among lions desires. On the stone I swear it."

Lee Washington wasted no more words or time on him. He had other calls to make. He visited Chakula, who was hugging himself at having been overpaid for food he need never supply to Rex Sefton; Nymo, the Rat, who was in the same happy mood over the matter of pack donkeys and saddle mules, and Patamo, gun runner extraordinary to all the best local revolutions. Upon each he had the same reaction, even on Patamo, whose name was terror and who called in three bhang-crazy dagger men to back his robber talents. But the dagger men as well as Patamo and the others all wilted under the ferocious and sardonic glare the lifted spectacles exposed, and when Rex Sefton rode out to the Hill of Crows next day, fully equipped for the trail, which seemed absurd to him, he reined in, gasping at the sight he saw.

"Jove!" he cried to Lee Washington. "You're right. You work miracles. Why, we can march in a day or two."

"We march—now," grinned the American. "You can't hang about where Savaran is concerned."

Miracles continued. The caravan was still in a rough and ruffianly state, for some of the men were considerable devils and liked the world to know it. Rex Sefton, used to commanding men as he was, could do little with this criminal brood. Not so Lee Washington. In a week he had molded the worst of these rascals into a mainguard of such fighting quality that, when a rezzon of Arabs made a darting attack on the caravan, they responded so beautifully that he all but nipped the raiders in a swift encircling movement from the flanks. Indeed, only headlong fight saved the wild desert men from extermination.

"Jove, Lee," cried Rex Sefton in admiration. "That was damn good work. You ought to have been a soldier. Why—why you'd be a colonel at your age."

"So I've been told," grinned the American. "That was the drawback. I've got a field marshal complex."

"I know," laughed the boy. "I've had—am having some. Whatever you feel you've got in you the service mandarins tie you down to a subaltern's pips and a village policeman's job. And there you stay, your brain and heart drying up from sheer dullness, waiting for the old men above you to die off. Maybe you're right in remaining as you are."

"I guess I am, seeing what I mean to be," said Lee Washington. He shot a shrewd glance at the boy. "But feeling like that, why don't you cut loose and make a name and fortune on your own?"

"I'm a soldier," said the boy stiffly, "however I grouse. There's a—a sort of tradition to uphold, a duty. I've got to go on with it, even though I've got to hurry things if I can, too."

That meant taking Savaran. Rex Sefton, because of his youth, his official manner, and because he knew no native language but Swahili, would have been hopeless in tracing Savaran. He could never extract a particle of news from the villages they passed or the caravans they met. Lee Washington never failed. The big man was master of Africans and their minds. A few soft words in their own dialect and the most sullen black men became chatty. Always Savaran was heading for the Gran Fess and always Lee Washington was able to pick up his trail.

"You're a ruddy marvel," cried the boy. "I should never have trailed the beggar but for you. I'm beginning to feel that Savaran himself would have to be a bigger wonder than he is to beat you."

"You have discovered our secret," grinned Lee Washington. "I am the one man in the world Savaran fears."

They made first-rate partners. The American was wise, brilliant in his experience and method, and genial good company. Rex Sefton was something more than out-of-the-rut good looking. He was cheerful, keen, hardy and a ready learner. On no less an occasion than their brush with the Arabs he had interposed his big body and ready pistol between Lee Washington and a slashing scimitar.

That was the sort of thing the American could not forget, even though he repaid it by nursing the youngster through a bout of fever, sitting with him through two light-headed nights. Many things, indeed, made him love the boy and not least of them was the generosity of spirit. There was no rancor even about his hunting of Savaran. He actually admired the bizarre rascal for the touch of romance he brought to a hundrum age.

"If you feel like that about him, why go gunning for him?" demanded Lee Washington.

"Why go hunting lions?" smiled the boy, "and Savaran is the biggest lion in Africa."

"I suppose so," grunted Lee Washington, "and anyhow the cash on his head is a small fortune."

"Damn the cash," cried the boy. "Thank goodness I can't touch it."

"What's that?" demanded the startled American.

"Government officers are barred under British rule, I'm glad to say. I'm not saying I don't expect things out of it, but they'll be in line with my own service, not Judas money."

"A rank and a station worthy of Crystal Lind," grinned Lee Washington. "Nice girl, Crystal—and pretty."

"Crystal!" Rex Sefton was on his feet, his eyes blazing. "Damn you, Washington, have you been going through my pockets?"

"Didn't have to," said the American genially. "You talked quite a lot when you had fever. Also the pillow of a camp bed is no sort of hiding place for that photo you carry about with you. It must have dropped to the floor a thousand dozen times while I soothed your heated brow."

"Well, we are engaged," said the boy half resentful, half captivated by the strange fierce charm of the man. "She wants to join me out here as soon as possible and I want it even more. But you know how things are. How can a man bring a girl like that out to a pest hole post like mine on pay like mine? And it'll be years before I get a step up. Years of waiting—"

"So you decided to take a short cut up by 'chopping' Savaran?"

"The man who takes Savaran is a made man," said the boy.

"Or a dead one," Lee Washington corrected grimly.

"You've got to take a big risk for a big prize. I'm going to get him—or bust."

"And that," said Lee Washington, "is going to include the whole Gran Fess nation, I suppose."

"The Gran Fess nation," frowned the boy. "What do you mean? They're at peace, and they'd never given trouble to whites anyhow."

"To whites—no," said the big man. "But along their frontiers are as fat a packet of rich tribes as ever invited conquest, and the Gran Fess are good fighting stuff. Moreover, their queen, the Kola Ambar, has lately been afflicted with such a heady draught of progress—mainly Paris jewels and frocks introduced through the Belgian Congo—that the court cries out for money to meet her bills. As the Gran Fess resent taxes with the sword, conquest is the exchequer's only hope."

"And Savaran means to lead them in such conquests?" frowned the boy.

"That to begin," said the big man genially, "with more to follow. Ambar, the queen, has signified by eight previous attempts that matrimony has become almost a settled habit with her."

"What! He'll marry a nigger?" cried the boy in disgust.

"Nigger be darned," snapped Lee Washington, strangely touched to anger. "She's pure Arab with a lineage that goes straight back to Solomon's hundred and fifth wife. And she's a beauty, too, as only an Arab queen can be."

"But still a native. And for a white man to marry color," the boy shrugged in contempt. "Still, I ought to save Savaran's hash before that happens."

"You'll follow him—even among the Gran Fess?"

"I'd follow him into the throne room of Potsdam if he was heading that way," cried the boy fiercely. "I'll get him even if I have to tear him out of the very heart of his own bodyguard."

"And that'll be a sight worth watching," grinned Lee Washington, and no doubt that was why he did not leave Rex Sefton at the Gran Fess border, as he had promised, but remained with him even to the coming of the Gran Fess impis.

The semi-Arab horde came on them two days after they had crossed the Gran Fess border, at dawn and as they broke camp. At the first flood of tall, fierce, fuzzy haired warriors from the bush, Rex Sefton was rapping his orders; excellent orders that should have surrounded their camp with a breastwork of saddle packs—only his askari did not heed them. They looked toward Lee Washington instead.

Rex Sefton suspecting nothing, shouted:

"Make them jump to it, Lee. A bold front may bluff them."

"How does one bluff ten thousand spears?" asked Lee Washington. "Besides they may not be unfriendly."

There came a rush of tall demons.

Thousands of voices were roaring as one, and it was one word they roared, "Zavarani! Zavarani!"

"Savaran!" gasped the boy. "They're crazy. They think Savaran's with us."

"Oh, they're not entirely wrong," said the American. He strode forward, right hand high in a superb gesture, and at his gesture the shouting redoubled . . .

And Rex Sefton understood at last and gasped.

Lee Washington's huge beard had gone, his spectacles, his bulbous nose had gone, even his bulk. He stood there in the harsh sun as lean as a fighting panther, his eagle face and bright eyes ablaze at the greeting of armies—his armies!

"Savaran!" gasped Rex Sefton.

Two silk clad warriors led sleek blood mares forward.

"Mount," said Savaran crisply, "and ride by me. We ride to the queen."

"I'll see you damned," cried the boy in sudden fury. "What's more you stay, too. You're a dead man if you move, Savaran."

Savaran laughed fiercely down at the pistol in the boy's hand: "There are ten

BOY PROVES THAT IT CAN BE DONE

AIRCRAFT LEAGUE MEMBER DESIGNS REAL FLYING ROCKET SHIP

Prepared jointly by E. V. Chandlee and L. A. Ornatti, Los Angeles Playground and Recreation Department.

Who said it "can't be done?" As far as model airplanes are concerned, the word "can't" simply doesn't belong in Gil Westphal's vocabulary. Every boy has, at some time or other, day-dreamed about a model rocket plane. But it remained for this enterprising young member of the Times Playground Aircraft League, who, by the way, is the designer of several previous models, which appeared in The Junior Times, to design, build and fly a rocket ship which really performs.

By reference to the picture and drawings, you will note, first of all, the uniqueness of design. It embodies the very latest in the "flying-wing" type of airplane. There is no fuselage; merely a couple of side members extending out of the wing and back to the tail surfaces. Beneath the wing is found the hollow balsa container, which houses the rocket. The landing gear and tail skid, of bamboo, fasten on to the rocket housing; the wing then is the main feature, and upon it are fastened the power plant (rocket) landing chasis, and the two longerons making up the fuselage.

Because of the advanced construction of the wing, the "Westphal rocket plane" will be described in two articles. Let us see how the wing and longerons are made.

MAKING THE WING

This particular wing has, in addition to the customary ribs, entering and trailing edges, a front and rear spar, a special balsa wood nose covering for the entering edge of the wing, and special wing tips.

Before beginning construction, obtain the following materials to make the wing:

Three strips of 1-16-inch thick sheet balsa, two inches wide and thirty-six inches in length, out of which make the ribs and tips.

One 1-16 by 3-16 by 36-inch balsa stick for the entering edge.

One 1-8 by 1-4 by 36-inch balsa stick for entering edge.

One 1 by 1-16 by 36-inch balsa strip to make the front center spar.

One 3-4 by 1-16 by 36-inch balsa stick for the rear center spar.

One sheet of 1-36-inch thick balsa, four inches wide and thirty-six inches long. From this is made the entering nose of the wing.

Now to begin work:

PROCEDURE

(1.) Cut out the ribs and wing tips from the 1-16-inch sheet of balsa. Notch according to drawing to receive the two center spars and leading edge.

(2.) Make the two center spars next. The front spar, made from 1-16 by 1 by 36-inch balsa, tapers from a width of one inch at its center to one-half inch at the tips. The rear spar is made from 1-16 by 3-4 by 36-inch stock and tapers from 3-4 inch at the center to 3-8 inch at the tips. Find the exact center of both spars, measure two inches on each side of the center, for each spar, and put a two-inch dihedral on each spar tip; this means, of course, that the dihedral in the wing does not start at the wing center, but two inches each side of center; this is readily noted in the drawing.

(3.) The wing assembly is not very difficult. After notching out the ribs to receive the spars, assemble ribs and spars and locate as per drawing. The entering edge consists of a 1-16 by 3-16 by 36-inch balsa stick. Give it the required dihedral and assemble to the ribs. The trailing edge is made from a 1-8 by 1-4 by 36-inch balsa stick, but is planed on one edge to give it a triangular section. Butt joint and cement the trailing edge to wing the tips.

(4.) Fasten the wing tips at the median line of each end rib.

(5.) The wing being assembled, there remains to cover it. Here is where great care is required, for this wing has a part of its surface made of sheet balsa and the balance covered with paper.

From the 1-32 by 4 by 36-inch sheet balsa, cut three pieces as follows:

(a) One piece for the center section, four inches long.

(b) Two pieces for the other two sides of the wing, tapering in width

"CRACKED MIRROR" MYSTERY SOLVED

COMING, NEXT WEEK, THE NAME OF PRIZE WINNER, THEN FOR NEW SERIAL

It will be a rare treat for you mystery enthusiasts to study the correct solution to "The Cracked Mirror," written by Alex himself. Note the reasonable way in which all leads merge into one another. There isn't anything really far-fetched about the story when the chapters are matched up. Let's give a whoop and a couple of cheers for our boy writer, who managed to write one "wow" of a story. Next week, we will announce the winner of this contest.—AUNT DOLLY.

CORRECT SOLUTION TO "CRACKED MIRROR" BY ALEX MELANCON

The entire story is one of coincidence, a theme built about Chico, who is the missing Cantrell heir. Philip, his half-brother, and Mr. X, his uncle, have prevailed upon Mrs. Cantrell, who is Chico's step-mother, to get him out of the way so that a huge inheritance may be split three ways, and this rightful heir, whom they are positive is the lonely boy living with the Arceneaux, may never come to light.

Mr. X, a scoundrelly person, plays upon the fear and imagination, hanging the mirror in their room, placing the suit on the bed, peering in the glass, etc. Anything to intimidate the boys and drive Chico from Larose, as the inheritance will be given within a certain number of days providing the lawful heir does not make his appearance. Therefore, Mr. X and Mrs. Cantrell strive to send Chico to New Orleans on a wild goose chase. The mystery man does all that he can to drive the boys wild with fear, playing upon superstitious fears, etc., but fails, meeting his own death in an accidental crack-up at English Lookout.

The incident of Armine and Dr. Samson is merely coincidence, as Armine was his niece, and it was he who made the bet concerning her reaching the bridge. He followed in his motor car and playfully swung her aboard when she reached her destination in the woods. To those who are looking for mystery, the most commonplace details become lurid. So Beth takes on strange proportions, Tommy feeling sure she is in cahoots with Dr. Samson, who has kidnaped Armine. As a matter of fact, she is in love with a man by the name of Martyn, who accidentally shot a friend of one of their patients, a cranky lady known as Mrs. G. She fears publicity and that is all there is to the mystifying incident of Beth and Martyn. It dovetails in the boys' nervous minds, who seem destined to entangle themselves further.

Annie, working on the outside of the bank robbery, saw their inside confederate only once. He was a young chap, Chico's build, wearing at the time of the robbery the suit he traded at Jake and Jack's. If they had not accepted her invitation to visit the forlorn rendezvous with its watery underground passage, they would never have got into serious trouble. Coincidence again entangles them, the reporter from the Telegram delivering both boys from their predicament. He has run across a picture of Mr. X—run years before, then a picture of him at the time of his death at English Lookout. The entire check-up on the story, fortune, missing heir, brings a confession from Mrs. Cantrell and Chico becomes an extremely rich boy almost overnight.

Annie and Buck, realizing their mistakes and becoming weary when placed under constant fire, clear the boys—and they return to Larose.

The sequel to this amazing story is "The Black Ace," having Chico and Tommy prominently featured. It is packed jam with thrills; if highway and swung down into Miss Nancy's drive.

"My land, though, look at what I have done!" Joe exclaimed aloud.

Across the front of Miss Nancy's lawn were the deep, wide tracks of the off wagon wheels; and at the turn a huge piece of the corner had been bitten away.

As he came to a stop, Joe heard Miss Nancy's front door open suddenly. He glanced apprehensively toward the verandah. Miss Nancy stood there, with folded arms. Joe could see the old-fashioned curls hanging down each side of her face. He could see the hollow cheeks, the long nose, the belligerent chin, the tall and angular figure in somber black, bespeaking the very spirit of menacing watchfulness.

It would have been the right thing, no doubt, to offer an instant apology. But Joe was out of breath. He could only lay his face close to the cheeks of his panting horses and caress the sleek noses while all three won back their breath.

Sick at heart, he waited for a tirade from the good lady. But none came. Miss Nancy watched him for a moment in silence; then she went within and stayed there.

"Gone to report!" Joe told himself. He rested his horses a little longer and then drove back toward the barn, where he got rid of the load.

"I guess I'll resign when I get back to the yard," he promised himself, "I might as well beat them to it."

If he meant that seriously, however, he was not so quick as he thought to be. He had hardly driven into the lumber yard when Mr. Weidner turned a corner of a timber stack and stopped him with uplifted hand.

"Sorry, Joe," he announced, "but your are laid off. The news came from the office a few minutes ago."

Joe nodded as he continued toward the stables. The nod was respectfully nonchalant, but he had been hard hit, though he had known what was coming. He took his horses out and did the usual stable chores. Then he put on his coat and said good night to the team.

He had reached the stable door before he quite grasped the fact that he was not coming back in the morning—might never come back. He went in to the horses again to say good-by to each one separately.

"You've been good horses, Danny, Billy. We had good times together. Don't ever forget me."

Then he strode out without a backward glance, trying to manage a careless whistle as he neared the gates, for Mr. Cary had paused on the office steps at sight of him.

The whistling was a dismal failure; besides Mr. Cary interrupted.

"Come into the office a moment, Pringle," he invited. "Miss Nancy Howells has reported you."

Joe smiled. "Only once, again, or for the third time?" he queried.

"Miss Nancy called me up," Mr. Cary continued, with a reassuring glance, "to commend you for the kindness you showed the horses in bringing them through the mud. She was much pleased. To be sure, you spoiled her lawn, but she says that is her contribution to the fine struggle you made.

"We appreciate this, Pringle," Mr. Cary concluded. "Just before Miss Nancy telephoned, Mr. Weidner was instructed to lay you off indefinitely. I have called you in to say that the order is rescinded."

In widely different fields?
Who knows what Fate will choose for us,
Or what the future yields?

So here's a toast to future days,
To future friendship's ties,
To all the luck for all of us,
To love that never dies!

THE GENTLE CAPTAIN

By Margaret Kostowal, Los Angeles

"What's this?" cried the ambitious King, confronting his Captain of the Guards. "I have a letter here from King Profundo of the Black Forest. They are at war, and have already extended their dominions to the Blue Sea. And he tells me that in the east the Emperor of Snowy Hills has won three battles, and his men have returned heavily laden with riches.

"You and your pretty men make a fine show in your flashing uniforms, parading the streets in idleness, when there are lands to be conquered and wealth to be gained for your country. Where is your patriotism?"

The Captain stood at rigid attention, "Your Majesty," he said, "it was my belief that my greatest service to this country would be to preserve it in peace."

"Bah," scoffed the King, "I see I have put the army into the hands of a mollycoddle."

"That may be," answered the Captain, "but you will find that I have awakened in the hearts of our people, a love and understanding of the virtue and blessing of peace, that nothing can efface."

"My man," said the King sternly, "you are mad. You will ruin the fighting morale of our army and kill the patriotism of my subjects."

"On the contrary," the Captain defended, "you will find that where the peace of our nation is at stake, our men will fight as men have never fought before, and the patriotism of our subjects is the deep-rooted patriotism which springs from genuine love of country and gratitude to the King and government which preserves it from the horrors of war and the fear of destruction."

But the King motioned him to silence: "I intrusted to you the command of my armies and gave you the authority to engage in wars for the glorification of our country. You have neglected your duty and squandered your days in idleness."

He arose and said with cold deliberation, "Captain, I am pleased to accept your resignation."

The Captain was staggered by the sudden blow, and left the presence of the King with leaden footsteps.

The King straightway appointed a new man to the captainship and instructed him to engage in war immediately with the Emperor of the Snowy Hills.

"He has been victorious in recent battles, and his country will be rich plunder for us."

The next day, the new Captain, eager to make good, set out straightway to obey the royal command. And on the same day the King set out on a journey to the Big Black Forest to visit King Profundo.

As he rode over the quiet lanes of Sunny Country, there came over him a deep sense of peace and security. He sat back and watched contentedly the panorama of fragrant green pastures where new lambs and long-legged calves gamboled joyously together. He passed fields where plowmen were turning up the fragrant earth, whistling the while. He met children coming from school, simple, country children with fat, red cheeks and clear eyes.

"This is a fine country," he mused.

He had been traveling three days through the gloomy wilderness of the Big Black Forest when his advance guard counselled a halt. "Bandits are invading the village just ahead," they warned the King, so he and his entourage stopped at an old farmhouse for the night.

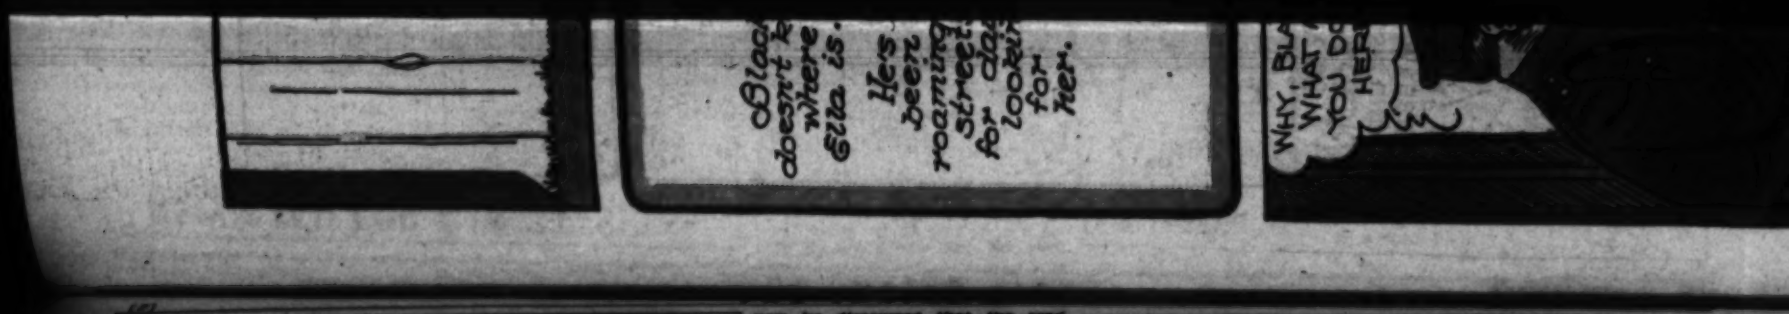
The windows of the place were securely boarded up and the door heavily barred. It was almost impossible to induce the peasant and his wife, who were hiding in the cellar, to come and open the door. But finally an entrance was effected.

The farmer's wife wept copiously. "What a world!" she moaned. "There's only me and my man how," she told them, "and before—before—" But she was overcome by her grief and could not go on.

The farmer explained in a whisper. "Our sons have been killed in the wars."

The company went early to bed, but they were soon roused by poundings on the door. The people were fleeing from the village and came to the farmhouse for shelter. All night they came and the air was filled with their lamentations.

The King breathed a deep sigh of relief when at last they could continue on their way. That evening they encountered a messenger who told them that King Profundo had been killed and the Big Black Forest seized by enemies. "Our men [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]



REPORTED FOR CARELESSNESS

By James William Sullivan

(Another Youth's Companion story for our boys and girls.—Ed.)

"Hey, Big Joe! The boss wants to see you right away."

Freckled-faced Sunny Simmons, the likable self-appointed humorist among Cary & Co.'s teamsters, stopped on his way to load his own wagon long enough to deliver his message. He grinned slyly as he jerked a thumb backward toward the boss teamster of the lumber yard.

Joe Pringle, six feet tall and broad of shoulder in spite of his lack of years—he was not yet 19—grinned back. He tossed the reins over the backs of his two horses.

"What's it all about?" he asked, climbing down from his seat.

"Maybe I didn't hear straight," said Simmons, leaning confidently toward Joe and lowering his voice, "but I think—I say I think—he's going to boost your wages."

Joe made as if to climb back to his seat.

"Oh, I knew that was coming," he shrugged. "No use of wasting time walking over there to have him tell me that."

"No," Simmons agreed with mock seriousness, "you shouldn't be bothered about such a detail. But you'd better humor him. Give him the fun of telling you, anyhow."

"If you put it like that, all right," Joe conceded. "I always have time to make people happy! Just thbughtful that way."

On his way to where the boss was standing, though, Joe's face clouded. It was more than likely, he knew, that the boss would tell him that he was to be laid off at the end of the week. Work was slack, and a bad spell of weather during the last month had made matters worse. And to be out of a job would be a heavy blow to him, especially now that his brother was sick and unable to help take care of their mother.

Joe frowned, knitting his thick eyebrows until they almost met over his straight nose. Then he tossed back his heavy mane of brown hair, squared his shoulders, set his jaw, thrust out his chin, and grinned. No use being a baby about it. Maybe it was all right, anyway. Simmons hadn't seemed to think it serious. But if it had to come, he'd take it standing up, and smiling. Joe's brown eyes had a determined glint in them when he found Mr. Weidner.

The foreman of the teamsters was busy with a customer. Joe stood aside, waiting. Then, as Mr. Weidner turned toward him, he involuntarily straightened up to meet the shock of bad news.

Mr. Weidner's face grew a shade more serious. Joe thought he frowned.

"Miss Nancy Howells reported you over the telephone, Pringle, just before noon. For carelessness."

Joe felt sick. Something happened to his stomach. His heart raced. He wasn't going to be laid off—he was going to be discharged! Suddenly he felt himself grow hot with anger. What right had a dried-up old spinster to report him and cause him to lose his job! He threw up his head with a jerk. Words seethed in his mind. His lips twitched with his effort to keep them back.

"How did you come to break down the old lady's vine?"

"That little poodle of hers jumped at the horses' heads," Joe said tersely, controlling himself. "The driveway is narrow and the team swerved before I could prevent them."

The foreman nodded noncommittally as if not wholly sure of his driver's blamelessness. Joe shut his lips tight.

"Well, she was good and mad," he remarked, "and the office people gave me a raking over the coals. Look out for yourself, Pringle. One more telephone message like that will finish you in the yard."

Joe went back to his work moodily. Crotchety Miss Howells, already prejudiced against him, would be almost certain to find something to use as a basis for reporting him when he went back with the second load of fencing. He might as well quit now, and save himself the humiliation of being discharged. Resentment surged up in him again. "She had no right to report me," he told himself fiercely. "But I won't quit just to please her. I'll stick till I'm fired."

He felt a tug at his sleeve. Swinging about he found the beseeching face of Simmons close to his own.

"Could you lend me $2 on the strength of your raise?" Simmons pleaded, the corners of his mouth drawn down with feigned sadness as he dabbed pathetically at his eyes. "I hardly had enough to eat in the house for myself this morning, and my wife and two little children didn't have anything."

Joe couldn't help being amused. Simmons was but little older than he was himself, and quite without dependents of any sort. The young teamster grabbed his favorite fellow-workman by the throat and backed him up against a board pile. Simmon's eyes were wide with ludicrous terror.

"Miss Nancy Howells has reported me," Joe announced fiercely, easing his grip when he saw that Simmons had deliberately held his breath until his eyes bulged out and he was nearly black in the face. "And I'm just mad enough to fight somebody. You'll do as well as anyone else. Is there any message for your folks before I finish with you?"

The joker opened his mouth and let his tongue loll out in ghastly fashion, then rolled his eyes heavenward. Joe chuckled, then free him. Simmons touched his neck tenderly, as if feeling for possible injuries.

"I'm sorry for you," he remarked, gently turning his head right and left, up and down, with his two hands. "Miss Nancy is famous for reporting people. The carpenters say that when they work in her house she holds the telephone receiver down close to the job so the office can hear how slow they are at driving nails. But I've got to start, or somebody will report me. And I'd much rather it was you!"

Simmons went back to his floor boards leaving Joe chuckling. In much better spirits he went to his team and began to load fencing material.

"I ought not to put on too big a load," he soliloquized, while he tossed posts into the long wagon. "A top-heavy heap might throw too much of shade on her flowers, and she'd report me for that."

Nevertheless the load went in heaping high, as much as the splendid team could pull. Miss Nancy was having a new barrier put around her place, partly on account of the neighbors' chickens, which apparently didn't mind being reported for scratching in her flower-beds.

But Joe couldn't help worrying about his job. He was the youngest of four teamsters and the newest. The imminence of a "lay-off" dismayed him. What he would do if that happened he did not know. Other work would be hard to find. Already there were many men idle in the countryside, and the number was increasing every day.

With his load all on at last, Joe drove out of the yard, stopping at the office to get the delivery statement and receipt. The junior member of the firm glanced up from his desk casually as the book-keeper spoke Miss Nancy's name.

"I want you to be careful this trip, young man," Mr. Cary warned. Joe flushed. Obviously his employer blamed him, even though he must know that Miss Nancy was a chronic complainer. The implied rebuke, Joe felt, was unjust and unnecessary. Mr. Cary was rubbing it in.

Not daring to speak, Joe nodded, stuck the statement and receipt blank in his hat, climbed up on his load, and started off. Miss Nancy lived a couple of miles out, at the edge of the town. Her place had once been an old homestead on a pretty country lane; but the fast-growing village was crowding it now with developing plots, new streets and neighbors, keeping Miss Nancy supplied with every-fresh material for reports and complaints.

Joe drove along the old pike, meaning to turn into Miss Nancy's street at the junction. But on his previous trip he had found the water department at work digging a trench in the main highway; now the detour sign, that stood well back from the road, had been moved up to the mouth of the street, in order to cause us instead of go down the street on which Miss Nancy lived.

"This load is more likely to be consigned to China than to Miss Nancy," Joe muttered, as he turned off the main road and sank deep into the soft clay. "I'd like to kidnap Miss Nancy, take her through this mushy mud, and leave her in China," he reflected, with malicious humor. "She'd be sure, though, to report me to the first mandarin we met on the other side of the earth."

The wheels sank deeper as he proceeded, but the way was down hill and he met with no especial trouble on the short block. Then he turned the corner of Miss Nancy's street. The spinster's home was only 100 yards up; but Joe gave the horses a brief rest before he essayed the climb.

"Now, then, Billy boy," he encouraged the near horse, after a moment, "pull her out! Pull, Danny! We'll be clear in a minute."

The horses, fine fellows, responded instantly. Their broad backs stiffened out flat and their heads reached forward. There was a sucking sound as the wheels came reluctantly out of the clinging mud; then the wagon moved at a snail's pace up the hill.

Nobly the horses tugged, until suddenly, within 100 feet of Miss Nancy's boundary line, Joe felt the near front wheel sink a foot deeper. He had struck a hole.

He gave the horses another breathing spell while he looked over the ground. Then he wheedled them into a straining effort—a vain one. He tried again after an interval, with no better success. A third time the tall young driver roused the creatures to strain to their utmost. They strove, splendidly, and the wheel lifted out of the hole.

"Billy! Dan!" Joe shouted exultantly. "Together now Pull! Pull her out"

But the horses had to relax without pulling free. The wheel settled back. Joe let the team rest another full ten minutes. Meanwhile a crowd of idlers collected to see the contest between mud and horses. When he judged that Billy and Danny were sufficiently refreshed, and had laid in some reserve strength, Joe went to their heads, stroked the noses of the beasts, and spoke to them in soft tones as he laid his face close to theirs.

"Give 'em the whip" a brawny fellow on the sidewalk suggested. "Excite 'em gradually and they'll get mad and pull you out."

Joe only smiled. He had no intention of adopting such a procedure, however good the advice might be. The suggestion, however, gave him an idea. Dropping the bridles, he crossed to the sidewalk and went down to a very new little grocery store. Investing a nickel in sugar lumps, he came back and fed both Danny and Billy, talking to them as they smacked their lips over the treat.

"All ready, boys, now. One! Two! Three! Pull, Billy! Come, Danny!"

Several of the spectators braved the deep mud and squashed their way out to lend a hand at the wheels. They worked at a disadvantage, however; the struggle was entirely one the horses must win or lose.

The big fellows, eager to do their full duty, pricked up their ears, looked at their master, and spared no strength to do that master's bidding. Their bodies stiffened out long and powerful as Joe coaxed them, praised them, urged them on. Slowly, as they strained against the harness, the wheel lifted, there was a cheer from the sidewalk, the horses set a foot forward, and all but imperceptibly the load began to move.

The unequal ground beneath them grew no better as they fought their way forward. Another wheel slipped into a deepened depression, but it came out instantly under the striving of the horses. Joe, determined to keep the team on the move until the bad road had been safely cleared, kept shouting them forward.

As they neared Miss Nancy's boundary line, the horses deflected their course somewhat toward her house, after their manner of working up a hill diagonally. Joe, intent on getting the load past the worst holes, failed to see that he was treading dangerously close to the spinster's unfenced lawn.

He stayed at the bridles, walking backward and bringing the horses on by the very power of his purpose. They tugged and panted, strained and bent; and at last, as a triumphant cry of encouragement and commendation rose from the spectators, the load suddenly cleared the muddy holes of the

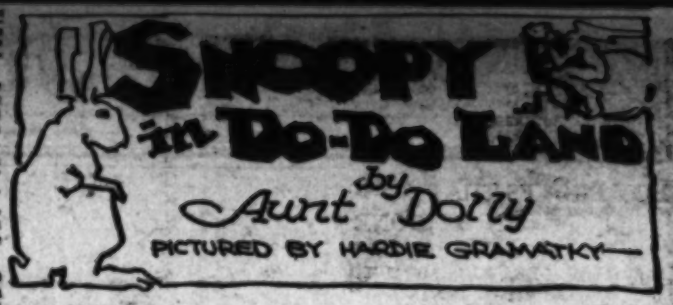
"Miss Nancy stood there with folded arms—"



The sound of their voices must have reached the strange-looking creature on top of the hill, as he nodded his head in a friendly way.

"Now," he exclaimed, in deep tones, "why shouldn't you like me? I'm an extraordinary person, having lived 1000 years off the coast of China. More than that, I can tell time." And he wagged his two tails, which went "tick," plain as a clock.

"Of all things," whispered Snoop, eyes wide with astonishment. "It's Ampi-Waumpus, who had quarters in the ginger tree. Horney Owl said his ticking drove him mad."

"Horney Owl was a fuzz box," said Ampi, gathering up his front paws, "Why worry about things that happened ages ago? This is a new life to all of us. There are no more queens to torment us, or royal bugs from India to shut me out of the library. I'm headed for Do-Do-land, how about you?"

"The same place," said Becky. "It would be nice if we could go on together."

The Ampi raised his nose, and sniffed at the wind. "Night's coming," he announced, "so I'll give you a light," and he undid a pocket in the front of his chest, producing two lanterns which he lit with great care, and hung on the end of his tails. "Now," he assured them, "you'll have an easy time finding your way. Travelers have told me, there are exciting things ahead of us, the Blue Valley for instance, with its garden of birds—all of which are pink, pale pink, with creamy little tufts on their heads. They have something to do with Do-Do-land, just what, I don't know. Then comes the dark and dreary desert, with books the size of pine trees, preventing your progress. Some say the Do-Do birds guard them, others declare strange creatures with high caps take care of them."

"What's in these books?" asked Snoopy, in a very small voice, "and why should they be in a desert, when they belong on shelves, and have nothing to do with birds."

The Ampi trimmed one of his lanterns, and set it back on his tail. "There," he sighed, "that will give you a beautiful light. As to your question, concerning this desert, I'm sure I can't answer you. It must be a peculiar place. But not as odd as the village of Regret! This, I have heard, is truly astounding."

The Ampi Wampus was moving slowly down hill, his deep voice rumbling pleasantly behind him; the light from his lanterns directing their footsteps.

"He surely is a help," praised Snoopy. "Exciting, isn't it, visiting all these strange places? But one thing puzzles me—what does 'regret' means?"

"Well," the airdale was trotting swiftly along, "it's like this. Suppose you said to yourself, 'I'll thank the Ampi for lighting my way' and then you didn't. Perhaps you'd be awfully sorry, as you never saw him again, and that would be a regret."

"Then," chuckled the rabbit, "I have a pack of regrets in my life. I wish I had punished Saga when I had the chance."

"Careful," warned Ampi-Wampus, turning his scaley old head, "such thoughts will close the gates of Do-Do-Land. We have enough to do right now, without worrying over a queen that ruled the Opal Forest. Suppose we rest for a change—my tails have a kink in them, balancing these lanterns," and their ancient leader deposited his body beside a river. "Make yourself comfortable," he advised, "a little sleep won't hurt us."

But Snoopy and Becky were restless, anxious to be on their way, so it took them a great while to settle down. Not so, however, with the Ampi-Wampus, who curled himself into fancy knots, snoring loudly, as his companions whispered to and fro.

"He's a nice old thing," praised Becky, laying her shaggy head beside Snoop, "but why should he want to sleep on a night like this? With a full moon, and everything so still—it would be no end of fun traveling about."

"I don't suppose it's right to leave him," said the rabbit, doubtfully, "but I'd love to go on. See what lies at the bottom of that hill." They both looked longingly toward a rise in the ground, which hid without doubt an interesting scene.

"Well," suggested Snoop, in the tiniest whisper, "it wouldn't be wrong to take just one look. The Ampi wouldn't mind, I'm sure." So the dog and the rabbit trotted confidentially to the top of the hill, Becky reaching it first, cried out, as she did so, "Wake up our friend, I can't believe my eyes."

A COLD BATH

By Alice Robinson

Stalled, that was the word for it. We rode down the West Pearl River, and found the big Rigolets too turbulent to tackle. Our speedboat, loaded with the four of us, had small chance of surviving the enormous waves raised by a frigid northwester. Even had we others desired to attempt a crossing, Gertie was too hysterically afraid to have stood it.

A trapper having a camp on the river took us in that night. There was no sleep for anyone, the cold keeping us huddled around the man's stove. His supply of wood was soon exhausted, and we shivered until the dawn. The wind was even stronger that morning; a crossing still impossible. Marcel and Edward and I spent the day gathering driftwood and going to the end of the little river to see the waves; that night at least we did not suffer from the cold.

Matters became critical the following day. The trapper's food supply, which with the most generosity he had shared with us, was used up. We spent a miserable time waiting for a lull in the wind, which did not come until nightfall. When we saw that the Rigolets was calmer, we hurried into the speedboat, promising to send the trapper provisions.

The waters of the big stream appeared quite favorable; the waves were only slight swells now. We pointed toward the Blind bayou, which enters the Rigolets somewhat to the west on the side opposite the West Pearl. Our course, then, was diagonally across, the wind to the right of us.

"Won't it be good to reach the house?" Gertie exclaimed. "I hope they're expecting us tonight."

"Poor chance of their having supper when we get there," Marcel moaned. "We said we'd remain in Mississippi until next week."

The boat chugged merrily to the middle of the stream before we observed a change in its waves. Then the wind arose and hit us almost squarely. Gertie screamed as a tall wave nearly swamped us, its spray slapping our faces icily.

"Let's turn back!" she begged, panic-stricken.

"It'll soon pass," consoled Marcel. "This is only a gust of wind. Besides, we're the same distance from either shore."

But the wind gave no sign of immediately abating. It continued shaking us as the brave little engine tried to overcome its resistance. Our position made the boat's movement peculiarly uncomfortable. Now we were placed in a trough with a hill of water on either side, then we were riding on the crest of a rising swell. The process of changing from one position to the other brought its toll of shipped water. Pretty soon our feet were quite soaked by the cold element, our toes aching lumps of ice. Soon it was apparent we should have to bail.

"Make straight for the shore," Edward said. "The waves may not be so bad there."

Accordingly, Marcel turned the nose of the speedboat, and our backs were to the wind. It was easier to cut across the length of the waves, and we made better progress for all that we were shaken fearfully in the little craft.

And then the engine stopped. The wind roared past our ears, and the waves still moaned beneath us, but the sudden cessation of its noise made everything appear silent. Marcel leaned over the flywheel and gave it a turn. No response came, the engine was quite dead.

"The batteries got wet," he decided.

"Good Lord!" said Gertie.

"We're sinking!" exclaimed Edward.

We looked down, and saw that the water was entering rapidly, much more rapidly than the waves tossed it in. A leak had developed.

"It's around the propeller shaft," said Marcel. "'Member when we had to fix it the other day."

Meanwhile we had only one excuse for a bucket, an old coffee can which held very little water. We bailed frantically, but the water entered faster than we could remove it. Soon our ankles were covered. Gertie was using her cupped hands, and Edward his felt hat. Marcel broke one plank from the seat and started pushing the water out.

"Use it as a paddle!" I cried. "Head for the shore."

The wind was serving us to a desire, and the paddling aided still more, but the darkness made it impossible to see how far we were from the shore. We worked the more eagerly, you may be sure, sensing that it was a battle between us and the entering water. And we knew that we were losing, for each moment the little boat settled further, and the waves had little chance of moving it forward. All of us were breathless with the exertion when of a sudden we knew the worst had come. Gertie had been silent, but the splash of water that rushed over the side shocked a scream from her. The boat had sunk under us.

"Jump!" cried Edward. "Swim for the shore!"

We leaped at his command, and almost instantly our feet struck the bottom. It seemed ludicrous, for the water did not reach our waists. The touch of solidness beneath us caused us to laugh at our moment of panic. Marcel struck down the plank, and tied the boat securely. Then we waded toward the shore.

We were a considerable distance from it, for the bottom sloped quite gently outward, so gently that one must go very far to find deep water. It was cold, cold.

"We'll freeze," was our unanimous decision. "But, good heaven, suppose we had not headed for the shore at once!"

A horrible trudge through the swamp was before us; by the time we reached the railroad track, we were numb with cold. The station was nearer than our home, and we entered it after what seemed years of walking. My soul, but the heater was wonderful!

The Nationalist and County parties at Sydney, Australia, have just voted the unusual thing of a 15 per cent reduction in their own salaries.

Today our travelogue party takes us to the famous island of Bahrain, where pearling is the chief industry. Laura Brooch has drawn a picture of one of the natives of this clime. Read about them in our latest story, and then write us a letter telling how you like the new feature. You'll find it, unusually attractive, something new in the line of handsome color. By the way, we'd appreciate a little line, telling how our articles go over. Criticism frankly; praise if you think but tell us the truth. We want you to list your favorite type of art work, the contrivion you'd like to see about next in our pictured travelogues. Above all, try for these tempting ten points, awarded the best colorist or fan in our club. We'll be waiting, anxious to receive your work, willing to pay you for your effort; the rest is up to you.

An Arabian Girl

STRANGE ARABIA

BY AUNT DOLLY
ARTICLE NO. 5

We have mentioned the pearl industry in Arabia, but neglected to tell you how natives procure the gems, risking their lives time and again for some choice bauble at the bottom of the sea.

Professional divers many times are Abyssinians, who enter the water without protection of any kind, save a forked bone over their nose and beeswax in their ears. Tied to their feet are stones and when all is ready they are pitched overboard, a small basket fastened to their waist. There is also a lifeline, but outside of these crude protections the diver goes into the deep without the least assurance of surviving such an experience. Holding his breath, he plunges about the bottom of the ocean, hunting frantically for pearls, which are placed swiftly in the basket. When his allotted time is up, he jerks on the rope, making a safe journey to the surface of the water, provided, of course, he has not misgauged his breath. But you may imagine the terrors of the deep which surround these naked divers when they plunge feet first among them.

Another strange habit in Arabia deals with a law from the Koran, which forbids artists to reproduce in any way the form of a living creature. This, naturally, curtails art to an alarming degree, which, however, is not at all unusual in Arabia. Our modernized world has made little or no impression upon the holy cities of Islam.

When Southend United football team attended church service following their defeat recently they were told from the pulpit by Rev. Frank H. Chambers, ex-football player, that their play was "too pretty."

COLOR CHART POINT WINNERS

Reviewing our Laura's charts, one remembers the coming, with a bang, Leah Gale's 'teen interest returns than Grimm manages ago, when her first dolls appeared in the Junior, or rather, we should say, the first of this series. She's been at it ever since, with amazing results. But last week was a revelation; her Arabian chart did wonders!

Those who tried for points, will be interested in the following list of prize winners: Betty Seelye received ten credits as her work was gorgeously handled. Second on our list came Louise Krause, who chose a milder scheme of greens and old rose, but none the less harmonious. Now, the point is this, if these live-wires captured such generous rating, you can do the same. Watch for Laura's famous work, then cash in!

Names on our Junior Honor Roll follow:

Betty Seelye, Louise Krause, Mary Yardley, La-Reeta Clairette, Edith Fromson, Flora Schneider, Betty Garvey, Mary Graham, Mary Hutchinson, Annette Cramblet, Elizabeth Smith, Annabelle Day, Margie Asadoorian, Jacqueline Friedrich, Mary Lou Hare, Helen Brooks, Wilfrie Schulz, Coxymine Fergoda, Virginia Hill, Tracy Harris, Frank Rice, Helen Squires, Marjorie Carl, Virginia Brown, Katherine Yamasaki, Doria Carl, Dorothy Williamson, Adella Shaw, Catherine Winquest, Elsbeth Krohn, Gloria Johnson, Betty Blair, Lois Strong, Elsie Tomlinson, Alberta McArthur, Billie Elizabeth Snippel, Betty Lynn, Geraldine Dykeman, Stella Sarfatty, Helen Walton, Eileen Ball, Juanita Booth, Bonnie Jean Arveny, Elizabeth Moon, Sheila Lloyd-Butler, Merle White, Barbara Busher, Christian Strain, Harriet Ennis, David Drew, Tony Postado, Frances Keeley, June Hafner, Marion Fowler, Toshiko Kojima, Sarah Lipsey, Lillian Millbank, Nellie Mays, Betty Goodbe, Cecil Mason, Graham Withers, Ardeth Schneider, Winifred Harris, Virginia Lynn, Helan Villars, Dorothy Wilson, Bill Davis, James Walters, Mary Heathcott, Muriel Snider, Genevieve Newman.

FIRST AID IN ART

This week, Francis Palmer Tilton answers questions on correspondence courses and the importance of study.

"Too much care cannot be given to technique," says this New York illustrator. An artist relies not only upon his originality, but a certain technique which singles him out from competitors. So watch that little matter—it's one of the things that make you famous. He starts off his column with the following question:

Question: How many years of study should an artist have?

Answer: Unlimited; the greatest artist is always a student. His field is so broad, and demands so many, a lifetime could be spent in the pursuit of knowledge. Therefore, get all you can, but remember creators must stay fresh. Do not plug until both you and your work grow stale. Balance your study with recreation, and ideas won't be slow in arriving. When discouraged, remember some of our greatest commercial artists studied two years at the minimum.

Q.: Which course should come first?

A.: There is no set course to take first, as in mining engineering or medicine. The majority of schools teach graphic art as elementary, also, what is termed "antique," which embodies the drawing in black and white (usually charcoal medium,) of statuary objects, as plastic heads, arms, legs, etc. There is a regular routine of study, which takes in this sort of work.

Q.: Do you believe in correspondence courses?

A.: I certainly do, provided one is unable to attend school locally. In this event, such instruction is invaluable. Students as a rule are able to assimilate the lessons without trouble, and if proper time is devoted to the course, a great deal of good may be got from it. It all depends upon the student. If he means business, he'll knuckle down and get the most out of whatever is at hand. Should he be a frivolous type, the finest teacher on earth would be equally worthless, so I emphatically say, I do believe in all forms of instruction, no matter how they are delivered. Even a nut must be loosed from its shell before you can get at it, and it's the same way with knowledge. It never has, and never will come easy. You have to dig for it, but the returns are worth the effort.

AT THE CLOSE OF THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR, THE AMERICANS SOUGHT TO RECOVER THEIR FOREIGN TRADE WHICH HAD SUFFERED GREATLY DURING THE LONG STRUGGLE. ——

THE BRITISH WEST INDIES HAD BEEN THE AMERICANS' RICHEST MARKET WHEN THEY WERE SUBJECTS OF THE KING.

THE WINNING OF INDEPENDENCE, WHICH MADE THEM FOREIGNERS TO THE ENGLISH, AND GREAT BRITAIN'S EXCLUSIVE TRADE POLICY CLOSED THIS MARKET TO THEM.

THEY WERE FORCED TO SEEK OTHER OUTLETS FOR THEIR PRODUCTS.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I want to tell you how well I like "Snoopy Long-Ears," but I hope he gets to his home safely . . .

[Signed]
MARY BUCHLER, Monrovia.

Dear Sirs: I am Melba Hurley, who, a year ago last Christmas, won two beautiful Flossie Flirt dolls and a lovely midget fountain pen, which my mother is still enjoying. This time I want the 100 lollypops for one subscription.

[Signed]
MELBA HURLEY,
Los Angeles.

P.S. I hope this letter may be published for your benefit and my joy and for the increase of circulation of paper.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I like The Junior Times, and read it every Sunday. I am 7 years of age and in the first grade, A class. My mother reads "Snoopy" to us, my sister and my brother. We like it very much.

With lots of love,
[Signed]
ELIZABETH JUDD, Fontana.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I've just finished coloring Laura Brock's doll. I certainly like it. Ask Laura to please draw an Egyptian doll some time.

[Signed]
FAY BLOOM, Pasadena.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I have been reading "Snoopy Long-Ears" and "Snoopy in Do-Do-Land" and I think they are very good stories.

Your niece,
[Signed]
MARTHA WILHELM, Upland.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I am just dropping you a few lines to say that dear little Snoopy is getting more and more interesting every week.

[Signed]
MARY YARDLEY, Corona.

June Lindsay of Beverly Hills writes: "Laura Brock is certainly wonderful to turn out such lovely paper dolls. I would like to have Holland next."

Marguerite Tarelo writes: "Oh, Aunt Dolly, how can you write those wonderful stories about 'Snoopy Long-Ears' and the rest? You are really a master story writer. Your mind must be wonderfully woven with fairy cobwebs, each telling a different story!"

OCEANIC MERMAIDS

By Martha E. Davis, Hollywood

Yellow, green, gold, copper hair,
Eyes of deepest turquoise shade,
Coral ringed and ivory decked,
Glistening tails with jewels inlaid.
A haunting, mocking, rippling laugh,
A siren's song that seals one's fate.
A glimpse of gleaming walls beneath,
And men their worldly ships forsake.

AUNT CINDY'S PHILOSOPHY

By Cecil Marie Kyte, Huntington Park

Lawsy chile, I doan' mind ironin'? Ah likes to smooth the wrinkles out o' clo'es. Fresh crinkled clo'es, minds me o' people; they ain't exactly bad, just full o' notions, and sich, that causes trouble.

Life's a hot iron that takes the wrinkles out o' people's minds. So when dey's old like me, dey's pretty glad dey's lived an honest life. Dey's sorta happy like an—

What dat you ax me?

Dem at ain't? Dem sour folks? Laws, honey, I recken dey's de ones dat get scorched!

FUCHSIA

Frances Ames, Los Angeles.

I picked a spray of fuchsia,
Bright magenta blossoms
With pale pink calyxes
And long graceful stamens
Drooping shyly
From a mass of dark green leaves.
I watched it, admired it,
Loved it,—
And then it wilted.
Its flowers were crushed
And faded.
But still I kept it,
And loved it,
For it had once been beautiful.

from four to two and one-half inches.

Next moisten the center piece of the wing nose covering, and starting on the bottom, gradually work around the entering edge, cementing as you go along, until the center wing nose section is covered. In a similar manner, using the two tapering pieces of sheet balsa you have prepared, cover each side of the wing. Cover the balance of the wing with Japanese imperial tissue, doing first the center section and then the two outside wing sections. Lastly, cover the wing tips and give the entire wing two coatings of "dope."

THE LONGERONS

Throughout the model, Gilbert Westphal shows a rare skill in obtaining maximum strength consistent with light weight. He has very cleverly designed the longerons to taper in weight and strength from the point where they join the wing to where the tail surfaces fasten. The longerons are of "I" beam section and exceedingly strong.

The following pieces of wood are needed for the longerons:

Two pieces of balsa 1-8 inch thick, 5-8 inch wide and 18 inches long.

Four pieces of balsa 1-8x1-4x18 inches.

Taper the 1-8x5-8x18-inch balsa stocks to 1-4-inch width at one end; mark center position of the longerons. Glue the centers of the and the result is an I section. Dimensions. Now account the 1-8x1-4- ply, isn't it?

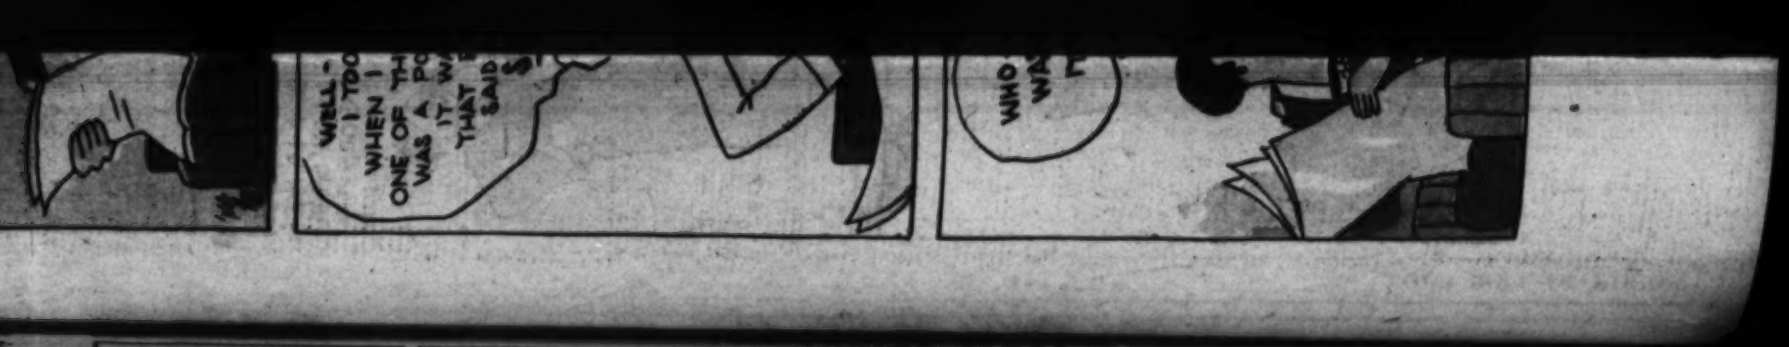
LOS ANGELES TIMES PLAYGROUND AIRCRAFT LEAGUE



"NIGHT HOWLS"

By Betty Goldie, Age 16 years, Long Beach, Woodrow Wilson High School

Roger Daniels always slept with a revolver under his pillow. True, he had no earthly reason to suspect that a burglar would even attempt to rob his house, yet he took the safe side. It was just like him—always prepared.

On this particular night, he had a strange premonition, and cleaned his revolver for the second time that day—he even examined it thoroughly before laying it under his pillow. He felt nervous, partly because he had been reading an exciting murder mystery story, and partly because it was cold (so he thought.) He cursed himself for reading so late at night, and also laid a curse upon the unsuspecting author of the book.

"There ought to be a law against such stuff!" was his comment. Nevertheless he soon climbed into bed and before he knew it, he was fast asleep, with visions of burglars and crooks in his mind, together with the heroic chivalry of the hero of the mystery story. With his mind thus engaged, it was only natural that he should awaken shruptly and with a fast-beating heart, when he heard the sharp, piercing scream of a woman!

He leaped out of bed in a second, and revolver in hand, tore like mad down the stairs. Partly falling and partly rolling he finally reached the bottom, sore and bruised. But such minor injuries did not daunt him—he opened the front door and ran outside and then in the direction of Lydia Carson's house, from whence the scream had come. Lydia Carson was a young widow and her house was almost right next door to Daniels' with the exception of a vacant lot filled with wires, weeds and other sharp plants over which Daniels ran furiously. It must be mentioned, also, that in his haste he failed to don either slippers or dressing gown and as a result he was cold and his feet sore and torn. Nevertheless, with his revolver grasped firmly in his right hand he reached the widow's door and pounded for admission.

Lydia Carson was not of a naturally timid nature. On the contrary, she was very brave. But that night she was awakened from her sleep by a faint noise downstairs. It was the soft pit pat of footsteps! Pit-pat they seemed to get closer and closer. She sat up in bed terror-stricken—her nerves taut and her heart beating wildly. Her courage was slowly ebbing and a cold sweat broke out on her brow. Then she heard a loud crash, and she fancied she heard mutterings. Her imagination running off with her she uttered a piercing scream which was followed downstairs by a rush and a scramble. She jumped out of bed and ran downstairs—anywhere to escape from the prowler! As she headed for the front door she heard an unearthly pounding from outside.

"Let me in! It is I, Roger Daniels! What has happened?"

Lydia opened the door with trembling hands.

"Oh, Mr. Daniels! Come quick—there's a burglar in here. A burglar! I hear him in the kitchen—oh, be careful. These criminals are desperate—"

Daniels with one bound was in the kitchen. He gallantly faced death when he whisked on the lights and wielded his revolver.

"One move and you're dead!" he called loudly. Too loudly, in fact, for his echo came back with astounding mockery. Where was the fiend? He scrutinised the room carefully. He could detect no one. Then Lydia made a timid entrance.

"Did you get him?" was her first question.

"Come in—I can't seem to be able to—"

"Well, don't shoot, for heavens' sakes!" and she was at his side. Then she looked around. All was still and the silence was terrible. The fiend had escaped.

"What shall we do? It's too late for the police." Then her eyes rested on the floor. A great jar of preserves was broken, and glass was scattered over the floor.

"That's what caused the crash—that clumsy burglar tipped the preserves over—"

"And there is the burglar," grinned Daniels, as a great Persian cat stalked into sight, its face smeared with preserves, and a walk none too steady.

"Oh Kadja! It was you—what a relief!" The widow sighed and picked the animal up, and stroked his fur, while she whispered baby words into its ears.

Roger Daniels sniffed openly, then looked down at himself. Horror of horrors! He was in his night shirt! His feet were bare, and his hair like a nest on his head. Of all things—young Mrs. Carson must not see him in such a plight.

Then she seemed to sense something was wrong. She looked at him and saw immediately. "Thank you so much for coming, Mr. Daniels," she remarked. "Even if it was a false alarm, I'm sure I can never repay you for it if it had been real . . ."

"Oh, it's nothing at all, Mrs. Carson, nothing at all," he replied, as if he were used to this sort of thing. "But, I really—must be going."

Lydia Carson made no attempt to detain him, in fact she stayed in the kitchen until after he was gone. Then, with a sigh of relief she ran to the window to see if all were well. But what a sight greeted her eyes. The neighbors had been awakened by her screaming, but had hastened to get dressed before making their appearance. They were lined up beneath the window anxious to see the criminal. Instead they saw a sorry figure in a flannel nightshirt with bleeding feet and touseled hair, speed by into the dark night. Roger Daniels had made his exit!

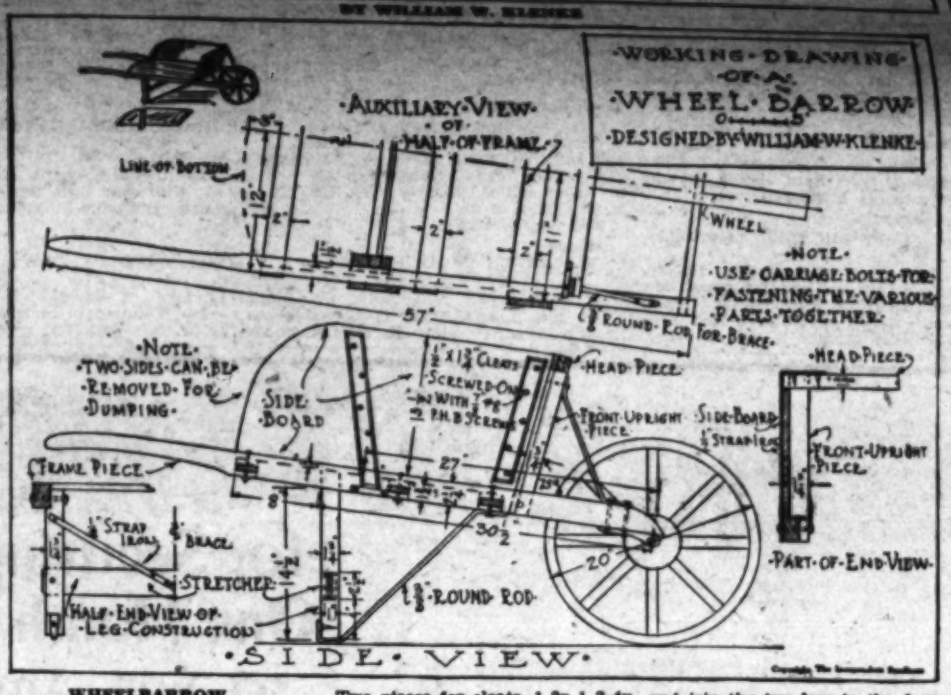
MORAL

By Jane E. Hall, Manhattan Beach

It was a flower;
Some kind of a tiny, nondescript blossom,
Crushed on the schoolroom floor . . .
Picked by childish hands,
Admired for a moment—and thrown away,
The color that had made it worth the plucking
Staining dirty wood
A moistened brown.
Right there, in the shabby little schoolroom,
Was a lesson in life,
But teacher and pupils
Toiled over digits . . .
And spelling . . .

"THINGS EASY TO MAKE"

BY WILLIAM W. KLENKE



WHEELBARROW

If you live in the suburbs, boys, or go to the country for your summer vacation, whether to a boys' camp or with the family, you will find a wheelbarrow around the place, a very handy thing to have. Why not make your own? The job is not at all difficult and it's a good pastime. You will be surprised at how many uses you will find for it.

You can buy the wheel from any local hardware dealer. Use a good strong wood for the framework, such as hickory, oak, maple, birch, etc., for the box part any scrap material will do. You will require the following pieces of wood:

Two pieces for the sides of frame, 1 1-2x 2 1-2x57in.

Three pieces for frame, 1 3-4x2x 24 1-2in.

Two pieces for front upright piece, 1 3-4x1 3-4x16in.

One piece for headpiece, 1 3-8x 1 3-4x21in.

Two pieces for legs, 1 3-4x1 3-4x 16 1-2 in.

One piece for stretcher, 1x2 1-2x 23in.

Two pieces for sides, 5-8x13 1-2x 27in.

Bottom pieces for 1-2x22x31in.

Two pieces for cleats, 1-2x 1 3-4x 12 1-2in.

Two pieces for cleats, 1-2x1 3-4x 15 1-2in.

One wheel, 20 inches in diameter.

Two pieces of 3-8in. round rod, 25 inches long.

Two pieces of 3-8in. round rod 16 inches long.

Two pieces of 1-2in. strap iron, 14 inches long.

Two pieces of 1-2in. strap iron, 19 inches long.

Step No. 1. The stock. Cut out the various pieces to the sizes indicated on the drawing. Possibly your local carpenter shop or mill can furnish you with these pieces, cut to the correct thickness and width.

Step 2. The joints. The framework is put together with mortise and tenon joints pinned. Lay out the different joints. Now bore holes and chisel out the mortises. Fit the tenon to these mortises. Remember to cut the shoulders on an angle where shown.

Step 3. Assembly. Make a trial fitting. Use casein glue, (waterproof glue) and join the entire frame together. Glue the wooden pins in place.

Step No. 4. Box part. Fasten the two upright pieces in place and join the two legs to the framework. Now make the headpiece and the two sides. Nail the bottom boards to the frame. The sides are made so that they can be removed. The cleats are screwed to the sides.

Step No. 5. Metal work. Bend your strap iron and rods to the proper shape. Drill holes for the screws. Fasten these various metal braces in place with screws and bolts.

Step No. 6. Finish. The wheelbarrow should be painted with three coats of a good oil paint. Let's paint the body part a bottle green and the wheel a brilliant red. Buy a good ready-mixed paint or prepare your own. The prime coat should consist of a white lead paint or lead and zinc paint, mixed with raw linseed oil and one-third turpentine, with sufficient dryer. When the paint is dry, putty all nail holes and defects with white lead putty. Apply a second coat of paint, which should contain more oil and less turpentine. When dry and hard (allow a week or ten days for this,) give the wheelbarrow the final coat being careful to brush out the paint and thus avoid runners.

STRAWBERRY CRUMB PIE

By Marion Fowler, Somerton, Ariz.

One and one-half cupfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, one-half cupful shortening, about one-half cupful of cold water, two cupfuls fresh strawberries, one cupful sugar, one-half cupful fine cracker crumbs, two tablespoonfuls butter. Sift the flour, measure and add the salt, add shortening, and chop it into the flour until reduced to small lumps, then slowly stir in cold water until a stiff dough. Roll out on floured board, and line a pie tin. Roll out remaining dough into a strip nine or ten inches long, and cut into narrow strips. Mix the sugar well with the fine sifted crumbs and spread half the mixture in the pastry lined pan; spread over this one cupful of the berries, cover with remaining sugar mixture—dot with the butter, cover with remaining berries, then place the strips of dough to form a latticed top, and bake in a quick oven until the crust is golden brown. If berries in center of pie are not soft, bake a little longer in a moderate oven.

JUNGLE JOTTINGS

By Vernon Miller, Vancouver, B. C.

If you want to make an elephant really angry, give it a chew of tobacco. When an elephant tastes tobacco it goes on the rampage and becomes your enemy for life!

In Alaska there is a tame deer which loves tobacco. This deer noses into pockets and devours any cigarettes it can find there.

You have to keep a close watch on your tobacco when this deer is around!

Very few people know what remarkable teeth an elephant has. It has twenty-four back teeth, six on each side of the top and lower jaws. They are very deeply ridged and made up of enamel, ivory and cement. The curious thing about them is that the animal never uses more than one tooth on each side of its jaw at once; as these wear away, two other teeth come forward to take their place, and so on until the whole twenty-four are used, but this happens so slowly that the whole twenty-four teeth last all its life.

There is an animal that carries a parachute. It is the flying lemur of Malaya.

The lemur has loose skin along the sides of the body. The animal jumps from a high tree and, spreading its limbs, it opens out the loose skin which acts as a parachute.

By means of this natural chute he can descend 210 feet through the air without injury to itself.

SUCCESS

By Carl Kondo, Los Angeles

Bill and I were walking along down the street.
Across the street another man
Walked along in our Direction.
"You see that man?" Bill remarked, to me,
"He is a successful man; he owes no money,
He has some in the bank.
He is not rich, as riches go,
But he is successful."
"How?" I asked.
"He has taken care of his family,
Saved money,
And has occasionally helped his neighbor,
Therefore he is successful.
"True," I replied.
And we continued down the street,
Walking.
What do you think?

OUR ROLL OF HONOR

think you want to try, send them on, also if the subject is of interest to a great many people. We will be glad to hear from you.

Margaret Bunn: "The Freak" deserves a lot of praise. Deep thought is in these few lines, but surely the word, "freak," jars on your ears when discussing such a subject. Tulips are always pretty, majestic, even though a little stiff. Why not revamp this? "Desert Dawn" has a lot of beauty in it; I like your subject, and the brief, forceful way you handle it, but again, your meter is lacking. Watch it, Margaret; we are proud of you and want to see you a topnotcher.

Ruth Lindsey: "For Mother's Day" is lacking in true poetical rhythm. Watch this, then let's have more material. Your ideas are certainly "A-1."

Alice George: "A Mystery" smacks strongly of an amateur, merely because you have not given time to your work. If you had, you would have caught a certain stiffness that is not usually found in your contributions. We are proud of you, Alice, so keep trying.

Margaret Hildebrandt: "The Reward," while having many good points, is told in such a spiritless way, it lacks appeal. Put ginger in your plots, and styles. Colorless manuscripts are a flunk, so use plenty of paprika in your next story.

Helen Ange: "Change of Time" sounds like a textbook. We can only print red-blooded material. Our magazine boasts zip or nothing, so, if you are on our staff, watch your step. Your style is good, descriptive work O.K. Just watch your subjects.

Ed Bailey: "Mother's Day" is pleasingly forceful, but lacks reading appeal, due to the fact that it is really a character story, and yet you have handled it in in a few brief words. This is criminal in the writing game. It can't be done. Character stories are generally padded, certainly they are rounded out with great care. You're a great writer, Ed; you have the desire and a smashing good start when it comes to style, but you need to learn tricks of the trade. You are still weak on plots. Watch this, and you'll knock over the big stuff.

Ruth E. Jenkins: "A Miracle" is novel, and has a good swing, all but the last three lines. They are sadly out of kilter, so give more time to your work, and you'll have more points.

Muriel Thomson: Your group of three poems, "To Be Something," "The Sweet Voice," "The Spanish Class," all have a great deal of merit, but the meter needs watching. You certainly have the ability to write, and should make good in this line, just give more time to your work. Less work falling in the "A" class brings three times as many points. Let's hear from you again.

Gene Thompson: Your solution of "The Cracked Mirror" was ruled out on account of its length. It was beautifully handled, but would have taken up one third of the Junior, so we couldn't print it. Sorry.

Aaron Klein: "Bravery's Reward" is a trifle goody-goody, although it really does pack a wallop in many other ways. The plot is well handled—and your style has improved, so stay with it, Aaron; you'll be a full-fledged newspaper man some of these days.

Evangeline Marlowe: "What to Remember" boasts a serious beautiful thought, but your rhythm is labored. Why not try blank verse? I can sympathize as my own poetry is hopelessly lame. "The Song" has the same fault, and "Decided for Yourself," although the theme is really lovely, becomes lost through inadequate wording. Just half tell the story. "Parting" is surely beautiful, has your usual depth of thought, a very stirring poem, but again the meter bars it from our pages. Watch this, precious old trouper; keep trying us, until you succeed.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN

The charm of the little town villages of Garmisch-Partenkirchen in the Bavarian Alps is something never to be forgotten. The high mountain air is scented with the odor of pines mingled with that of sweet hay, for the peasants reap three crops there every year. Towering above the houses stands Zugspitze, Germany's highest mountain, to which come hundreds of climbers—mostly Bavarians, but many from all parts of Germany. In spite of the quiet remoteness of this spot it is only an hour and a half by electric train from Munich. Several Americans have found it impossible to leave, and have established themselves in beautiful castle homes there.
